The main auditorium is to be provided with a large stage, 36 feet by 88 feet in the clear. There will be seven entrances to the main foyer of the building.

Minor features include a plaza in front of the building, committee rooms, dressing rooms, a projecting room for motion pictures and all the dependencies of the stage.

PRESERVING INHERITANCE

We find Spanish influences in our law, in our architecture, in our vocabulary, in the very atmosphere of our life. It is a possession we should prize; we should make more of it. The monuments which go to make permanent and remind us of this Spanish influence should be preserved, and it is with pleasure that announcement is made that at last there is being made a concerted attempt to preserve a monument of the every-day life of the Spanish Pioneer in California.

The Southwest Museum, at Los Angeles, has secured a building known as Casa Adobe, built after the plan of a Spanish hacienda. It is the hope of the sponsors of this undertaking to furnish Casa Adobe exactly as a Spanish home was furnished in the golden age of California. Already, members of old Spanish families in California have donated entire furnishings for selected rooms; furnishings which have been handed down to them by their forbears, the Spanish dons who once owned the great ranchos of California. It is not enough alone to have the actual furnishings, the interest of the people of the southwest should be aroused to preserve our Spanish inheritances, represented in the Casa Adobe.

On the evening of April 6th, a benefit, consisting of a varied program representative of the days of the don in California, will be held at the Philharmonic Auditorium. The public at large will be welcomed, to make direct contact with the Spanish inheritance of California, and to lend assistance to preserve forever some of the treasured remains of the past. Visitors from sister states will be particularly welcome, to share in the festivities and to be introduced to at least one small part of California's Spanish inheritance.

Native Daughters of the Golden West

FUNDS APPEAL WHICH DESERVES PROMPT AND GENEROUS RESPONSE.

AT THE PLACERVILLE SESSION LAST June, the Grand Parlor of the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West set aside the sum of $500 as the nucleus of a fund with which to purchase, in Humboldt County, a grove of redwoods bordering the great Memorial Redwood Highway, extending from Sausalito, Marin County, on the south to the Oregon line on the north, the redwoods to be dedicated as a memorial to the Pioneers of California. To raise the required funds, the following committee was appointed by Grand President Sue J. Irwin: Past Grand Presidents Anna L. Monroe of Ferndale (chairman), Dr. Mariana Bertola of San Francisco, Emma Gruber-Foley of San Anselmo, Dr. Victory A. Derrick of Oakland, Carrie Roesch-Durham of Stockton, Grace S. Stoermer of Los Angeles and Bertha A. Briggs of Hollister; Hattie E. Roberts of Ferndale, Alexina Grissel of Nevada City, May McBeth of Eureka.

In an appeal to the Subordinate Parlors for funds, the committee says: "The purpose of this action of the Grand Parlor was two-fold—firstly, to create a lasting memorial to the worthy founders of our state, and secondly, to preserve for all time some of these oldest landmarks in the world—each an important feature of the work for which the Order was founded. From a point of sentiment and duty, we, too, are obligated to assist in preserving these redwoods as landmarks, for they are rapidly being felled for commercial purposes, the present rate of cutting amounting to 10,000 acres per year."

This appeal should have a generous and prompt response from every Parlor as well as from every individual Native Daughter, for, as the committee says, "What could be a more fitting memorial for our beloved fathers and mothers than a cathedral of living, inspiring redwoods, and, because of its Creator, how much more beautiful and impressive than any memorial made by man!" And it would not be out of place for Native Sons, too, to contribute their mite.

Send all contributions to Hattie E. Roberts, Ferndale, Humboldt County, California. "Give 'as has been given unto you,' and receive the blessing of generations to follow and the gratitude of all California."—C.M.H.

OUR CALIFORNIA

(Dedicated to Santa Cruz Parlor No. 26 N.D.G.W.)

(L. ALICE HALSEY.)

Dear Native Daughters of the great Golden West,
Where is the land more bountifully blest?
More work of the hand of the Great Divine
Than is shown in this wondrous state, yours and mine?

Oh, glorious path that the padres have trod,
Seeking through thickets to blaze trails for God!
El Camino Real, the great king's highway.—
May we tread it worthily, reverently, today.

Then followed the days,—sweet story oft told,—
Of our Pioneer ancestors searching for gold;
Some found the coveted, glittering ore,
While others, through seeking, discovered far more.

They found a new home, and established a state,
California the golden, California the great;
With her flag unsullied, untarnished her fame,
We are proud of her record, we cherish her name.

Up, Native Daughters of the dear Golden West,
Exalt our loved state, meet her every test.
The Sierras' fine challenge, most pure and most high,
With character can we match it, you and I?

Her heritage rich from the past we all claim,
Build well for the future on her honored name.
California, sweet gift of God's dear love divine,
California, dear homeland, your land and mine.

Cheer for the End of Bad Day.

Santa Barbara—A friend that seeks us out in difficulties that are obvious, comes in a spirit of comradeship to face the facts as they are and takes a hand in unsnarling the tangle in a practical way, that friend should be "shackled to us with bands of steel." They don't happen often in a lifetime. But there is one in San Jose—a group, in fact. A special delivery letter came to Miss Anna McCaughey, district deputy grand president of Reina del Mar 126, just as this issue of The Grizzly Bear was going to press.

It was a laconic letter, from San Jose 81, saying: "Inclosed you will find check for two hundred and eighty dollars and fifteen cents to be applied to the restoration of Santa Barbara Mission. The Parlor raised it at an entertainment, in the belief that Reina del Mar, after having been through an earthquake, with the personal and community losses entailed, could put itself in position of making good in behalf of the Native Daughters of the Golden West." And with warm assurance of friendship, the letter ended.

But it left a trail of good feeling that will forever bind San Jose closer to Reina del Mar. "Had the sum raised been one dollar, and sent with such sympathetic understanding," said Miss McCaughey, "our appreciation for the spirit that prompted it would have been as great. And it came at the end of a bad day, too," she added. "But things took on a different hue after that little note of Mrs. Mary Frances Mitchell, chairman of the mission benefit committee and prominent member of San Jose Parlor, had registered."

Thirty-eighth Anniversary.

Santa Cruz—The thirty-eighth institution anniversary of Santa Cruz 26 was celebrated with a dinner and the initiation of eighteen candidates March 15. The dinner was in charge of the following committee: Mms. Pearl Reid, Jessie Gourdier, Marjorie Brunjes, Verel Van Gorder, Beryl Kroenlein and Miss Ruth Rice.

The banquet-hall was decorated with huckleberry and shamrock, and the tables were most attractive in decorations of smilax, baskets of marigolds and burning candles. At each plate were tiny baskets of green and white mints and cleverly-folded paper napkins decorated with shamrocks. Speakers of the evening included Past Grand President Stella Finkeldey, President Ysabel Stack, D.D.G.P. June Lindsay.

"Midnight Larks" Delight.

Oroville—Grand President Sue J. Irwin officially visited Gold of Ophir 190 and Annie K. Bidwell 168 (Chico) in joint session March 6. She was accompanied by Past Grand President Ema Gett, Grand Marshal Louise Heilbron, Grand Inside Sentinel Lillie Tilden of Sacramento, Past Grand President Addie Mosher, Grand Trustee Sallie Thaler of Oakland, Grand Trustee Esther Sullivan of Marysville. With Mattie R. Lund presiding, two candidates were initiated by a mixed team from the two Parlors. The meeting was a great source of inspiration to all. Grand President Irwin complimented the Parlors and gave an interesting and inspiring talk.

Suddenly the lights went out, and at the conclusion of the old song "Hear Dem Bells," a "troop of discordant singers and dancers from the South" were disclosed to view. The "Midnight Larks" were introduced by Aunt Cuspidora (Lila Montoux Marcus): Static Iodoform (Bernice Renfrow), Miss Hysteria Flapjack (Thelma Huffman), Insecticide Rhubarb (Madeline Eckart), Miss Glorious Fizz (Mary Slissman), Acidosis Gherkin (Hazel Stover), Asafedity Clutch (Della Helphenstine), Mrs. Musterole Plumage (Georgia Nystrom), Jazzy Jinx (Fern Damon), Miss Lettice Lickerfoot (Gladys Cress), Captain Delirium Tremens (Florence Boyle) and Miss Magnolia Goo (Hazel Scott), pianist. They delighted with old-time melodies, and nearly caused a roof-raising by their up-to-date songs, dances, jokes, etc. Static Iodoform, the "endman," brought a flood of tears by "his" rendition of "Peepin' Thro' de Knothole in Grandpa's Wooden Leg," and Miss Glorious Fizz and Jazzy Jinx were acclaimed wonders of the day following a "lil anaesthetic" dancing, commonly called the Charleston. The entire company was featured in a cake-walk, led by Captain Delirium Tremens, and at its conclusion an immense cake was placed at the feet of Grand President Irwin. Removal of the top revealed an elaborate pillow, the handiwork of Mrs. Ruth Brown, Gold of Ophir, gift to Miss Irwin. A remembrance was also presented her by Mrs. Stella Forcum in Anne K. Bidwell's behalf.

The banquet room, which had been transformed into a perfect fairyland, was then invaded and an elaborate feast was enjoyed. The committees in charge for the evening were: Reception—Mattie R. Lund, Alta Baldwin, Florence Boyle. Decorations—Fern Damon, Cornelia Lott. Banquet—Irene Lund, Elice LaVoy, Ruth Brown, Hattie McCoy, Lila Marcus, Mmes. Levulett and Hartman. The entertainment was arranged by Mrs. Alta Hengy.

Monument Design Selected.

Alturas—The committee of Alturas 159 in charge of the Modoc War monument to be erected on the battlefield in the Modoc Lava Beds has selected the model designed by Paul J. Fair of the United States Forest Service, San Francisco. Surmounting a 4½-foot base of lava rocks is the bronze figure of a charging grizzly bear, from a wound in whose shoulder protrudes an Indian arrow. This figure symbolizes California, attacked by the Indians, roused to fighting strength to quell its foes.

On the face of the lava base will be a bronze plaque with simple lettering dedicating the monument to the memory of General Edward R. S. Canby, U.S.A., and others whose lives were sacrificed on this battlegound. The dedication and unveiling of this monument will take place early in June.

Officers and members of the Parlor attended the funeral March 16 of J. W. Pope, Modoc County Pioneer and father of Bertie Auble, a member of the Parlor. At its April meeting Alturas will initiate a class of thirteen candidates.

San Luis Obispo County Visited.

San Luis Obispo—Grand President Sue J. Irwin officially visited El Pinal 94 (Cambria) February 20 and delivered a most interesting and instructive address. Twelve members from San Luisita 108 and D.D.G.P. Margaret Palmer accompanied the Grand President. A most delicious chicken-pie luncheon was served before the meeting and a very happy day was spent.

The evening of the same day San Luisita was happy to receive an official visit from Grand President Irwin. Her address was most inspiring and instructive, and much appreciated. In behalf of the Parlor, President Eleanor Maino presented the Grand President with a little token in memory of her visit. At the close of the meeting a tamale supper was served. The decorations were in keeping with Washington's birthday. The hour was late when "good-night" was in order.

February 27 was San Luisita's third annual "Poppy Sale Day," and skillfully made golden poppies were sold by the score for the benefit of the homeless children.

Memorable Occasion.

Pittsburg—February 24 was a memorable night for the Native Sons and Native Daughters of this city. Judge Fletcher A. Cutler, Grand President N.S.G.W., headed a large district meeting at which were assembled many grand officers of both Orders, and members and friends of Parlors at Antioch, Byron, Crockett, Concord, Martinez, San Francisco and Richmond. Sixteen candidates were initiated.

A delicious cafeteria supper was served by a committee composed of President Vera Laederich of Stirling 146 (chairman), Margaret Buckley, Margaret Abrams, Warren Abrams, Henry Nuttman, Grace Veregge, Hanna McVay, Joe Buffo. Following the ceremonies and speeches there was a social dance.

Past Grand Honored.

Folsom—Fern 123 observed Arbor Day by presenting to the Folsom Union high-school March 8 a redwood tree, which was named "Bertola," in honor of Past Grand President Dr. Mariana Bertola of San Francisco. President Ruby Bunker made the presentation address.

Members Inspired.

Sutter—Marysville 162, Camp Far West 218 and South Butte 226 met in joint session March 5 to receive an official visit from Grand President Sue J. Irwin, who inspired the members with her fine address and instructive suggestions.

Other grand officers in attendance who also gave interesting talks were Past Grand Presidents Ema Gett, who instituted Marysville Parlor in 1908, and Addie Mosher, Grand Marshal Louis Heilbron, Grand Trustees Sallie Thaler and Esther R. Sullivan, D.D.G.P. Ethel Brock,

Native Sons of the Golden West

PROPOSED BENEFITS TAX GETS UNFAVORABLE RECOMMENDATION.

PURSUANT TO THE CALL OF GRAND President Fletcher A. Cutler, the Board of Grand Officers met in Native Sons' Building, San Francisco, February 27. In addition to the Grand President, the following were in attendance: Grand First Vice-president Hilliard E. Welch, Grand Second Vice-president Charles A. Thompson, Grand Third Vice-president James A. Wilson, Grand Secretary John T. Regan, Grand Trustees Charles L. Dodge, Richard M. Hamb, John T. Newell, Frank I. Gonzalez, John T. Skelton, John S. Ramsay, Alfred H. McKnew.

Grand President Cutler was authorized to cooperate in a movement under way to restore Santa Barbara Mission.

Resolution 42 (tax for benefits), introduced at the San Bernardino Grand Parlor last year and referred to the Board of Grand Officers, was, after a thorough discussion, ordered returned to the Grand Parlor at Santa Rosa in May with an adverse recommendation.

A charter was ordered issued to Santa Ana Parlor No. 265, to be instituted March 27 at Santa Ana, Orange County. Deputy Grand President Albert V. Mayrhofer is responsible for the new parlor.

The recently-instituted Glendale Parlor No. 264, having started with more than fifty members, was allowed a credit of $150.

Cabrillo Parlor No. 114 (Ventura) was ordered reimbursed to the extent of $100 for plaques at public-school buildings recently dedicated in Ventura County.

A motion prevailed, "That it be the sense of this board that hereafter all plaques for dedication be purchased by the Grand President and Grand Secretary, or with their consent."

A motion prevailed, that the Subordinate Parlors winning the membership trophy banners this year be allowed to keep them. Also, that the time for computing the gains be extended to April 30.

The purchase of the badge of the late Past Grand President John T. Greany was approved, and it was ordered placed in a receptacle similar to that which now holds the badge of the late Past Grand President Charles M. Belshaw.

It was ordered that a suitable letter be sent Arthur Brisbane, noted journalist, for his recent splendid articles on California.

Lunch Club Active.

Oakland—Tuesday of each week sees the local Native Sons' Lunch Club in active operation, with attendance steadily growing. As evidence that it is a local institution, the luncheon was supposedly abandoned one Tuesday on account of election day; however, fifteen Natives unwittingly met as usual and proceeded with the luncheon. Past Grand President W. J. Hayes recently addressed the club on a history topic. Dr. Charles Broad has discoursed on the care of the teeth. L. L. Steele spoke on traveling precautions. J. J. Cox Jr. told about spring planting. A new topic, speaker or entertainment feature is had each week under the direction of a committee from various local Parlors. The officers of the club are George Prefontaine, chairman, Richard Hamb Jr., secretary, with the following booster committee: W. Cameron, D. J. Reynolds, J. M. Barr, F. C. Merritt, J. W. McNiece, M. A. Baker.

Grand President Enthuses.

Santa Rosa—Grand President Fletcher A. Cutler paid a visit March 4 to Santa Rosa 28 and gave the members and those of Santa Rosa 217 N.D.G.W. a splendid talk on what the Native Sons are doing throughout the state. Large delegations were present from all the Sonoma County Parlors, and so enthused were they with Judge Cutler's remarks that plans were perfected for a class initiation prior to the Grand Parlor meeting here, the grand officers to exemplify the ritual.

Arrangements have been made to have Grand President Cutler again visit Santa Rosa, the first week in April. The day of his coming will be known as California day. He will address the public-schools and the Lions Club during the daytime, and in the evening will speak before a public gathering at the auditorium.

The Parlor observed its forty-second institution anniversary March 18 with a program of addresses and musical numbers, concluding with cards and dancing. Frank Berger headed the program committee. Speakers included Mrs. Marybelle Green of the Native Daughters, State Supreme Court Justice Emmet Seawell and State Senator Herbert Slater, the latter giving a brief outline of the historical significance of early events in California. Among the large number in attendance were two charter members of 28 Justice Seawell and J. T. Hutchinson.

School Dedicated.

Tracy—The new $40,000 public-school building at Banta was dedicated to truth, liberty and toleration by the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West March 1. Joseph Payne, president Tracy 186, presided over the ceremonies, which were largely attended. A varied program of musical numbers and addresses was presented, the speakers including Leonard Yarbrough, Clara Campbell, Joseph Raspo, Harry W. Bessac, superintendent San Joaquin County schools, Mrs. Edna Orr James.

The dedicatory address was delivered by Grand President Fletcher A. Cutler. On behalf of Tracy Parlor, Grand First Vice-president H liard E. Welch presented American and St (Bear) Flags to the school, and a framed pai ing, "Yosemite Falls," was presented by Pr ident Mrs. A. P. Griffin on behalf of El Pes dero 82 N.D.G.W.

Visitors Initiate Class.

San Bernardino—Arrowhead 110 had a ro ing good meeting March 3, when numerous v itors and members filled the hall. The Parlo orchestra was on hand, and added to the ev ing's pleasure. A class of candidates were i tiated by the following officers of Los Ange 45, assisted by Past Grand President William Traeger as senior past president: Sidney W kowski, Andrew Stodel, John T. Newell, Ray moine, Leslie Packard, Howard Bell, Jul Leuschner, William Kalthoff.

President Fred Grant of Arrowhead direc the good of the order, which consisted largely talks, among the speakers being Grand Trus John T. Newell, Past Grand President Traeg James P. Cronin, Mervin Cooney, Gus Alva Charles Russill, "Sid" Witkowski, President drew Stodel of 45, D.D.G.P. Ronald M. R Grand Director John Andreson Jr. was in cha of the "feed" which followed the meeting. D ing the evening Grand Trustee John T. New was unanimously endorsed by Arrowhead re-election at the Santa Rosa Grand Parlor.

The Parlor's membership campaign is gressing favorably. The big family party March 10 was a great success; Charles Fr was chairman of the arrangements commit Arrowhead is already arranging for the ann Independence Day outing at its clubhouse Crestline; "Sid" Mee says this year's affair surpass all previous efforts, and that is pron ing a whole lot.

Red-letter Event.

Ukiah—Ukiah 71 had a most enthusia meeting February 19, when Grand Presid Fletcher A. Cutler and Grand Secretary John Regan were its honored guests. A class of didates were initiated, the ritual being exem fied by a drill-team directed by D.D.G.P. L rence Waugh. C. N. Mortenson was gen chairman of the occasion, and was assisted Thomas Maguire, J. H. Zeiger, Secretary Hofman, Joe Figone, Joseph I. Wilson, Ed. Z merman, Arthur Tracy, E. H. Waugh.

In the banquet-room, decorated by the lor's troop of Boy Scouts of America, a su tuous feast was served. T. A. Carr supp musical numbers, and Grand President Cu delivered an inspiring address. "It was a letter event in the history of No. 71," decla President Richard Andrews, "and the boys the Parlor are, as a result of the etnhusi aroused by Judge Cutler, rounding up more gibles for another initiation and planning m future events that will keep the Parlor to front."

Piedmont on the Air.

Oakland—Things are booming in Piedm 120, and during the term of the present pr dent, J. J. Allen Jr., the Parlor hopes to incre its membership to 1,000. March was a b month. The 4th, Past President Judge Chu favored with a talk on the constitution, out ing the history of the country from the co tution's birth to the present time. The 1 was given over to the annual banquet, wh was largely attended; the good of the order c mittee presented a fine entertainment and ser a good spread. The 18th and 19th the Parl minstrel troupe put on a show at the Munic Auditorium; H. Webber is chairman of the m strel committee.

Piedmont's radio committee has arrange broadcast an evening's entertainment K.L.X. April 23. The feature will be sev selections by the Parlor's forty-piece band which H. Hulen is bandmaster. At the diam jubilee in San Francisco last year this aggr tion won the trophy in the band contest. Hu and his musicians were recently given a n by the Parlor and on that occasion the b master was presented with a wonderful je On the program too will be Webber's jazz chestra and special numbers by various m bers..

Educational Film.

Lodi—Lodi 18 entertained with movies and a musical program February 24. Walter Solomon was chairman of the committee in charge. A ravioli supper followed the program. The film was an educational one, showing how shoes are made. Those who contributed musical numbers included Peter Reimer, Miss Avers, Alfred Meincel, Mrs. Frank McCullum, Alfred Guzzetti. Among those in attendance was Grand First Vice-president Hilliard E. Welch, a member of No. 18.

"California and Californians."

Fort Bragg—Grand President Fletcher A. Cutler and Grand Secretary John T. Regan paid a visit to Alder Glen 200 February 20 and were entertained at supper. In the evening Judge Cutler delivered an eloquent address to the general public, his subject being "California and Californians."

The Parlor is now sponsoring a troop of Boy Scouts of America. Carl Gerhardy is the scoutmaster. The troop observed Arbor Day, March 7, with an all-day hike.

Co-operation Beneficial.

Palo Alto—Members of Palo Alto 216 were the guests March 15 of Palo Alto 229 N.D.G.W. at a "feed." Speeches were in order, and there were ready responses from the presidents of the various visiting Parlors.

The splendid spirit of co-operation between the co-Parlors is a wonderful thing and should be encouraged, and the visiting between Parlors should also be encouraged for it brings out the good of the order to the betterment of all concerned.

Visit a Grand Success.

Oakland—Brooklyn 151 March 16 acted as host to Berkeley 210. Past President J. Ashton Flinn led a delegation of twenty-five Berkleyites to East Oakland, where they entered the meeting and were invited by President George Duane to actively participate in all matters before the Parlor. The visitors responded with vigor and lent a lively discussion to the order of business, after which a challenge was issued and accepted for a game of baseball between the Berkeley and Brooklyn teams.

Good of the order was spent in the banquet hall during the consumption of hot meat pies. Frank C. Merritt presided, with Frank Harding acting as chef. After hearing remarks from visitors and hosts, entertainment was furnished by the Brooklyn Parlor Serenaders. The Berkeley boys voted the visit a grand success and insisted that Brooklyn visit Berkeley next month, which will be done on a date to be selected.

New Parlor in Prospect.

Stockton—Announcement has been made that a new parlor, with a large charter membership, will soon be instituted here. Its sponsor is Dr. A. A. Cavagnaro, who for some time has been giving dances and entertainments throughout the Mother Lode for the purpose of raising funds with which to erect at Hornitos, Mariposa County, a monument to the memory of the Pioneers.

Big Crowd at Dedication.

San Jose—In the presence of about 1,500 people the Theodore Roosevelt junior high-school was dedicated March 27 by the grand officers. An excellent program of speaking and music was rendered, participated in by the grand officers, city and county officials, school faculty and children.

The principal speakers were Grand President Fletcher A. Cutler, Santa Clara County Superintendent of Schools J. E. Hancock, San Jose Superintendent of Schools W. L. Bachrodt and Grand Second Vice-president Charles A. Thompson. The latter, on behalf of San Jose 22 and Observatory 177, presented American and State (Bear) Flags to the school.

The dedicatory ceremonies were conducted by Grand President Cutler, Grand First Vice-president Hilliard E. Welch, Grand Second Vice-

N. D. G. W. NEWS

D.D.G.P. Maude Hutchinson. At the banquet, presentations were made to Grand President Irwin and others.

Mere Man Gets Hope-chest.

Byron—March 3 Donner 193 had a card party and disposed of its annual hope-chest, it being awarded to Frank Bluett of Stockton. Under the able direction of Mary Williams the affair was a success in all ways.

Lunch Under Spreading Oaks.

Placerville—Marguerite 12 initiated two candidates February 17 and enjoyed delicious refreshments at the close of the ceremonies. Arbor Day, March 7, was observed with a tree planting at the home of Mrs. Josephine Perry, a member of the Parlor. Appropriate exercises were presented under the supervision of Mrs. Agnes Schiff. The day being a beautiful one the hostess served a bounteous luncheon under the spreading branches of large oak trees which adorn her homeplace.

a sociable at which the guests were eligibles and their friends. A program was presented and cards were played.

April 7 the Parlor will celebrate its second institution anniversary with a dance. A large birthday cake, decorated with two candles and an oil derrick, will be cut and served. Grand President Sue J. Irwin will officially visit the Parlor April 24.

Sixteenth Anniversary.

Daly City—The sixteenth institution anniversary of El Carmelo 181 was celebrated at a dinner-dance at which all had a wonderful time. Mrs. Rose Sweeney was chairman of the arrangements committee.

Honored guests of the occasion were Grand Trustee Josephine Johnson, D.D.G.P. Rena Mathias, President Margaret McDonald and the charter officers, including Margaret Steele, the charter president. The Parlor was congratulated on its wonderful growth and prosperity.

HISTORIC TREES FOR STATE.

State Forester M. B. Pratt says that cypresses from the Garden of Gethsemane are rooting in the state nursery at Davis, Yolo County, and will soon be ready for setting out in various sections of California.

The trees are being grown from seeds. If the experiment proves successful, says Pratt, seeds from other historical spots will be secured by the state.

HUSBAND FORMER N.D. OFFICIAL DEAD.

Jackson (Amador County)—Bernard Cormick O'Neill, husband of Mrs. Henrietta O'Neill, former Grand Trustee N.D.G.W., died March 12. He was a native of Calaveras County, aged 64.

WIFE PROMINENT N.S. MURDERED.

Stockton (San Joaquin County)—Mrs. George McNoble, wife of George F. McNoble, prominently identified with Stockton Parlor No. 7 N.S.G.W. and member of the Grand Parlor Board of Appeals, was killed March 18 by an infuriated madman.

In Memoriam

EMMA MILLER COUGHLIN.

Whereas, The Almighty in His infinite wisdom, has deemed it fit to call to her heavenly home our beloved sister, Emma Miller Coughlin thus taking from us one of our most loyal members, a faithful and true friend, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the officers and members of Marysville Parlor No. 162 N.D.G.W. do hereby extend our sincerest love and deepest sympathy to the family of our departed sister in this hour of grief and bereavement and be it further resolved that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, that a copy be placed in the records of Marysville Parlor No. 162 N.D.G.W. and that a copy be sent to The Grizzly Bear.

INA M. WELLS
AGNES W. MEADE,
GERTRUDE F. CABLE,
Committee.

Marysville, March 15, 1926.

ALICE CAROL ARENTZ.

Whereas, In view of the loss we have sustained by the decease of our friend and sister Alice Carol Arentz, and of the still greater loss sustained by those who were nearer and dearer to her therefore be it

Resolved, That it is but a just tribute to the memory of our departed sister to say that regretting her removal from our midst we mourn for one who was in every way worthy of our respect and esteem, and our Order has lost a loyal Native Daughter of the Golden West; therefore, be it resolved that a copy of these resolutions be entered in the minutes and a copy be sent to her husband and family, and to The Grizzly Bear magazine.

Respectfully submitted
MIRIAM M. DERMOTT,
ETHEL SCHMALHOLZ
AMY V. McAVOY
Committee.

A BIT O' FARMING

PREPARED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY M. H. ELLIS

AGRICULTURE BACKBONE OF CALIFORNIA

A BILLION DOLLARS IS A RECENT ESTIMATE made of the value of the agricultural products of California last year. It will be but a short time before this state leads the nation in the value of its farm products. With the continued development of irrigation projects, the more intensive cultivation of the lands, California soon will be the foremost of the agricultural states of the union. This is due to several causes. Fertile soil, long growing seasons, irrigation, advanced field and orchard practice, control of pests, co-operative marketing, and specialty crops that demand high prices are among the many reasons why California farmers are outdistancing those of other states.

California produces commercially every crop grown in the United States, with the single exception of sugarcane, and there is no doubt there are localities in the state where this could be grown. And in addition most, if not all, of such crops as raisins, celery, asparagus, almonds, walnuts, avocadoes and other products of this kind are shipped from California.

The California farmer no longer is regarded as a backwoodsman. The men who gather for farm meetings and conferences cannot be told from other businessmen in appearance and action. Agriculture now is an industry, in which businessmen are operating by business methods. Tritely, it is said that agriculture is the backbone of the nation; truthfully, it may be said to be the case in California.

SUCCESS OR FAILURE IN OWN HANDS.

There is one farmer in California who is more prosperous today than many of his neighbors—a man who never yet has been able to devise a means of making money, but one who has been quick to adopt any practice of his neighbors that has seemed worth while. He has not assumed the "show me" attitude. Rather, he has been willing to learn, and from well-planned visits and exchange of ideas has gained knowledge from his fellow-farmers he has been able to convert into cash.

Realizing that the average farmer just about "gets by," and that the man who would succeed must have methods just a little better, crops just a little larger and quality a little higher, he has watched those who have been able to get those results, has adopted their practices and made his own experiments. As a result, he has everything, practically, that is worth while in the experience of the farmers of his district. Inversely, he has watched the mistakes of himself and others, and has avoided repetitions of them on his farm.

The farmer of today, let it be said again, is a businessman, and he must be alive to take advantage of every opportunity for profit, large or small. Fortunately, he is hampered little by patents, he is aided much by the State and National Governments, and, generally speaking, success or failure is in his own hands.

APHIS A FORMIDABLE PEST.

Gardeners, whether on the backyard or commercial scale, whether growing vegetables or flowers, will find the aphis this year just as formidable a pest as it ever has been. The plant lice are a serious menace, but their control is far from impossible. Nicotine dust or spray will more than likely rid the plants of this insect that sucks their vitality.

The nicotine dust may be purchased ready to apply. The spray may be made by the following formula: 40 percent nicotine sulphate, one pint; fish or whale oil soap, five pounds; water, 100 gallons. This may be made in quantities to suit the needs of the user. But use it. Don't spend time, money and energy in getting flowers or vegetables to grow, and then submit unresistingly to the attacks of aphis.

ACTION NECESSARY.

Just what is to be done about the eradication of the citrus white fly in California seems a puzzle. The last Legislature made an appropriation for the extermination of the pest, provided the growers of Southern California would match the money thus given.

This was done, but nothing has followed. The white fly exists in Sacramento, Marysville and Yuba City, where it is not a menace; but if it should get into the citrus belt of the southern part of the state, growers fear it would be a major pest, as in Florida.

No one seems to be taking the initiative in using the money appropriated, and if it is to be used before the end of the biennium, it must be during the coming winter. In the meantime the pest is reported spreading in Sacramento County, and has made its appearance in Colusa County, which adds to the difficulties of the campaign.

NEVER TOO LATE TO PLANT GARDEN.

Don't neglect the home garden, in city or in country. Vegeatbles never are of so high and fine a quality as when fresh picked. Most vegetables reach the consumer in a somewhat wilted condition, due to no fault of anyone concerned; but when they are taken from the home garden they are fresh and more nutritious. The amateur gardener may compute his time at the end of the year and find he has made no great saving. But he has had a pleasant and healthful recreation and his family has had the best possible food.

It is never too late to plant gardens in California. The year round there are vegetables that will produce, and it is possible to step from the house any day of the year and pick from the garden fresh produce, of a quality that cannot be purchased. Don't figure too closely on mere profit and loss. Figure rather on the time saved that would have been more than likely wasted utterly, and on the satisfaction and pleasure enjoyed from the growing of the garden.

CO-OPERATIVE MARKETING GETS RESULTS.

There still is talk of legislation to aid the farmer. But wise farmers are not waiting for prosperity to be brought to them by act of Congress, they are taking their busniess matters in their own hands and solving their own problems. Ralph P. Merritt, president of the Sun Maid Raisin Company, and one of the very ablest men engaged in the co-operative marketing business, points out that by co-operation only can the farmers have equal opportunity and income in line with industrial security.

A strong co-operative marketing organization can adjust production in line with demand and can promote new markets to care for the increase from year to year. It can guarantee quality and build up business through honest a fair dealings with the buyers. It can gain t confidence of the trade, stimulate old marke add new ones and to a great degree handle t ranch problems of its producer members.

VENTURE WORTHY OF EMULATION.

Rural schools are more and more adding a ricultural courses. The Gonzales Union hig school in Monterey County is one of the pionee in this work and is often held up as a mod school. Not a building other than of wood, y ample room and splendid accommodations f the students. Schools are not ornate buildin contend the members of the school district, b consist of good teachers and interested pupi Buildings are paid for from the current tax As a result, there are no large bond issues dra ing interest, and that money is spent for teac ers.

Recently this school added another innov tion. It laid out a four weeks' course in ag culture for the farmers, who came three time week and gained much of value in informatic Termed a farmer's short course in practical fruit growing, it proved to be just that, and highly successful. Indeed, it appears that Gonzales has pioneered another agricultural educational venture that is worthy of emulation.

POULTRY HEALTH MOST IMPORTANT.

A sure barometer of the health of the poultry flock is the condition of the droppings. The poultryman who watches this barometer is in a position to know the health of his birds and to remedy any trouble. Simple looseness of the bowels, indigestion due to improper feeding, liver troubles and similar ailments are easily detected and immediate attention should be given to the proper remedies. The health of the flock is most important, if results are to be obtained. No amount of high-priced stock can produce eggs in record amounts unless they are in good condition.

GARDEN SLUG ANOTHER PEST.

Another garden pest that causes trouble and lots of it in California, is the garden slug. Oftentimes replantings are necessary, so completely do the nocturnal invasions of these pests destroy the plants in the garden. Lime will repel them, but for extermination poison is almost imperative. One pound of calcium arsenate mixed with sixteen pounds of wheat bran and enough water to make the poison stick to the bran, will be found an excellent control. Scatter the mash over the infested ground in the evening, particular care being given to trash piles or any other refuges that may harbor the animals. If the mash is finely and properly scattered, there will be no danger to chickens or birds.

PLANT TREES.

Plant trees. Whether in the country or in the city, plant trees. In the city, plant street trees. In the country, work out a plan whereby there will be plenty of shade. Trees are ornamental, furnish a most desirable and comfortable shade in the summer, add to the health, reduce the temperature, purify the air and protect against fire. There is no reason for not planting trees; there are many good ones for doing so.

HIGHEST QUALITY FRUIT THIS YEAR.

Eastern markets are to be favored this year with the highest quality of fruit California ever has shipped. Producers, packers and shippers have been closely in touch with conditions at the Eastern trade centers, and they have been quick to note the response to the standardized packs. As a result, it may be quite confidently predicted that the ranch pack will continue to lose favor and that the community packing house will increase in proportion. Experiments in maturity made during the past two or three years have taught a valuable lesson, and the products from California orchards this year will not only appear better, but will be more palatable.

BOVINE TUBERCULOSIS DISAPPEARING.

There are now eighty herds of cattle in California entirely free from tuberculosis and accredited by the Federal Government, with 2,565 more herds on the list as passing one free test. In one month 5,339 animals in 125 herds were tested and 74 reactors weeded out. The work of the elimination of bovine tuberculosis is slow, but surely, if slowly, it is being accomplished and the California of the future will know this menace only as a matter of history.

CALIFORNIA LEADS FLORIDA.

Estimates made by the United States Department of Agriculture show California to be far in the lead of Florida in the production of oranges. California now produces about two and a half times as large an orange crop as its Eastern rival, the estimate made by the government crediting Florida with 8,500,000 boxes as against 20,100,000 boxes in California. While it is true Florida leads this state in grapefruit production, California's lemon crop so far exceeds that of Florida that, as a whole, citrus production here is about double that of the State of Florida.

GRAIN IN BULK.

Another impetus is being given the movement

BOOK REVIEWS

(MARGERY BOYD.)

"THE BUSTER."

By William Patterson White; Little, Brown & Company, Publishers, Boston; Price, $2.00.

"Out West where men are men"—and shootings are served red-hot with breakfast! Charlotte Rowland, city-bred and tenderly nurtured, found the West, the men and the shooting equally distasteful. She tolerated breakfast.

However, the West was scenic; even Charlotte had to admit that, and the men were all very attentive, with the exception of Bill Coryell. Her eyes narrowed when she thought of Bill. How dared he order her about! It mattered little to Charlotte that he was young, good looking and her aunt's best friend. Hateful of her aunt to ask Bill to be their guide on the camping trip. But, she yet would show William Coryell a thing or two. Miss Charlotte had exceptionally red hair.

Fortunately, it is woman's special privilege to change her mind. Even red-haired ones do. "Out West where men are men,"—Charlotte found one man, the West and the shooting exhilarating. She tolerated breakfast.

William Patterson White specializes in Western fiction. His first book, "The Owner of the Lazy D," has been rapidly followed by eight successors, equally popular. Confidentially speaking, Bill Hart and Tom Mix ought to make good in any White screen adaptation.

"THE DOUBLE THIRTEEN."

By Anthony Wynne; J. B. Lippincott Company, Publishers, Philadelphia; Price, $2.00.

Thirteen is unlucky enough in itself. Double it, and you have a faint idea of the peril and disaster which this wicked combination wreaked upon the unwitting heads of Bob Barling and Olva Vorloff. At the risk of his own life, Dr. Eustace Hailey determined to ferret out the horrible mystery, and save his dear friend, Bob.

What unhappy circumstance connected beautiful Olva Vorloff, fiancee of the wealthy Bob Barling, with a Russian spy? What was the message contained in the figured code so cleverly wrapped within the metal points of a shoelace? Who killed Danatoff? And now, most ominous of all, what devilish fiend had so cunningly kidnaped Olva and Bob? These riddles tortured Dr. Hailey unremittingly. Following each new clue with painful intensity, the doctor at last brings to light one of the most brutal crimes in London history.

"The Double Thirteen" is a baffling story in which all the intrigues, horrors and murders are nicely doubled, with the thirteen thrown in as the black cat. Those who have read "The Sign of Evil" need no second recommendation to any story by Anthony Wynne.

"BLACK THUNDER."

By B. M. Bower, Little, Brown & Company, Publishers, Boston; Price, $2.00.

The Indians of the latter part of the nineteenth century were not commonly known for their loyable nature. The Shoshones were no exceptions. Milt Frisbee's mouth tightened grimly as he and the last dozen men of Whiskey Flat entrenched themselves in the only stronghold of the village, the one store. Stealthy brown figures flitting swiftly among the shadows boded little of good to any White man. Straight into the terrors of such a scene rode Brother Van, preacher, and his charge, Arlea Owen, happily unconscious of their peril.

"Black Thunder" is a novel in which Indians, a prodigal son, cowboys and a love complex struggle, each for supremacy. The result is a tie, in favor of all parties concerned. Skeptics may complain of a tame deal, but cowboy fiction still seems to be popular.

BRAVE CLIMBERS ASCEND FREMONT PEAK FOR FLAG RAISING.

Hollister (San Benito County). The annual flag-raising ceremonies held on Fremont Peak Sunday, March 7, attracted only a small attendance because of the heavy storm prevailing. However, forty or more brave climbers made the ascent and participated in the exercises in honor of the great pathfinder.

District Attorney G. H. Moore of Fremont Parlor No. 44 N S G W, president of the Fremont Memorial Association, gave an interesting address. Myrtle Palmtag of Copa de Oro Parlor No. 105 N.D G W. sang "I Love You, California" and "The Star Spangled Banner" as the immense American Flag was hoisted on the seventy-five foot flagpole by Arthur Nyland of the American Legion.

The bronze tablet commemorative of the first flag raising on the peak, recently dedicated by the Native Daughters and Native Sons of San Benito County, attracted much attention by its prominent position at the foot of the flagpole.

"CALIFORNIA-MADE" EXPOSITION.

An industrial exposition, under the auspices of the Manufacturers' Association of Southern California, is billed for the Shrine Auditorium, Los Angeles, April 19 to 24. It will picture the growth of the southland's industries and display the manufacturers' wares.

The exposition is designed to create new markets and to expand the present area of the manufacturers. A queen is to be selected, and she will receive gifts valued at more than $10,000.

HISTORIC TREE IN FAME HALL.

Pomona (Los Angeles County). March 19, 1837, the first White settlers arrived in the Pomona Valley. They rested beneath a liveoak now in the center of the City of Pomona.

March 19, 1926, the American Tree Association of Washington, D. C., announced that the tree, now twenty-three feet in circumference, had been listed in its hall of fame for trees with a history.

WILMINGTON HAS ARRIVED

WILMINGTON—
ITS HISTORY AND FUTURE POSSIBILITIES

C. B. Carter

(PRESIDENT CARTER MOTOR CO. INC., DIRECTOR WILMINGTON CHAMBER COMMERCE).

WILMINGTON'S PART IN THE early history of the commerce of California is perhaps not recognized by the average visitor to the harbor. Many thousands of people come here daily to transact business, to meet friends arriving on the big liners, or possibly to embark on a trip around the world themselves, but how many of them realize that Wilmington's population in 1865 exceeded that of the City of Los Angeles.

Cabrillo is credited with first discovering this port in 1542, but it was not until September 25, 1602, that Sebastian Viscaino, a Spanish explorer sent out from Mexico, first landed at the harbor to replenish his water supply. Here he found a settlement of several thousand Indians, who called their town Sungo. This intrepid adventurer traded food and sweetmeats to the Indians in exchange for hides. Thus was founded the industrial history of what is now called Wilmington.

As a result of the gold rush of 1849, an enterprising merchant of Philadelphia visualized California as a field for his wares, and in 1855 sent one of his men, who was none other than Phineas Banning, to California with a cargo of goods intended for the miners. So little was known of this coast at that time that it was thought this point was as close to the goldfields as any other known landing place. Upon his arrival here, the captain of the vessel found a letter from Philadelphia instructing him to proceed to San Francisco with his cargo, but young Banning decided to disembark and cast his lot in Southern California.

In 1855 there were but three buildings at San Pedro, and Wilmington was little more than a deserted Indian village—the Indians having been driven away during various Mexican uprisings. In place of pensions, it was the custom of Mexican governors to make huge land grants to their honorably discharged soldiers. Such a grant, embracing many thousands of acres, was made to Don Jose Dominguez, and it was part of this grant which was purchased years later by Phineas Banning and is the present site of the City of Wilmington.

INSTITUTION WITH CONFIDENCE IN WILMINGTON'S FUTURE.

Viscaino, on this voyage, named Santa Catalina Island, which he also found inhabited by Indians, and San Clemente Island after the two ships which composed his expedition. From this time until 1846 California was under Mexican control, the territory being taken in that year for the United States from Mexico by Commodore Stockton.

Wilmington was named for General Banning's birthplace, Wilmington, Delaware. About this time the strife between the North and South had become an issue. There were many Southern sympathizers in this territory and as a precautionary measure the United States Government established a military post in Wilmington. Accordingly, Drum Barracks, named for Quartermaster-General Drum, was built in 1862 and was the headquarters for the troops until 1868. This stately old barracks was built from lumber brought around Cape Horn and remains as one of the landmarks of the city. It was from here that troops were sent to quell uprisings on the Mexican border, often as far as Arizona and New Mexico, there being from 2,000 to 6,000 men here at various times.

Many prominent people in the military world have been entertained in Drum Barracks, which is now the residence of Thomas F. Keaveny, who has lived in this vicinity for more than a quarter of a century. Keaveny has made an intensive study of the early history of Southern Calirnia and has in his possession some interest- g maps made by the early Spanish explorers, o for many years were of the firm belief that of California was a huge island. It was dur- g the years that the government troops were tioned here that Wilmington's population ex- ded that of Los Angeles.

Supplies for the troops were brought around pe Horn from the east coast by boat, as this s previous to the days of the railroad. Since re was no breakwater here at that time and piers at which these boats could tie up to charge their cargoes, they were forced to an- or in deep water in the outer harbor, using rges to unload. A small wharf was con- ucted at San Pedro to which the supplies were htered, but winter storms wrecked these land- s several times. As a result, General Ban- g provided a small canal and a landing pier what is now the foot of Canal street, Wil- ngton, thus founding the Banning Company, ich made a business of unloading vessels and ich is still one of Wilmington's active indus- s.

Terminal Island was then known as Rattle- ake Island and was but a narrow, crooked ip of land, over which the waves rolled at h tide, washing sand into the main channel. ter the island's possibilities as a beach resort re recognized and the name was changed to rminal Island. It became a popular bathing ch and attracted people from the interior, o erected summer homes there, some of which w remain, though the island, as a result of dging, has been more than doubled in area. In those days the freight landed at the harbor s transported to Los Angeles and the interior prairie schooner, some of it going as far east Salt Lake City and Denver. As the import dustry grew it became apparent that better nsportation facilities were urgent, so in 1869 Wilmington and Los Angeles bonded themselves for $250,000 to build a railroad to carry the freight from the harbor into the city.

In 1876 Wilmington possessed the only money-order postoffice this side of Los Angeles, it being necessary for residents of Long Beach, San Pedro and vicinity to come here to obtain their postage stamps, money orders and mail. This, in turn, brought trade to the town and made it a prosperous community.

For some years old-time residents planned and hoped for the means to improve the harbor, and for more than nine years the matter of government aid was argued in Congress. Capitalists interested in Santa Monica were seeking to interest the government in a harbor there, and it was not until three different boards of engineers had made an extensive study of the situation that government aid was finally won for this port. With this money the breakwater was constructed, about twenty-five years ago.

The growth of the harbor in the last few years has been phenomenal. Since it has been provided with suitable accommodations for ocean liners, it leads the United States in the export of oil and fish and in the import of lumber. It is estimated that the lumber brought in here last year, if built into four-room bungalows on every fifty-foot lot on both sides of the Coast Highway, would reach from San Diego to the Oregon-Washington state line.

The oil industry had its inception here in 1865, when thirty barrels of oil from the San Gabriel oil spring were hauled to the waterfront and shipped to San Francisco. Last year more than one hundred and thirty-seven million barrels of oil were exported.

The fishing industry has also grown to tremendous proportions in the last few years. It is estimated that enough fish was canned in this harbor last year to furnish every person in the United States with one pound and four ounces of the food.

With such a beginning, who can doubt the future of this port. Cheap transportation has been the history of all great cities. The Pacific Ocean provides the cheap transportation for Wilmington.

CIVILIZED MAN LOOKS TO FORESTS FOR REST AND RECREATION.

With the approach of spring, thought turns to recreation pleasures. Vacation plans may come into your mind. You think of woodland trails, winding along some rushing brook or placid lake amid the cool green trees of the forest. Soon the winter storms will have passed, and the lure of the forest trail will again become irresistible.

Civilized man looks naturally to the forests for rest and recreation. He is not lured by barren, burned-over hillsides or smoke-hidden scenery. This fact is significant to the citizens of California. The lure of our forest trails is creating a valuable tourist industry, bringing wealth into this region.

The main job of the forests is to grow timber crops. However, foresters recognize recreation as an important secondary forest resource. It is carefully considered in forest management plans. In many cases forest recreation may be enjoyed without interrupting the more important functions of the forest.

The all-important rule that foresters seek to impress on all forest visitors is that they must "leave a clean camp and a dead fire."

MAINTENANCE COST OF AUTO INCREASED BY LAW'S INFRACTION.

Another reason for the high cost of maintaining an automobile was given in a report issued March 14 by Will H. Marsh, chief of the State Division of Motor Vehicles, showing that fines and forfeitures collected by California courts during the past year for violations of the motor vehicle act totaled $892,596.05.

Speeding, reckless driving and driving while under the influence of intoxicating liquor were found most costly, as erring motorists brought into court on these charges during the year paid a total in fines of $735,609.80.

Another group who had broken sections of the law classified as rules of the road paid $83,836 for whatever fun they got out of it. For driving with improper lights, another group paid $25,527.50. Fines were assessed for other offenses as follows: Violation of plate regulations, $6,816; driving with open muffler, $15,443; driving without operator's license, $6,686; miscellaneous, $18,677.75.

AMERICAN LEGION POSTS TO CONSTRUCT CAMP GROUNDS.

American Legion posts of Califonria have accepted the task of making this state the ideal camp ground community of the nation. Concrete tables and benches and commodious brick ovens and fireplaces are to be built on various camp-ground sites, constructed as everlasting monuments of California prorgess and giving comfort to the motoring tourist.

The California Development Association, responding to the request of the American Legion of California for some constructive work which it could carry on, outlined the program of camp building. The following fifteen posts of the state have informed the association that they would build a modern camp ground: San Francisco Posts Nos. 296 and 234, Fort Bragg, Turlock, Selma, Fellows, Burbank, Santa Rosa, Modesto, Delhi, Orland, Compton, Rio Vista, Winters and Bakersfield.

Big Saving—Through elimination of the federal excise tax on motor trucks, tires, parts and accessories, and the reduction of the tax on motor cars from 5 to 3 percent, approximately $7,000,000 will be saved by California motorists.

GOOD BRAKES MOST ESSENTIAL.

Brakes are the most essential part of your car, and most accidents are caused by bad brakes. To have good brakes, your brake-drums must be true, to give the full braking surface. If the drums are not true, they grab—some times they hold and some times they do not. You want to be sure that you have brakes that will hold.

We have machinery for doing all that work. Come in and get an estimate on your brake job. We specialize on brakes—trucks and passenger cars. Sheaffer's Brake Drum Service, 930 East Slauson avenue, Los Angeles.—Advt.

KEEP RECORD AND CONSCIENCE CLEAR.

Here are a few fundamental rules for safe driving:

1. Keep your speed consistent with safety.
2. Always signal properly before slowing down, stopping or changing direction.
3. Never pass another car going in the same direction on curves or where the view ahead is obstructed.
4. Sound horn before cutting out to pass and at all curves on a crooked narrow road.
5. See that all lights are functioning and that they are properly adjusted.
6. Respect safety stations and all street cars discharging passengers, and do not pass to the left of street cars going in the same direction.
7. Keep to your own side of the road except when cutting out to pass.

Follow these rules, exercise your power of observation in cities as to parking, turns and stops, and your record and your conscience will be clear.

CLEAN UP LICENSE PLATES.

California autoists who fail to obey the mandate of state traffic officers to "clean up" their plates will be subject to arrest under orders issued March 18 by Will H. Marsh, chief of the State Division of Motor Vehicles.

He has instructed the officers to stop persons with plates covered with mud and grease or with plates placed behind bumpers or in any other condition likely to obscure a clear view of them.

"The dirty or hidden plate is the favorite resort of the criminal," Marsh says.

LET OUT THE AIR.

Rapidly revolving the wheels of your car when stuck in sand will cause the machine to bury itself deeper. The clutch should be let in very slowly and the engine revolved as slowly as possible. Air should be let out of the tires to give more traction through increased gripping surface on the road, but care should be taken that the tires are not deflated to the point where the rims will cut the tires.

EMERGENCY REPAIR.

When your crank case has been punctured by hitting a rock or by a broken connecting rod, a good emergency repair can easily be made. Patch the hole by bolting a piece of metal over it, using cardboard or a blotter for a gasket. This will prevent leakage of the oil until you can reach a garage.

LOOK TO THE PIPE LINES.

When the crank shaft or connecting rod bearings burn out, hot babbit often flows into the crank shaft and oil lines and blocks them. When you have this trouble be sure to see that the oil lines are clear before you try to start the car again.

Enormous Gas Consumption — 719,566,174 gallons of taxable gasoline was consumed by the California motoring public during 1925, and it brought the state a revenue of $16,033,194.94.

SAN PEDRO THE GREAT
HARBOR of the GRE AT SOUTHWEST

SAN PEDRO'S DESTINY ASSURED

(PAUL R. ECKERSON.)

PROPHETS ARE WITHOUT HONOR IN their own country, we have heard. J. B. Meeman, freight traffic agent for one of the largest freight carriers operating between Atlantic ports and the Orient, insists that the destiny of the port of San Pedro is assured, and that it will be the "hub" of "America's greatest industrial center of the future."

Recently thirty representatives of the Pacific westbound and Atlantic-Far East conferences toured the port, profoundly impressed with every phase of its present "lay-out" and its immense potentialities.

Are these visionaries or self-seekers who puff San Pedro and the great Southwest? No, they are hard-headed, capable businessmen who are willing to stake their reputations on the admission that the southland is great and shall be first.

"Oh, ye of little faith"—run some great words we have heard from childhood in another connotation. A boom built on sand—as some visitors fear for Florida's present activity, in the most literal sense,—deserves to fall. When here we have the most secure foundations for future enduring prosperity, we must cry 'Shame!' at the pessimists who belittle the achievements and the dreams of foresighted and publicspirited workers who are building wonderfully here.

Commerce alone could justify our fine City of San Pedro, and the neighboring communities which will keep step in the development of this marvelous center of industrial and transportation activities. Here we have so much more: the great, old hills that roll down to a wondrously beautiful coast-line; that golf course that makes an inspiration out of a game; climate that seems Heaven itself to those who come from the east or north; people that will awake to accomplishment in business affairs, in art and in home-building. What more could the heart of man desire, if these seeds of astounding vitality and promise germinate to beautiful blooming and bounteous fruition?

FEBRUARY PORT RECORD.

Exports and imports at San Pedro during February took a big jump over those a year ago. Exports this year totaled $7,128,049, compared to $4,939,578 a year ago. Imports this year totaled $3,959,528, compared to $2,974,702 last year. Customs collections for the month were $260,961.18 this year; last year they were $226,572.10.

Foreign trade vessels entering the port totaled 119, and vessels clearing in foreign trade numbered 111. American vessels predominated, fifty-eight arriving and sixty-three departing.

REMEMBER THE DATE—APRIL 10.

Little more than a year ago Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 N.S.G.W. and Rudecinda Parlor No. 230 N.D.G.W. were instituted in San Pedro with record-breaking charter membership lists. Both have had wonderful success in their brief careers.

SAN PEDRO FOR 1927.

There was a big attendance, including several visitors, at the March 9 meeting of Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 N.S.G.W., when the question of asking for the Grand Parlor meeting next year was up for final decision. Following the report of James W. Mee, chairman of the Parlor's Grand Parlor committee, it was unanimously voted to ask for the 1927 session, and Sepulveda will send a delegation to Santa Rosa to "bring home the bacon." A committee from Rudecinda N.D.G.W.—President Charlotte Bennett, Mary Bailey, Louise Steinkamp, Amy Hagenow—appeared and pledged the support of that Parlor.

First Vice-president Baldwin had charge of the good of the order, and responding to his invitation Sheriff William I. Traeger, Past Grand President, delivered an address in which he stressed the importance of preserving California's early history. Grand Trustee John T. Newell spoke briefly, as did Deputy Grand President Albert V. Mayrhofer and other visitors and members. Under the supervision of Cosme Arcy, one of the Parlor's famous "feeds" was served.

There will be big doings at the April 13 meeting of Sepulveda, promises President "Bill" Reuter. Men prominent in the affairs of the state and the city will address those assembled, delegates to the Santa Rosa Grand Parlor will be elected and a class of candidates will be initiated. The usual 263 hospitality will be extended.

FIRST ANNIVERSARY OBSERVED.

Rudecinda Parlor No. 230 N.D.G.W. initiated several candidates February 26 and authorized the purchase of the "Pictorial History of California" for circulation in all of the schools in Wilmington and San Pedro. The Parlor voted to participate in the Arbor Day, March 7, tree planting at Ben Mar Hills, sponsoring a tree for Marjorie Jeanette Hruza, whose mother, grandmother (Mary Halvorsen) and aunt (Dora Baly) are members, and whose uncles, Fire Chief Jack Baly and Carl Halvorsen, are affiliated with Sepulveda N.S.G.W. Refreshments were served by a committee composed of Hazel Raines, Marie Smith, Gertrude Riepe, Anna Clark.

The Poppy Thimble Club of Rudecinda entertained the California Thimble Club of Long Beach Parlor March 5. A feature was dancing by six-year-old Jean McKelvey, who is a favorite with the San Pedro Natives.

The first institution anniversary of the Parlor was observed March 12, a short program being followed by a supper. There was a large attendance, including several visitors from Long Beach. The hall was profusely decorated with wild flowers. Recording Secretary Carrie Lenhouse, organizer of Rudecinda, was presented with a gorgeous bouquet. Jeanne McKelvey, Jean Metcalf and Karl Watts Gilbert contributed the entertainment features, and among the speakers were Clara Fay, Julia Osborn and Daisy Hansen of Long Beach and Mrs. Marshall of San Luis Obispo.

Rudecinda's birthday presents were a charter frame, an altar cloth and an altar pillow; the latter, white satin with hand-painted poppies, was made by Mrs. Connors, a member of Long Beach Parlor residing in San Pedro. All were the gifts of Caroline Richards, a charter member of the Parlor. The committee in charge of the anniversary function consisted of: Carmen Ardiaz (chairman), Josephine Cappelle, Susie Alvarado, Emilia Pryor, Lottie Sandstrom, Carrie Lenhouse.

Rudecinda has presented a baby ring to George Fontes Jr., son of Louise Fontes, the first baby to arrive among the membership this year. The latest arrival is a native daughter, Virginia Beckstead, born March 10 to Juanita Beckstead. Before June the Parlor plans to suitably mark an outstanding landmark of the harbor district. It has added its protest against the proposed White's Point outfall sewer.

FARMING

for the bulk handling of grain in California. Since the beginning of the wheat and barley industry in this state, it has been assumed that grain could be shipped only in bags. These bags, for which the farmers must pay but for which they are not paid, are a considerable item in the harvest bill. Often they represent just about the margin of profit. A few growers have demonstrated the feasibility of handling grain in bulk in this state, as it is handled in the Middle West and East. It is but a question of time until the grain bag in California will be a memory.

THE GRAPE LEAF HOPPER.

The grape leaf hopper more than likely will be a minor pest this year, it is confidently predicted. The use of calcium cyanide, at the time of the first brood, about the last of May or the first of June, administered by means of a sulphur duster, will prove a mighty discouragement to the pests that eat the leaves at ripening time. Repeat the dose at the time the second brood comes out, and the battle is won. The importance of control of the first brood is shown, when it is seen that the female lays about 200 eggs. One holdover hopper, therefore, may easily have 40,000 grandchildren eating grape leaves before picking time.

SANTA ROSA

For Grand Marshal—Grand Inside Sentinel J. Hartley Russell (Stanford 76) of San Francisco.

For Grand Inside Sentinel—Grand Outside Sentinel George A. Dethlefsen (Watsonville 65) of Watsonville.

For Grand Outside Sentinel—A. W. Garcelon (Arcata 20) of Arcata.

For Grand Trustee (seven to be selected)—Dr. Frank I. Gonzalez (Pacific 10) of San Francisco, incumbent; John T. Skelton (Sunset 26) of Sacramento, incumbent; John T. Newell (Los Angeles 45) of Los Angeles, incumbent; Alfred H. McKnew (San Francisco 49) of San Francisco, incumbent; Seth Millington (Colusa 69) of Colusa.

Why this dearth of Grand Trustee candidates? In former years numerous members sought this honor at each succeeding Grand Parlor. The Santa Rosa session offers an exceptionally good opportunity for those who desire, as members of the Board of Grand Officers, to do something for the Order, as to date there are but five avowed candidates for the seven Grand Trusteeships. For the good of the Order, The Grizzly Bear hopes the number will be increased to at least fourteen, representing every section of California, and particularly the San Joaquin Valley, the Mother Lode counties, the northern mining counties and the Redwood Highway counties. Really, the state should be districted, and each district permitted to select its Grand Trustee subject to the Grand Parlor's approval.

For the higher offices there are, and in all probability will be, no opposing candidates, hence it is near-certain that Grand First Vice-president Hilliard E. Welch (Lodi 18) of Lodi, will be chosen Grand President, Grand Second Vice-president Charles L. Thompson (Santa Clara 100) of Santa Clara Grand First Vice-president, and Grand Third Vice-president James A. Wilson (Rincon 72) of San Francisco Grand Second Vice-president.

Grand President Fletcher A. Cutler (Humboldt 14) of Burlingame, who will preside during the Santa Rosa session, will automatically become the Junior Past Grand President. Grand Secretary John T. Regan (South San Francisco 157) of San Francisco will undoubtedly be retained in that important office, as he deserves to be.

Eureka, Humboldt County, and San Pedro, Los Angeles County, want the 1927 Grand Parlor. The former's claims will be advanced by Humboldt 14, and the latter's by Sepulveda 263. Rumors are still afloat that there will be other contenders. What place wants this year's Admission Day celebration?

SACRAMENTO N. D. GRAND PARLOR

SACRAMENTO CITY IS THE DESIGNATED meeting-place of the Thirty-ninth (1926) Grand Parlor of the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West. For some time a joint committee of representatives from all the Sacramento County Parlors has been arranging a program of entertainment, and numerous diversions are promised.

Past Grand President Ema Gett is chairman of the general committee, Gertrude Keehner the secretary, and Genevieve Didion the treasurer. The several Parlors are represented by the following:

Califia 22 (Sacramento)—Past Grand President Ema Gett, Ella Lambert, Sadie Brainard.

La Bandera 110 (Sacramento)—Genevieve Didion, Ada Peterson, Evelyn Restano.

Sutter 114 (Sacramento)—Rose Shattuck, Grand Inside Sentinel Lillian Tilden, Anna Almeda.

Coloma 212 (Sacramento)—Lenora Davis, Kate Brome, Gertrude Keehner.

Fern 123 (Folsom)—Hazel McFarland, Harriet Hall, Alice Perazzo.

Liberty 213 (Elk Grove)—Belle Bradford, Isabel Grover, Hazel Stewart.

Victory 216 (Courtland)—Alicia Buckley, Doris Fisher, Ethel Miller.

Chabolla 171 (Galt)—Mary Prichard.

The Grand Parlor, with Grand President Sue J. Irwin of Berkeley presiding, will be in session the week of June 21. Genuine pleasure will be associated with the necessary work, for Sacramento will extend olden-time California hospitality with lavish hand.

Following the usual custom, Grand Vice-president Pearl Lamb (El Pescadero 82) of Tracy will, no doubt, succeed to the Grand Presidency. The Grizzly Bear has communicated with all "suspected" candidates as to their intentions regarding Grand Parlor office. From responses, this information is divulged:

The "big" contest will be for Grand Vice-president. Mae Himes-Noonan (Portola 172) of San Francisco and Florence Danforth-Boyle (Gold of Ophir 190) of Oroville have shied their hats into the ring, and there is every likelihood that the number will be increased by one, and possibly two.

Grand Outside Sentinel Evelyn I. Carlson (Dolores 169) of San Francisco will be a candidate for Grand Inside Sentinel.

Marvel Thomas (Los Angeles 124) of Los Angeles will be a candidate for Grand Outside Sentinel.

THE CROWD IN ELLERY'S SALOON ceased talking, as the door opened and Darrell entered, his face white and troubled. A gust of wind drove the snowflakes in fury into the lighted warmth of the room. The loungers at the bar and around the red-hot stove waited curiously, and the sudden silence was broken only by the clink and rattle of poker chips on the deal-tables.

Darrell's voice was husky: "Boys, I need help. Bess is moaning her life out up at the house. Mrs. Moriarty is unable to do what is most necessary, and some one must go to Howland Flat for Dr. Willis. Will some one volunteer to go and bring him back?"

The men listened, and a few murmured something in an undertone. Jack Darrell continued: "I know it's a rough trip and I'd go, but Bess begs me to stay with her. She will never pull through without a doctor!"

He turned away to hide his quivering face. Outside, the wind howled and the snow was piling in huge drifts. The trip would be dangerous and bitterly cold, and few were willing to leave the comfort and warmth of Ellery's fire. But true miner's loyalty demanded that they h Jack out of his trouble.

Jack moved toward the door, discouraged in despair, when a sandy-haired young fell sprang up from the card table and flung cards away.

"I'll go, Jack," he volunteered. "Someb lend me a pair of skis. 'Tis not the likes of would not be lendin' a hand in a time like th

"Take my skis, Patsy," proferred Black R Mackenzie. "They're up on De Lancy's porc

Jack surveyed Patsy's slight form with sc misgiving. "It's a long, hard trip, Patsy. I weren't for poor Bess' pleading I would myself."

"Never think of it, lad. 'Tis meself will sl like a bird through the timber, an' I'll get doctor here, begorry, if I have to carry him."

"Oh, doc will make it all right if a track broken. He is pretty good on skis for an fellow," consoled Black Rory.

An hour later Patsy Harrigan stood strap into the skis, a lantern swinging from his wr his head wrapped in a warm woolen scarf, long rubber boots reaching almost to his h Plunging into the blinding storm, he shout "Goodbye, boys. Now for hell or Howland Fla and he slid away down the hill into the ni The crowd returned to their cozy seats speculated on how long it would take Pa to reach his destination, his grave chances get lost in the storm, and also the graver qu tion could he and Dr. Willis make the ret trip in safety and in time to save Bess.

On through the storm Patsy slid, past Matt's deserted cabin, traveling rapidly u he reached the forest of heavy timber near summit of Table Rock Mountain. The st was beginning to abate its fury, and a wat moon peered through the drifting flakes. Hu ing on, Patsy soon came out on the bluff ab Howland Flat. A few dim lights glimmered the saloons, where a few night-shift men lingered.

Swiftly the skis descended the steep incl and Patsy swept into the crooked street, st ping in front of Dr. Willis' home. In a minutes he stood, tired and haggard, in presence of the doctor.

Explaining his errand, he urged: "Don't ye won't go, doctor, for the love of heav 'Tis Rafferty's Bess, ye know. When I had leg broke last winter 'twas the kind heart her that cheered many a gloomy hour for n

The doctor made hasty preparations for journey, while Patsy drank a steaming cup coffee and rested his tired limbs before crackling fire.

Mrs. Willis bustled about, arranging a bo of milk and some sandwiches in a small kn sack. As she worked, she remarked, uneasily: dread this hard trip for the doctor. He has b ill with a severe cold for several days, but t poor girl must be cared for. Is there no wom to help her? Surely, there are women in Po Flat."

"Sure, ma'am, there's Mrs. Moriarty. Sh Johnny Moriarty's widow."

Not having visited Poker Flat for m months, Mrs. Willis was not familiar with unrecorded history of the people there. P strove to enlighten her:

"Ye see, ma'am, Johnny Moriarty and S Thompson was partners in the Bunker claims, and lived in the same cabin. The ni Mrs. Moriarty landed in Poker, Johnny celebratin' a little, an' some scalawag hit over the head with a bottle, an' Johnny n recovered from the blow. 'Twas the shock done it, for he died a week later, ma'am."

"Poor woman, what a terrible welcome her new home," sympathized Mrs. Willis.

"Ah, but ye see, ma'am, the widow ne took on much. She had a comfortable place, just went on livin' with Slim." Mrs. W gasped, and Patsy continued, "And from looks of things 'tis time for a weddin' "—

The entrance of Dr. Willis put an end Patsy's confidences and, bidding the still-an ed woman goodnight, they set out for Po Flat.

Up the steep mountainside they crept, drag-g the long skis. They talked but little, hav-g no breath to spare in the contest with the orm. The wind still whistled drearily, and eley flakes cut their faces. The steady swish, ish of the skis as they cut the snow added the weird loneliness of the forest.

Bravely, Patsy led the way, panting and aining to gain the summit. The previous ack was obliterated by drifting snow and only ost careful observation kept them from stray-g in the wrong direction.

As they climbed, truehearted little Patsy ondered how they were faring in Jack Dar-ell's home. Once a dream of happiness had idded in the depths of his heart as he watched fferty's Bess racing her pony over the sumer hills, her tawny braids flying in the breeze, t the love of sweet Bess was not for him. The ought of her in pain and travail wrung his art, and he redoubled his efforts to hasten.
ss held her little corner in the hearts of the ners, and more than one old-timer waited epless in Poker Flat that long night.

The travelers reached the ridge in safety, ssed its snowy depth, and were a mile and a f from town when snap went one of the doc-
's skis. Here was a calamity, indeed. Tired Patsy was, he immediately sprang from his n skis, crying:

"Take mine, doc. I can break trail, or ye send some of the boys to meet me with ther pair, an' I'll wait."

Dr. Willis sank helplessly to a heap in the ow. "My ankle's gone, Patsy. I turned it en the ski broke." He attempted to rise, sank back with a groan.

Patsy burst into expletives far from mild, ll the doctor stopped him, saying: "Don't ste time in swearing. Let us contrive some thod of getting into camp. This is an hour n haste is necessary."

First they tried placing the doctor upon three s, and attempting to slide sled-fashion down ridge, Patsy pushing in the rear, but the ttern struck a snowdrift and went out, leavthem only the capricious light of the cloudy on. Vainly they tried to light the wet candle, the supply of matches was soon exhausted.
hen Patsy assumed a Herculean task.
tening the skis upon his own feet, he mand to get the doctor on his own shoulders and ted out in the dim light. They progressed wly, stumbling rather blindly in the soft
w. Patsy kept warm under the exercise, but doctor was fast succumbing to weariness cold, and kept falling asleep.

his was fatal, as Patsy well knew, and he pped his burden upon the skis at his feet, ching him vigorously in an effort to arouse
. Then, taking him by the coat collar, he gged the drowsy man behind him, but it of no avail, the doctor was fast going into st sleep.

Despair lent strength to Patsy's slender
ne. Bess must be saved! Again he should the heavy burden, and tried to reach
p. His knees shook, and the veins of his d seemed bursting, when the light in Jack rell's home flung a beam across the path, with a yell of joy Patsy dropped his load, sank breathless in the snow.

ights swam before his vision, voices sound-far away smote his ear, and he sank into onsciousness as the friends who had been ching and waiting carried them both within rs.

ours later Patsy awakened from a long p, conscious of a queer cry somewhere in house. Raising cautiously upon his elbow muttered: "Pwhat the divvil is it? Is that ted doctor croakin' after all my trouble to him here?"

ust then Jack entered the room, and as he idly held up a soft, white bundle, he said, in hoking whisper: "Patsy, old chap, you're right now." He held the bundle lower.
ke a look at John Patrick Darrell. He has r name and mine, but he has his mother's wn eyes. You saved her life, old pal!" and tears flowed unrestrained down his cheeks.
atsy took his namesake gingerly into his rs, and as he looked at the puckered red face whispered under his breath, "Bess is safe.
bless them both."

esigning the precious bundle to Mrs. Mory, who hastened to recover it from the joychums, Patsy winked broadly at Jack, and arked blithely: "When Father O'Rourke es again, 'tis a weddin' we'll be having at
's, don't ye think?"

nd Jack Darrell grinned as he nodded a ry assent.

PLAY SAFE

Way out here in California
Where the sun knows how to shine,
Where they only call it winter
When the winds begin to whine,
Where the open road's alluring
From the Sierras to the sea,
There is joy in Nature's bounty
And the motor car's the key.

Like the Oriental carpet
Of the Arab's magic scene,
The enchanted horse of childhood,
Or the steed of Hippocrene,
It reveals the Book of Nature,
Desert, mountain, field and plain,
From the majesty of Shasta
To the "land of little rain."

It's the key to health and pleasure,
It's the bond of farm and town,
It's a guide to paths of beauty
In the footsteps of renown.
It has speed, but don't abuse it,
There are others on the way;
If you would enjoy tomorrow,
Drive with care; play safe today.

DAUGHTERS PLAN BIG INITIATION

NATIVE DAUGHTER DISTRICT DEPUTY grand presidents of San Francisco have been meeting regularly under the direction of Supervising Deputy Mae Himes-Noonan and discussing matters of material interest to the Order. All the local Parlors will participate in a district meeting at Native Sons' Building April 30, when a class of at least a hundred candidates will be initiated. A team composed of district deputies and presidents of Parlors from which no deputies were named will exemplify the ritual. Grand President Sue J. Irwin and other grand officers will witness the work. The gathering will be known as "San Francisco Parlor No. 1926."

Those who will appear on the ritual team include: District Deputies Margaret Ramm, Lillian Spillane, Millie Rock, Dorothy Barry, Josephine Morrissey, Agnes Gallagher, Gertrude Normile, May R. Barry, Mabel Scally, May L. Noble, Myrtle Ross, Lillian Troy, Margaret Griffith, Agnes Curry, Jeanette Powell, Frances Kenny, Rena Mathias, Margaret Kaufmann, Minnie Dobbin, Dr. Winifred Byrne, Lola Horgan, Emilie Schultz, Agnes McVerry, Annie Theusen, Helen Mann, Lilla Lidden; Parlor Presidents Dorothy Thiele (Las Lomas 72), Louise Ross (Linda Rosa 170), Leah Hudson (Orinda 56), Ruth McDonald (Twin Peaks 185), Louise Modry (Bret Harte 232).

A luncheon committee, consisting of representatives from all the Parlors and the district deputies, was organized March 5 with the following officers: Mae Himes-Noonan, chairman; May L. Noble, vice-chairman; Agnes Curry, secretary; May L. Noble, treasurer.

Some time the latter part of May or early in June a district luncheon will be featured in honor of Grand President Sue J. Irwin. To raise required funds a whist party will be given at Native Sons' Building May 7. Valuable prizes, donated by the various Parlors, will be awarded.

FRANCISCAN FESTIVAL.

Nineteen twenty-six ushered in two historical events of interest to every San Franciscan—the seventh centenary of the death of Saint Francis, founder of the order that gave California its chain of missions, and the century and a half existence of Mission Dolores.

So, a citizens' committee, headed by County Clerk Harry I. Mulcrevy, is sponsoring a Franciscan festival at the Exposition Auditorium, May 10 to 16, in aid of the Mission Santa Barbara restoration fund. As one of the means of raising funds a $20,000 Spanish-type dwelling is to be disposed of during the festival. The San Francisco Parlors of Native Sons and Native Daughters have endorsed the festival and are represented on the arrangements committee.

LARGEST EVER.

The class of candidates to be initiated for the twenty-seven Parlors of Native Sons in San Francisco in honor of Grand President Fletcher A. Cutler promises to be the largest in the Order's history. The ceremonies will be conducted by the grand officers in the auditorium of Native Sons' Building, March 30.

The entertainment committee has arranged an attractive program, which will include addresses by Judge Cutler and Chairman of the Board of Appeals Thomas J. Lennon, both eloquent orators.

HALL ASSOCIATION MEETING.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Hall Association of the Native Sons of the Golden West was held March 9. The following officers were re-elected: Senator James D. Phelan, president; Lewis F. Byington, vice-president; Adolph Eberhart, secretary.

Those elected to the board of directors include: Robert H. Morse, Albert Franzen, Henry Pernau, Senator James D. Phelan, Edward J. Lynch, Frank A. Soracco, Dr. Frank I. Gonzalez, Thomas C. Conmy, Adolph Eberhart, J. Frank Jewell, George W. Spiller, Angelo J. Rossi, William J. Wynn, James A. Wilson, William D. Hynes, Charles D. Steiger, C. C. Bossi, Henry G. W. Dinkelspiel, Louis F. Byington, Frank M. Buckley, Frank L. Hatfield, Frank J. Scheifler, George B. Barber, Mat. P. Brady, D. D. Gibbons, Dan J. Wren, Frank I. Butler, Thomas T. Dupont, Joseph Rose, George W. C. Kittler, Charles J. Powers, James Hanna, M. J. McGovern, Joseph B. Keenan, Arthur E. Curtis, Henry S. Spaulding.

"PIONEERS' NIGHT."

Golden Gate Parlor No. 29 N.S.G.W. had a "Pioneers' Night" March 1, when past presidents filled the various offices. In addition to musical numbers there were addresses by Past Grand President Frank H. Dunne, Percy V. Long, J. P. Coghlan, W. J. Martin, W. H. Mora. Refreshments were served at the meeting's conclusion.

APPEALED TO THE HEARTS.

Grand President Fletcher A. Cutler was the honored guest at the Saint Patrick's day banquet and entertainment of South San Francisco Parlor No. 157 N.S.G.W. March 17. Judge Cutler, in a wonderful address, appealed to the hearts of the two hundred in attendance, and all gained a better understanding of the Order and its activities.

Grand Secretary John T. Regan was toastmaster at the banquet, and addresses were delivered by Grand President Cutler, Past Grand President William P. Caubu, Grand Trustee Frank I. Gonzalez, Judge James G. Conlon

CONTINUED PROSPERITY.

Predictions of increasingly prosperous conditions in California for the year 1926, made at the December meeting of the Pacific Coast Transportation Advisory Board, are verified in a report by G. A. Leithner, district manager American Railway Association for the Pacific Coast region.

During the first nine weeks of this year, Leithner shows, the total revenue freight loaded in the Pacific Coast region, 80 percent of which is of California origin, amounted to 263,345 cars, an increase of 10,304 cars, compared to the same period a year ago, making a 4 percent upward trend.

SAN DIEGO
A BEAUTY SPOT OF THE WORLD

SAN DIEGO, WITH ITS SUPERB NATural harbor, is the only city in the southern part of California where all of the attractions and amusements of ocean, bay and mountain may be enjoyed at its very gates. San Diego has been pronounced one of the three beauty spots of the world.

The fascinating sport of aquaplaning and its accompaniments of swimming, yachting, motorboating, launch parties, beach picnics, clam bakes and water carnivals, make time fly. The almost continual sunshine and soft breezes, with the pleasant temperature of bay and ocean, are especially attractive to women. Girls' rowing and swimming clubs are numerous. The climate is one of the most equable in the United States. The sun shines nearly all the time.

The waters just outside San Diego Harbor are alive with tuna, barracuda, Spanish mackerel, bonita, skipjack, yellowtail and many other varieties. Albacore, in schools, are caught with hook and line, literally by the ton. Swordfish, the biggest and gamiest fish caught with rod and reel, are taken a few miles off the harbor. Fishing in San Diego and Mission Bays is almost equally varied, and surf fishing, a sort of postgraduate course, is popular. Fresh-water fishing in upland reservoirs is good. Bass range from one to four pounds. Rainbow and steelhead trout up to nine ponuds are caught in Cuyamaca Lake, and there is good trout fishing in upland brooks.

Unsurpassed recreational facilities are provided at Mission Beach, San Diego's newest seaside pleasure resort and community. Nearly three miles of clean sandy shore, ideal for surf bathing, extend along the ocean side of Mission Beach strand, while on the east side are the placid waters of Mission Bay. Mission Beach is within twenty-five minutes' distance of downtown San Diego by street car or motor.

Six minutes by boat lands one at Coronado, the exquisite necklace of sand which separates bay from ocean, and here, in summertime, is tent city, with its several thousand inhabitants who live but a minute distant from the soft ocean surges on one side and the placid bay on the other. Multitudes find here delightful relief from the intense heat of the interior valleys and states. Tent city has its oepn-air plunges, its reading rooms, cafeterias, and its tents and palm cottages all ready for light housekeeping. Coronado is the original home of midwinter polo. Golf, tennis and polo tournaments are annual events.

More than half the warships of the Pacific fleet make San Diego Bay their home port, and leave here periodically for their cruises and maneuvers on the southern drill grounds off this harbor.

It's a dull day, indeed, when from one to a score or more airplanes and seaplanes are not in the air over San Diego. They all come from North Island, on Coronado Peninsula, where the Federal Government maintains army and navy air stations because this is the most perfect flying climate, the year 'round, in America. San Diego is also the headquarters of the Eleventh Naval District, controlling all naval activities in this portion of the Pacific. Government establishments here include a naval training station, a marine training station, a naval hospital, a coaling station, a repair station and a destroyer base.

Ranking in beauty with the Grand Canyon and Yosemite, the view from Point Loma, the noble promontory which forms the harbor's outer wall, calls again and again to visitor and resident. On clear days the island of San Clemente rises far to the north, and the Coronado Islands, a possession of Mexico, fourteen miles at sea, raise their rugged walls. Below the point, warships pass in and out, and beyond lie the army and navy aviation fields. Turning landward, San Diego City gleams in the sun, with green valleys and rolling hills rising to the mountains beyond. The Greek theater, on Point Loma, with the whole Pacific Ocean for its backdrop, is inexpressably beautiful.

San Diego is built around a great park. The splendid buildings of the Panama-California Exposition with their towers, courts and corridors are embowered in trees and shrubs from every land, and millions of flowers bloom throughout the year. The rose garden is superb in winter and always lovely. Here is also the great open-air pipe organ, given and maintained by two citizens. Every day in the year a recital is given, among birds and flowers, with free seats for all who come to listen. A children's playground, a golf course, broad lawns, deep ravines and canyons, and a hundred views of bay and ocean are here. Other attractions are the zoo, museum of natural history, archaeological institute and rose and pansy gardens.

Modern San Diego is situated where California history began. Fifty years after Columbus discovered America, this bay was found and charted by Juan Rodriguez Cabrillo, a navigator in the service of Spain. Later came Junipero Serra, and other heroic Franciscans, who planted missions along six hundred miles of coast. Here they built the first one. Its facade and crumbling walls are lovingly explained by an aged caretaker. Two other missions are in San Diego County—San Luis Rey de Francia and Pala Asistencia. The site of the first fort and settlement is marked by a cross at "Old Town," close to the residences of the modern city.

This is the spot where General John C. Fremont first raised the American Flag in Southern California. Here also is the old Spanish hacienda, identified as the marriage place of Ramona, the heroine of Helen Hunt Jackson's famous novel. Its gardens, ancient ovens, wishing-well and curios and relics turn back the pages of years.

La Jolla (La Ho-ya), "the jewel," with its clustered cottages about a sheltered beach among the cliffs and ocean caves; Del Mar, near the famous Torrey Pines, with its bathing pavilion and its beautiful and prosperous summer homes; La Jolla Hermosa, Mission Beach, Ocean Beach and Pacific Beach are seaside communities along San Diego's marine section, where weeks and months are spent in congenial recreation.

...om, supplemented by hundreds of miles of superbly engineered county boulevards, leading through upland valleys and mountain passes, makes San Diego a motorist's paradise. Three hours from San Diego City, at an elevation of ...000 feet, one may overlook the great Imperial Valley, the Salton Sea, the mountains of old Mexico, the San Bernardino Mountains to the north, and the Pacific Ocean to the west. The view reaches clear across the State of California. The Imperial Valley is, of itself, a popular excursion with its abundance of crops every month in the year, flourishing under irrigation in the midst of bleak desert.

San Diego County, in area, is almost as large as the State of Connecticut. Within its confines are varying altitudes up to 6,000 feet. Valleys famed for their fertility and productiveness dot the upland country, with thriving communities as the centers of the agricultural and social life of a happy, contented people.

The temperature is favorable for a wide range of crops. Near the coast, large acreages are given over to lemons, oranges and other fruits and garden truck, while in the foothills and mountains are extensive orchards of apples, pears, peaches, plums and prunes. Livestock is one of the principal assets of the county. Climatic conditions are especially favorable for the poultry and egg business, which is assuming large proportions each year. Of the 500,000 tillable acres in the county, nearly 300,000 are improved.

Radiating from San Diego are finely engineered highways and paved roads, over which the farthest point in the county can be reached by motor in less than four hours.

A rare combination of natural resources gives San Diego a luster and a charm that indelibly impress the homeseeker and visitor. Ocean, bay and mountains, with all the possibilities they possess for one in pursuit of health, happiness and prosperity, are right at San Diego's door. Add to this a climate remarkably even throughout the year, and you have one of the principal foundations of San Diego's greatness. The past decade has witnessed a development that has increased San Diego's population from 50,000 to approximately 150,000.

San Diego always will appeal to the discriminating homeseeker. Although the oldest city in California—the first of the Spanish missions having been founded here in 1769—the San Diego of today is a thoroughly modern community in every respect. The city slopes gently from the water's edge to an elevation of about 200 feet, and including Point Loma, is not unlike an amphitheatre, the floor of which is formed by the harbor of San Diego. On the terraces overlooking the bay and ocean to the west, and the mountains to the east and south, are the residential districts. Few cities in this country, it is conceded, are more ideally located.

Geographical conditions in the past have militated against San Diego's development along commercial and industrial lines. This obstacle, however, is slowly but surely being overcome. Each year sees an increase in maritime activity, and also an increase in the number and importance of the city's industrial establishments. A tract of about 1,000 acres, admirably suited for manufacturing purposes, is controlled by the San Diego Chamber of Commerce, and this is available at a cost so attractive that a number of enterprises either are definitely assured or are in the process of realization. This industrial site is traversed by two transcontinental railroads and fronts on San Diego Bay.

were President Hayes, General Sherman, Governor Stanford, and many others; but persons of low estate—even the poor Indians from their nearby village—were just as welcome. I found out that General Bidwell made many splendid gifts for the public good, including building sites for churches, a fine campus for the normal school and a beautiful tract of land for a United States forestry station. He was very fond of building and improving mountain roads.

On my visit, General and Mrs. Bidwell invited me to go with them on a camping trip into the Sierra Nevada Mountains, and you may be sure I was overjoyed to accept the invitation. What a rare experience that was! Bidwell was a great lover of the mountains and of nature and of the sciences of nature—especially geology and botany. He stored up in his marvelous mind the full scientific names of all the trees and flowers and tiny plants that grew upon his vast estate of 25,000 acres! But he also treasured many beautiful poems of nature and psalms of David in his mind; he never allowed his mind to grow old, even to the day of his death. His lovely wife was his true companion; she, too, committed many beautiful verses to memory, but she confessed to me that she could not keep up with her husband. She was one of the greatest prohibition leaders, and for many years was the faithful minister and teacher of the Chico Indians, who showed wonderful trust in and love for her.

At the mansion I was permitted to sit with the great general, for hours at a time, on the broad piazza while he talked to me about his own experiences in early days in California. It seemed as if history itself was given a voice and the spirit of the past was made to live over again. I could not help but love him, for he was not only a princely Pioneer but also a good man; not only a general and member of Congress, but also a fine neighbor and true friend; not only the royal entertainer of the high and mighty, but likewise the guardian and provider of the lowly Indians. He was large-hearted and broad-minded, modest and humble, generous and kind. As Abraham Lincoln was the only man big enough fully to embody the many-sided spirit of true Americanism, so it seems to me John Bidwell best embodied the many fine qualities that mark him chief among the Pioneer princes of California. In his treasured memory the boys and girls and men and women of today have a heritage dearly to be prized. Of him all nature might stand up and say, HE WAS A MAN!

late personal habits through law. In all fairness, the prohibition question should be submitted by the Federal Government to a national referendum. If the "wets" win, bring liquor and its consumers within the law; if the "drys" are victorious, give the country real prohibition, not the farce now being enacted in the guise of prohibition.

The California Taxpayers' Association, with headquarters in Los Angeles, has filed articles of incorporation with the secretary of state. Its purpose is to conduct a research into the costs of government and to endeavor to bring about a reduction in taxes.

Why waste time researching? Everyone conversant with public affairs knows that goverr ment costs are outrageously exorbitant, chiefl because of the incompetent horde of politician friends sucking at the public-teat. What th taxpayers want, and what business demands, a speedy reduction in the taxes. If the newly incorporated association can bring that abou it will have served California well.

"What is it in the atmosphere of Californi that makes the native son dislike the Jap s much?" queries the Johnstown, Pennsylvani "Democrat."

Loyalty to nation and to state—simply th and nothing more. The Native Sons know th Japs' game, and are determined to keep Cal fornia white, if possible.

Because members of the State Legislature r fused to respect the State Constitution and r apportion the state in accordance with the 192 census, a movement is well under way to subm an initiative reapportionment measure to th electorate at the November election.

It appears the voters of the several senatori and assembly districts send to Sacramento lav makers who are not guided in their actior either by the constitution or laws of the stat Fine situation, is it not? Why not, for th good of California, send to the State Legislatu citizens who respect, at all times and under a conditions, all the provisions of both the Federa and the State Constitutions, and who do nc consider themselves above the laws?

USE FOR LAWN CLIPPINGS.

The average homeowner, when he cuts h lawn, throws the clippings in the alley or stree or disposes of them in any other manner th may be convenient and free from trouble. Th average homeowner, then, wastes his most va uable product, for these same lawn clippin can be turned to account in many ways. If h is a home-gardener, he will do well to make compost-pit. Dig a hole, big enough, and whe the lawn is mowed, throw in the clippings an add a light layer of earth. Repeat this throug the summer and the result will be some valuab fertilizer for the vegetable or flower garden. the pit cannot be negotiated, make a pile, a though this is not so good. The clippings ma be used, too, as a mulch around plants, to kee the top soil from baking, to hold moisture, t add some degree of fertility to the soil and t reduce appreciably the ground temperature i exposed sunny places.

STATE FLAGS TO GREET STRANGERS.

Sacramento—The Order of Native Sons of th Golden West has donated to the State Depar ment of Agriculture State (Bear) Flags whicl Director G. H. Hecke promises, will fly abov the state's border quarantine stations at Fo Yuma, Blythe and Daggett.

The Santa Ana "Register" recently had thi paragraph: "Li'l Gee Gee showed her ignoranc today. She said this N.S.G.W. organization yo hear so much about is composed of boys wh Never Sent Girls Walking."

"In sweet music is such art, killing care an grief of heart fall asleep."—William Shake peare.

¶ The Order of the Native Sons of the Golden West is founded upon the same broad patriotic principles that have been the inspiration of similar organizations in older States of the Union. Each State has its history. Into that history is interwoven a narrative of deeds performed by a mighty race of men who frontiered and pioneered the pathway for the countless thousands to follow. They transplanted the spirit, the life, the institutions of the Colonists, and wherever a State was erected there were established the ideals of the Fathers of the Republic.

¶ Therefore, the membership of our Order is limited to those born within the State, because we believe that pride of nativity is inherent in the breast of every person and moves that person to a consecrated loyalty to his native land. We do not maintain that birthplace alone confers any special privilege; rather do we teach that this casts upon the citizen an increased obligation to become interested in all material matters affecting its development and progress. National strength and national greatness have been commensurate with State strength and State greatness.

¶ California was the thirty-first State to be admitted into the Union. She contributed a citizenship and a golden treasure at an opportune time in the affairs of the nation. The many events connected with its settlement and organization as a State played a prominent part in shaping the destiny of the American people, and geographically she occupies a strategic position in the world-wide problems of the present and the future.

¶ We have taken an active interest in the conservation of our natural resources; the preservation of our scenic wonders and making them accessible to all; the retention of the State and its soil for the White race; all legislation, Federal and State, affecting the State and its interests.

¶ In our Fellowship endowment at the University of California we have expended over fifty thousand dollars in the preparation and preservation of the history of California and the Pacific Coast, and it has become the incentive for the Student Body of that institution and of the high-schools throughout the State to learn and teach that history. In this work we have laid the foundation for a text-book to be used in the public schools.

¶ We visit places where important events transpired and we have identified and marked the same with tablet and monument. Responding to the patriotic objects of our Order, we observe each recurring anniversary day of the Admission of California into the Union by public ceremonies in the various cities of the State. We actively participate in public dedicatory ceremonies of grammar-school and high-school buildings, on which occasions the students and citizens are addressed by officials of our Order on patriotic subjects.

¶ We maintain a "Homeless Children" Bureau and have placed in the childless homes over twenty-six hundred homeless boys and girls, insuring their development into a splendid citizenship amid elevating environments. In this activity we have expended over two hundred thousand dollars, contributed generously and voluntarily by the membership of the Order.

¶ It thus appears that the work of our organization appeals to every citizen of the State, irrespective of place of birth. It matters not where we were born in this land of ours; we are all citizens of a common country, we pledge our allegiance to one flag, and we are best evidencing our love of country and our loyalty to that flag by deservedly wearing the badge of public service wherever we exist and have our home.

¶ We welcome to our Membership the sons of California, and we promise nothing in return, save that compensation which comes to the citizen who conscientiously endeavors to perform his part in the cause of a greater and better civilization.

(GRAND PRESIDENT OF THE ORDER OF NATIVE SONS OF THE GOLDEN WEST.)

THE ORDER OF THE NATIVE SONS OF the Golden West is holding the forty-ninth session of its Grand Parlor on historic ground. On May 10 delegates representing every section of the State of California will assemble in the City f Santa Rosa, Sonoma County, for the purpose f transacting the business affairs of the Order.

The Order of Native Sons of the Golden West s distinctly Californian in its origin and in its ctivities—in preserving the identity of grounds nd buildings where historic events occurred; erecting monuments and placing plaques with roper inscriptions thereon; in perpetuating emories of one of the most wonderful epochs f the world's history, the ays of '49; in maintaining ellowship endowments at he University of California t an expenditure of $3,000 er annum which enable two tudents proficient in histor- al research work to visit oreign countries and in heir archives to discover aterial bearing on the dis- overy and settlement of the acific Coast and the South- est; in stimulating the tudy of California history n the University of Califor- ia and the various high- chools of the state; in dedi- ating newly-erected high- chools and grammar-schools nd the presentation of the ag of our country, the merican Flag, and the tate (Bear) Flag to the tudent body of those chools; in the public ob- ervance of Admission Day n the various cities of the tate, when in pageantry here are depicted eventful pochs of the state's history; n co-operating with civic mprovement and public en- erprises; in supporting state nd federal legislation hav- ng for its chief object the nterest of the state at large; n maintaining, with a sister rganization, the Order of ative Daughters of the olden West, a homeless hildren bureau through hich 2,700 homeless chil- ren have been placed in the omes of some of the finest amilies in the state, insur- ng their development into omanhood and manhood mid elevating surroundings nd the loving care of adopt- d parents, thus making for good citizenship of the tate; in consistently advo- ating everywhere and all he time that this land so avorably located, so gener- usly bestowed, so happily opulated, so divinely lessed, shall be maintained nd perpetuated, even as it as dedicated by the blood nd the bone and the grit of pathfinder, pioneer, ettler and miner, as the abiding place of the White race.

The membership of this Order is recruited rom every section of the state. The sons of alifornia who, loving the state, clinging to its raditions, endeavor by word and action to main- ain the high ideals typified in the lives of the en and the women of the long ago; ever press- ng onward and keeping pace with the growth nd the development of the state, intensely in- erested in the preservation of its great scenic onders as revealed in stately forests, fragrant alleys, silvery streams, falling waters and em- rald lakes. The voices of thousands of its nembers from San Diego, Los Angeles, San Ber- ardino, Ventura and Santa Barbara mingle with the answering cries of the sturdy sons of Mendocino, Humboldt, Siskiyou, Shasta and the Sierras and, reverberating down through pleasant valleys and blossoming fields, sound the glad acclaim of Native Sons, living, working and caring for their communities and their state.

State pride, state loyalty and state building have ever marked the advance, the expansion, the power of the American Republic. The very system devised by the fathers comprehended a plan whereby national growth and national strength would be commensurate with state growth and state strength. The Louisiana purchase pushed the western boundary line of the United States to the Rocky Mountains, and toward the great Mississippi basin there started that caravan of the best in American life,—the men who slowly, but surely and fearlessly, were to extend the western frontier until the Occident faced the Orient.

The reclamation from forest and desert and plain of states and commonwealths, forms the most thrilling part of American history. The clearing of the wilderness and the dotting of those clearings with homes, were evidences of an advancing civilization. The appearance of the church, the school and the court-house, the transplanting of American institutions with their resultant blessings, indicated the coming of a new people in a new land. There were deeds of heroism and daring exploits by brave men who, with enduring faith and firm resolve, shaped the destiny of the American people and assured the extent of the American domain.

They pressed on, toiled on, until at last they stood upon the crest of the Sierras, triumphant, resplendent and confident as they looked upon a shore line that met the surge of a mighty deep. It was the forward movement of human progress that carried the center of civilization from the Mediterranean across the Atlantic and thence over mountains, unbridged streams and stretched plains to the Pacific Coast, where it stands today, looking hopefully, anxiously, courageously across the waters to meet the great problems of the future.

The scenes enacted upon California's soil form no small part of the wonderful story, and pass before us in an unfolding panorama, vivid as with the life of yesterday. We are with the early navigators, braving the perils of the sea in their frail craft, charting routes and finding ports for those to follow; with Serra and Lasuen, as they dedicated the soil to Christian enterprise; with Portola, as he stood on the San Bruno hills wrapped in wonderment as he gazed upon an unknown arm of the sea holding within its embrace the secrets of a mighty future; with Anza and his band of pilgrims, who faced the dangers and hardships of a labored journey across the parched deserts of Arizona to San Diego and thence to the presidio where they founded the first settlement on that bay; with Fremont at old Sonoma, as he fearlessly and valiantly flung to the breeze a defy against foreign aggression and foreign invasion; with Marshall at Coloma, as he exposed the golden treasure which initiated California on her glorious career and fortified the government with credit and prestige among the nations of the earth; with pathfinder, blazing the trails for the Pioneers to follow; with the men of '49, with their hopes, their ambitions, their fraternity; with the men at Colton Hall who, under the flag that Sloat raised, wrote the constitution of a free state, accompanied by a demand that the thirty-first star upon the azure blue of our national emblem should be represented by our own California.

As the last scene vanishes, another appears as a reverent benediction—the California of today! Appealing as she was in her pristine splendor, now a thousandfold enhanced with her great cities teeming with myriads of people, her valleys and countryside populated by a people dwelling in peace, plenty and contentment; opulent in wealth of minerals, forests, gushing oil wells, fruitful orchards, golden harvests, slow-moving herds and flocks, manufactures of mill and factory, trade and commerce stimulated by resources in every stage of development, her soil responding to the magic touch of nature's offering supplied by aerial treasuries of snow. Every section of the state generously and unselfishly contributing to her ever-increasing fame. Finally, we behold a state glorified by the dominating spirit that pervades every thought and action of her citizenry—the spirit of the West!—the great heritage transmitted from the past, the spirit of cheer, courage, faith and optimism of a loving, grateful, patriotic people.

SONOMA, LAND OF ROMANCE

Dr. Owen C. Coy

(SECRETARY CALIFORNIA STATE HISTORICAL SOCIETY, ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR, HISTORY DEPARTMENT, UNIVERSITY SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA.)

SONOMA HAS ABOUT IT A ROMANTIC charm such as few other California counties possess. Her natural physical features, including the Petrified Forest and the Geyser Hot Springs, attract large numbers of people annually, but to the Californian her chief charm lies in the historical romance that clings to her name. Before the end of the sixteenth century, and while the countries of northern Europe were but beginning to take an active interest in colonizing the New World, the region here under discussion became a factor in international rivalry. In 1542 the expedition under Rodriguez Cabrillo passed along this coast, thereby establishing a claim in behalf of the king of Spain. Upon the death of Cabrillo his assistant, Ferrelo, pushed the expedition on northward along the coast probably as far north as Point Arena in what is now Mendocino County.

NEW ALBION.

The discoveries in the New World, together with the great wealth from the mines of Mexico and Peru, gave to Spain in the sixteenth century a place of first importance among the powers of Europe. However, to her northward was arising a mighty enemy—England. Her mariners were hardy and adventurous seamen who were not held in check by the present restriction of international law. Legitimate trade, privateering and piracy were not then clearly differentiated; furthermore, court intrigue and international plots were the order of the day in diplomatic circles. Under those conditions in world affairs there sailed from England in 1577, in command of a fleet of five vessels, the daring Francis Drake.

The New World was not unknown to Drake, for he had already established a reputation as a freebooter among the Spanish inhabitants of the Caribbean area. No ordinary pirate's outfit was this fleet of Drake's. Having the secret backing of his great queen, he had equipped his vessels with rich appointments in order to create a favorable impression upon peoples to be met with on the way. Think of a pirate starting out with vessels manned with "expert musitians," with table utensils of solid silver, and attended by members of English noble families dressed in gorgeous uniforms!

During the summer of 1579 the "Golden Hind," his one remaining vessel, sailed into the North Pacific. Having satiated his revenge upon the Spanish foes of his queen, and with a vessel ladened with gold, silver and other treasures of the Indies, the commander now thought of plans for a successful return voyage. Contrary winds and cold foggy weather caused him to seek a landing-place upon this unknown coast. Sailing southward from near the Oregon line he decided to land at a small bay subsequently known as Drake's Bay, in what is now Marin County. The gorgeous display which Drake had carefully prepared impressed the natives so favorably that, according to the reports of the Englishmen, they were treated as divine beings.

An expedition was made into the interior, but whether they crossed the edge of Sonoma County is not known. Upon July 23, 1579, Drake sailed westward across the Pacific, but not until he had set up a monument claiming the land for the queen of England. He had already bestowed upon it the name of "Nova Albion," because of its similarity to England. That Drake intended returning to New Albion at a later date with an English colony seems confirmed by documents still extant. When we remember that under Queen Elizabeth the Great East India Company and other trading and colonizing companies were established, we become aware that the plan of Drake for an English colony in California had potentialities greater than a mere idle dream.

CERMENHO AND VISCAINO.

European politics and shifting fortunes in English affairs prevented the realization of Drake's scheme and left Spain without serious rivals on the California coast for nearly two centuries. But aroused at this time by the dangers to her North Pacific claims, Spain sent out exploring expeditions in an effort to establish herself more firmly. This led to the visit of Rodriguez Cermanho in the early winter of 1595. After skirting down the coast from Cape Mendocino in the Manila galleon of that year, he came to anchor in Drake's Bay. Here he constructed a smaller vessel with which to explore closely the coastline; and it was fortunate that he had begun the building of this boat, for a sudden storm drove the larger galleon with its valuable cargo ashore, leaving his crew stranded but for this partly constructed craft. Cermenho made one or more expeditions into the interior and may have visited the Sonoma territory, but of that we are no more certain than we are of Drake's itinerary. Cermenho was followed eight years later by another navigator, Sebastian Viscaino, who, after discovering Monterey Bay, sailed on northward, exploring somewhat more closely the Sonoma and Mendocino coastline than had either Ferrelo or Cermenho.

Even as fate prevented Drake from the realization of his dream, so did it also interfere with the accomplishment of the aspiration of Sebastian Viscaino. A new viceroy decreed that Spanish money and efforts should be directed, not toward occupying the Alta California shore, but rather to the location of some mythical islands supposed to exist in the Pacific Ocean. Consequently for more than a century and a half after the time of Viscaino's visit the natives of Alta California were left practically undisturbed by White men. Meanwhile Spain was slowly advancing northward from Mexico.

BODEGA BAY, 1775.

At the close of the eighteenth century t European nations were aroused to put fo their greatest efforts in colonial expansion a rivalry. The determination of a new and ergetic Spanish king to occupy Upper Californ led to the expedition of 1769 under Gaspar Portola and Father Junipero Serra. Furth more, reports of Russian aggression havi reached Madrid, it was resolved to ascert the facts, so expeditions by water were sent i the North Pacific. One of these expeditio under the command of Don Bruno de Hece made its way northward up the coast during t early summer of 1775. Two vessels were gaged in this exploration. One of them was "Sonora," a small schooner only thirty-thr feet in length, whose commander bore the na Juan Francisco de la Bodega y Cuadra. T small craft, although separated by storms fr the larger vessels, nevertheless pushed on nor ward until she had reached a point north of t present capital of Alaska. On t northward journey the members the expedition had spent nine da at Trinidad Bay, discovered a named by them in June, 1775. the return the "Sonora" anchor also at another bay, to which w given the name of her command and henceforth has been known Bodega Bay. Tomales Bay, enteri Bodega Bay from the southeast, w thought to join this new bay wi "la bahia redondo"—San Pablo B —but a threatening storm prevent the carrying out of the investigati at this time.

Thus we see that gradually th north bay region was becomi known to Europeans. Drake h paid it a brief visit in 1579 a claimed it for the queen of Englan the Spaniards established more s cure claims by repeated explorati and by 1776 had become famili with most of the headland and lan marks along the coast and had ma more or less close surveys of Tri idad and Bodega Bays under t leadership of Heceta and Bodeg Still the region remained unoccupi and, to a large measure, an unknov land.

RUSSIANS AND FORT ROSS.

We must now direct our attenti to another interesting people who a proached the region from a new rection. In far-off Russia the expa sive impulse had found an opportu ity to express itself in the moveme of the Russian peoples eastwa across Siberia to the Pacific Ocea thence across the straits to the Nor American continent, by 1741, whe in the far North Pacific they esta lished an American colony. T Russian American Fur Compan chartered in 1799, was under t supervision of Alexander Baran known as the "Little Czar" for h autocratic powers. In spite of h great power and ceaseless energy, was unable to prevent sickness an starvation from taking heavy t from his subjects. For the climate Alaska, while not so disagreeable t the Russians and those accustome to warmer climes, did greatly han icap the Russian colony.

The Yankee traders first introduced to thes sons of Muscovy the products of the sunn southland and carried on a thriving, althoug illegal, trade between the Spanish missions an ranchos of California and the Russian settl ment of the north. In 1805 Prince Nikol Rezanof, Russian royal chamberlain, paid a vis of inspection to the czar's American possession and, finding the settlements in sore straits, pu chased from a Yankee captain both goods an vessel and started southward to open up dire trade with the Spanish neighbors. Rezanof wa able to complete the trade only through the us of diplomacy, which took the form of an inte national courtship. The Spanish governor coul not see his way to permit traffic with foreig peoples, but Dona Concepcion Arguello, sixteen year-old daughter of the commandante at Sa Francisco, having become an aide and accom plice of the young and handsome Russian prince, the desired object was attained.

Rezanof's visit to California favorably impressed him with the opportunities offered for Russian settlements north of San Francisco, the most northerly Spanish establishment. He, therefore, determined to work toward the founding of a Russian colony either on the Columbia River or further south in California.

In accordance with Rezanof's scheme two vessels were sent south from Sitka in 1808. One of them was in command of Captain Kuskof and reached Bodega Bay early in January, 1809. For nearly nine months the Russians remained at Bodega Bay hunting and trading with the Indians and studying the land as a site for a future colony. Kuskof left Bodega fully determined to return soon, prepared to found a permanent establishment. He was, however, delayed until 1811, when he again anchored in Bodega Bay. We are told that he now negotiated with the Indians for the land necessary for a colony, the sale price being quoted as "three blankets, two axes, three hoes and a miscellaneous assortment of beads."

The Russian colony was permanently established during the summer of 1812. Warehouses were built on the ocean shore at "Romanzoff Bay," the Slavic name for Bodega Bay, while a short distance inland a village was established known by the Russians as Kuskof. For the main settlement, however, a site was selected some nine miles north of "Slavinsk," or Russian River. This was a bold tableland which offered opportunity both for defense and agriculture. There was also near at hand a passable landing place. Here the necessary buildings were immediately begun which, on September 10, 1812, were dedicated with proper ceremonies and henceforth became known as Fort Ross.

"The Russian presidio of Ross (little Russia)," reports Sir Edward Belcher of the British Royal Navy in 1839, "is situated about thirty miles to the northward of the bay, or port, of Bodega, on land elevated about one hundred feet above the sea, the outline of which is cliffy, with alternate rocky and gravelly margin, rendering landing, excepting in very fine weather, nearly impracticable. The anchorage off is bad. by reason of beds of rock above and below water, and the constant liability to fogs, rendering it unsafe to break ground, unless with a fair wind.

FORT ROSS, SONOMA COUNTY, ABOUT 1830.
—Courtesy U. C. Extension Division, Dept. Visual Instruction.

"The hills above it, which command the presidio, are sparingly clothed with fir trees. The main government establishment, or fort, as such enclosures are termed in these countries, consists of a large square, fenced in with strong planks of fifteen feet in height, and furnished with blockhouses or watchtowers at two angles; one commanding the sea, and the other the land sides, or covering the east, south and west faces.

"These towers, armed with three guns each, in a second story, are on a level with the top of the fence. Within the square are contained the company's warehouses, the governor's house, a dwelling for the officers, and a chapel.

"The square has but one entrance, which is by large folding gates toward the sea. The governor's house is situated at the back of the square, facing this gate, the officers' houses and chapel on either side. The gate is guarded by a sentinel with a cutlass, and at night it is closed. This sentinel has no uniform, but is one of the company's establishment, which, in 1836, amounted to three hundred, and who live without the inclosure. On the N. W. are situated the stables for the cattle; a large granary, with a threshing machine capable of cleaning one hundred bushels of corn per day; a windmill; and to the southward, in a deep ravine which partly forms the bay, are three large tiled buildings, containing forges, carpenters' shops and storehouses for boats and fishing craft.

"Besides these buildings, there are on the slope of the hill about twenty huts for the Kodiack Indians, of whom the establishment generally employs about fifty to sixty, in their skin boats, some of which are capable of containing one hundred men, and carrying about seven tons. They are constructed similarly to the old English coracle, viz., of strong boat-shaped frames, sharp at each end, over which the skins of the sealion are tightly stretched. Those to the northward of the Aleutian chain are covered with the skin of the walrus.

"In the center of the yard or square, in front of the governor's staircase, a brass nine-pounder gun commands the gateway and within the governor's hall is the armory for the establishment, which is well stored with cutlasses and firearms.

"Between this presidio and Bodega, the Russians have a small rancho (farm), from which they reap in a favorable year as much as three thousand bushels of wheat. This is probably the farm in dispute, which report gives out to be the property of a ci-devant British subject. The Californian government are, however, too weak to contend even with any half-dozen adventurers, and it is needless to ask for their interference."

Although Spain was unable to cope with this advance of the Russians, other forces were working to prevent the ultimate success of the Russian colony. The new American nation which was rapidly expanding westward across the continent did not look with favor upon the possibility of a permanent colony by such a powerful nation as Russia upon the Pacific Coast of North America. Furthermore, it came to feel that its importance as the leading government upon the American continents made it the guardian of American rights. Russia's attempt to close the North Pacific to vessels of other powers was looked upon as an indication of an aggressive policy in America.

Consequently in December, 1823, President Monroe issued his famous message declaring "That the American Continents, . . . are henceforth not to be considered as subjects for future colonization by European powers." Inasmuch as the sea otter had practically disappeared before the Russian hunters, and since Russia was now in an alliance with Spain, the abandonment of the claim to Fort Ross was seriously considered, so in a treaty with the United States in 1824 Russia agreed to restrict her operations to the territory now known as Alaska. In 1839 General John A. Sutter purchased from the Russians the Fort Ross property and the Russian colony came to an end.

Meanwhile it should be noted that the Russian influence had not been confined to the immediate vicinity of Bodega and Fort Ross, nor must it be thought that the Spanish officials and inhabitants of California were entirely indifferent to their presence. Expeditions at an early date had revealed to the Russians the fertility of the inland valleys still unoccupied by other than native tribes. Trips were made for furs even into San Francisco Bay and inland ranchos were established for the raising of cereals much needed in the Alaska colony. On the other hand, the Russian occupation naturally drew the attention of the Spanish officials to this frontier and several expeditions were sent into the North Bay region to determine the nature and extent of the Russian settlements.

In September, 1810, after having received reports of the Russians at Bodega, Gabriel Moraga made an expedition to Tomales and Bodega Bays and on through the interior of the Sonoma region. In 1817 San Rafael Mission was established north of the bay. The padres were concerned chiefly with the welfare of their In wards, but it is probable that the governme officials were much more willing to sanction new establishment because of its value as outpost against Russian advances. The fo ing of the Sonoma Mission, six years later, even more closely connected with plans to pose Russian expansion.

MISSION SAN FRANCISCO SOLANO.

The mission of San Francisco Solano, twenty-first and last of the California miss was established in 1823, under peculiar circ stances. In 1822, at a conference between church authorities and the governor of Cal nia, it had been decided to transfer the mi of San Francisco from the peninsula to "northeastern contra costa on the gentile tier." This decision was based on the com tive sterility of the old site, insalubrity of peninsula climate, better opportunities for version in the north, and the success of the perimental founding of the San Rafael bra Nothing more was done regarding the tra until March 23, 1823, when Padre Jose Alta presented to the diputacion a memorial re mending the transfer, and on April 9 the di cion voted in favor of the change. It was ag that the asistencia of San Rafael shoul again joined to San Francisco and transfe with it.

Regarding this contemplated transfer of Francisco Mission, it should be borne in that, according to the Spanish idea, from beginning the mission was purely an intsitu of the frontier and theoretically should completed the subjugation of the Indians locality within the first decade after its e lishment. It was then to be moved on to a frontier. It is seen, then, that the pro transfer of San Francisco was in line with plan. Many of its Indians had come from north shore and were discontent with thei at San Francisco. San Rafael had been e lished as a sub-mission in 1817, and now it proposed to find a new site for San Fran itself.

In accordance with this agreement, an ex tion under Padre Jose Altamira and Fran Castro set out January 25, 1823, for the pose of exploring the frontier for a suitable sion site. They passed northward around bay shore past the site of Petaluma and into the Sonoma Valley and on to the Napa Suisun Valleys beyond. It was the opinio the leaders of this party that Sonoma V was best adapted for mission purposes by re of its climate, location, abundance of wood stone, and most excellent springs and stre Furthermore, Napa and Suisun Valleys of opportunities for the establishment of the cattle ranges attached to the mission. On 4, a cross was constructed, blessed, and se on the site of a former gentile rancheria, formally named New San Francisco. Afte lecting and marking the site it was aband for a short period and soon all were back at San Francisco. July 4 may, however, pro be celebrated as the date of the founding o mission.

Since the approbation of the prelate was received by the end of July, Altamira wa structed by Governor Arguello to make a b ning at once. On August 12 Altamira took session by inventory of the mission proper San Rafael. He returned to San Francisco on August 23 started for New San Fran (Sonoma). Arriving there on August 25 once began work on granary, ditch, corral other needed structures. Although Augus is frequently given as the date of founda there is no record of any formal ceremony usual ceremonial acts having taken plac July 4.

All did not go smoothly, for the author of the neighboring missions, especially Francisco and San Jose, objected to the fact the new mission had been established wit proper ecclesiastical authority. Finally, ever, a compromise was made whereby it provided that New San Francisco should re as a mission in regular standing, but that ne Old San Francisco nor San Rafael were t suppressed. Altamira was to be the reg minister of the new mission and associate ister of Old San Francisco.

April 4 (Passion Sunday), 1824, the mi church, a rude structure twenty-four by hundred five feet, built of boards and w washed, but well furnished and decorated i interior, was dedicated to San Francisco Sc (the great apostle of the Indies). Since date the mission has been known by that n Ten years later it was designated as Sonom order to avoid confusion with the missio San Francisco de Asis. Padre Altamira plained that the ministers of neighboring e lishments used their influence to keep their neophytes from going to New San Francisco. On the whole, however, there was considerable progress.

A mission rancho of Santa Eulalia had been established at Suisun before the end of 1824; a provisional house for the padre's visits, with a corral for horses, had been built and a neophyte alcalde was in charge of the rancho. In March 1824 the mission had a granary, a padre's house and seven houses for the guard besides the chapel, all made of wood. By the end of the year one large adobe house thirty by one hundred twenty feet and seven feet high had been completed, with tiled roof and corridor, and two other structures had been made ready for roofing just in time to be destroyed by the unusually heavy rains. A beginning had been made of weaving. In the vineyard from 1,000 to 3,000 vines were growing. It is stated that an Indian uprising in 1826 destroyed the mission, Padre Altamira narrowly escaping death. The next year, however, it was re-established and rebuilt.

Between 1824 and 1830 cattle increased from 1,100 to 2,000; horses from 400 to 725; and reached 4,000, though as few as 1,500 in 1826. Crops amounted to 1,875 bushels per year on an average, the largest yield being 3,945 in 1826, and the smallest 510 in 1829, when wheat and barley failed completely. At the end of 1824 the mission had 693 neophytes, of whom 322 had come from San Francisco, 153 from San Jose, 92 from San Rafael and 96 had been baptized on the spot.

By 1830 the baptisms amounted to 650, the burials to 375; but the number of neophytes had increased only to 760, leaving a margin of over 100 for runaways. Notwithstanding the advantages of the site and Altamira's enthusiasm, the mission at Sonoma was not prosperous during its short existence. In 1834 the neophyte population had decreased from 760 to 650, and in 1835 to 550. There was a gain in livestock and but a slight falling-off in crops. The whole period was one of decline for the California missions.

In 1834 Mariano G. Vallejo was made comisionado, and with Antonio Ortega as majordomo in 1834-5, the secularization was completed. Movable property was distributed to the Indians, who were made entirely free, many of them retiring to their old rancherias. A pueblo was founded at Sonoma in 1835 on the secularization of Mission San Francisco Solano. Thus the mission community had no real existence after 1836.

PUEBLO AND PRESIDIO OF SONOMA.

The plan of mission secularization provided that civil government should replace ecclesiastical control over the Indians and lands surrounding the mission sites. In the case of San Francisco Solano, we find that it was followed by the establishment of the Pueblo of Sonoma. This was done by Mariano G. Vallejo in 1835, and the military company formerly at San Francisco was transferred to the new frontier presidio and here established with General Vallejo as commander of the Frontier of the North. A large plaza and pueblo with intersecting streets was laid out by Vallejo by means of a pocket compass and lines. Many ex-neophytes sought the protection and guidance of Vallejo, and other settlers were attracted to this new settlement.

Meanwhile, acting upon his authority as a Mexican officer, Vallejo had granted parcels of land to various settlers looking for rancho sites. Many foreigners were requesting lands in California, and it was felt that by granting them ranchos on the frontier toward the Russians they might materially help in holding the latter in check. In 1833, James Dawson, having become a Mexican citizen, was given a grant of land upon which the later town of Freestone grew up. Here, in 1834, he equipped a sawpit, and with a ripsaw probably cut the first lumber in California. That year a grant was made to John B. Cooper upon which he erected a mill—El Molino, a name which still remains to identify its location, although the mill was destroyed in 1841.

In 1840, Cyrus Alexander came to the region and left his name in Alexander Valley. Captain Stephen Smith took up his headquarters at Bodega in September, 1843, equipped with material for lumber and grist mills. His mill holds the reputation of being the pioneer sawmill in the state. As time went on, the settlements by Anglo-American and Mexican families were scattered over most of the more available sections of the northern bay region.

BEAR FLAG REVOLT.

Although the encroachment of Russians had been a source of worry to Spain, the Anglo-American invasion proved much more ser for it was ultimately to lead to the perma acquisition by the United States. As just cated, many of those people had come to fornia during the more recent period and been given grants of land on the frontier elsewhere. Many through marriage had be allied with the Mexican regime in a most fr ly manner. This was true, especially in southern parts of the province. In the n recent immigrants from the states, accust to fighting the savages for the possessio their lands, looked upon the dark-complexi Mexicans with a contempt similar to that for the Indian. When the Mexican official sisted the American advance, the result was defiance and revolution.

The story of the Bear Flag Republic ca fully be told here. Its importance was ecli by the greater events with which it me Nevertheless, it had within it potentialitie great significance. Early in 1846 John C. mont, who had been in California two year fore, returned for further exploration. His sion other than that seemed to have been tirely peaceful, but since he was an army of of a foreign country and had with him a siderable company of men, the Mexican off were naturally very uneasy. A rather presu tuous demand that Fremont leave the pro was met by a defiant stand. More sober tho caused Fremont to withdraw his men to Oregon, where he was out of Mexican terri Overtaken on his northward journey by a senger from Washington with a messag special importance, Fremont returned imm ately to California and went into camp nort Sutter's Fort. The atmosphere was tense suspicion and hostility. War between the Un States and Mexico was imminent, Mexican tility toward the Americans was evident, tre ery was feared.

It was under those circumstances that Americans relying upon the proximity of mont's forces began the hostilities by seizi band of horses being transferred from Son to Santa Clara by General Castro. Having t the first step, there could safely be no hesita or retreat. The presidio at Sonoma must b cupied. Gathering recruits from among American settlers along the way, a march made from Sacramento Valley to Sonoma, w

COUNTY SEAT OF "IMPERIAL" SONOMA

Mark Lee

(SECRETARY SANTA ROSA CHAMBER COMMERCE.)

AT THE HUB OF THE ROADS LEADing into vacation land in the geographical center of the five most productive counties, agriculturally, in California, surrounded by natural attractions including spouting geysers, mineral and hot springs, a petrified forest, towering redwoods, cool river beaches and rushing trout streams, the Native Sons of the Golden West from all parts of the state are to meet at the Forty-ninth Grand Parlor Session, N.S.G.W., May 10 to 14.

Santa Rosa, county - seat of Sonoma County, extends to all Native Sons and Native Daughters a cordial invitation to partake of her hospitality during this session.

CLIMATE

No article about California would be complete without mention being made of the climate and, strange enough, one of the first things which one thinks about when planning on attending a convention is, "What is the weather like in the convention city?" Records for the past thirty years show that for the month of May, in Santa Rosa, the mean minimum temperature is 43.6, mean maximum temperature 59.4. The highest record 100, the lowest 27, with an average rainfall of 1.29 inches, and with an average of five rainy days during the month. So much for statistics.

From an agricultural standpoint, the late Luther Burbank, world-renowned horticulturist and plant creator, after living in this environment since 1875 said, "I would rather own a piece of land the size of a good healthy house lot in Sonoma County, than an entire farm anywhere else on earth, if I had to live elsewhere."

Over a twenty - five year period the temperature in Santa Rosa has fallen below freezing on but a few days each winter, and has soared to a point where the heat was felt during but a few days each summer. This temperature change between summer and winter, however, is sufficient to be stimulating and invigorating.

Prevailing wind direction is up the valley from the south and west. It comes to Santa Rosa salt laden from the cool Pacific Ocean, perfumed and tempered by passing over redwoods and the blossoms of pasture, meadow, orchard and farm lands.

The average rainfall is thirty inches per annum, which makes irrigation for crop production unnecessary. This saves Sonoma County farmers from the cost of labor, water bills, and extra taxes which have to be paid by farmers in irrigation districts.

Santa Rosa boasts of long life, as exemplified by its Borrowed Timers' Club, composed of residents over sixty-five years of age, and having the largest number of twins, in proportion to the population, of any city in the United States. Because of the healthfulness of the climate, the productivity of the soil, and the picturesqueness of the scenery, the Knights of Pythias have located their home a few miles east of the city.

CIVIC CENTER AND BUSINESS DISTRICT, SANTA ROSA.
Looking Westward From Chamber Commerce Building, Fourth Street.

With the development of the surrounding territory by subdivision into smaller ranches, in the number of which Sonoma County ranks second in the State, Santa Rosa has grown to a city of 14,000. It operates under the free-holder charter form of government, with a city manager and five councilmen.

TRANSPORTATION.

Santa Rosa is served by two steam railroads—the Northwestern Pacific, which crosses it from south to north, and the Southern Pacific, coming into the city with a line from the east—an electric line, the Petaluma and Santa Rosa Railway, which connects with the boats on Petaluma River, and three auto stage lines, operating over the state highway.

A motor street-car service, with a five cent fare, provides transportation facilities within the city.

FINANCIAL STRENGTH.

The commercial, industrial and agricultural life of Santa Rosa is served by four banks organized as a clearing-house. The combined local resources of these banks is approximately $12,000,000. The bank clearings for 1925 were $26,577,953.72. These banks make money readily available for both operating expens and expansion in business, industry and agricu ture.

The postal receipts of Santa Rosa for 19 were $91,600.61. The building permits totale $521,797, covering 357 permits.

AGRICULTURE.

Santa Rosa has never suffered from crop fa ure, owing to the diversity of the products the farms of Sonoma County.

Based on the 1920 census, Sonoma Count out of the fifty-eight counties in the state, w the fifth most productive county, agriculturall in California. It stood first in production poultry, eggs, apples and juice grapes; secon in prunes, berries, field crops and silage; thi in potatoe fourth in c real hay fifth i cheese; six in butte manufa tured; ten in wool.

Sonom County far ers receiv the bes prices obtai able, becau of proximi to the lar population San Fra cisco and t bay citie and efficie distributio afforded b the many c operativ marketing associations and other agencies in t county.

That quality production is the aim of Sonom County farmers, is exemplified by their winning in the show rings, including horses, beef, dai cattle, pet stock (dogs), and their local poultr and orchard farms contests.

Rural development and social life are fostere by the Sonoma County Farm Bureau and P mona Grange. The office of the county far advisor and the county horticultural commi sioner being located in Santa Rosa, makes sc entific information and help readily availab in adjace rural se tions.

While there is no particular shortage in an line of business or professional life, opportunit awaits in this growing community all who ar wideawake, aggressive, experienced and prop erly financed.

INDUSTRY.

Santa Rosa's industrial plants, in addition t planing mills, machine shops and building ma terials manufacturing, include two large ic plants, where approximately 6,000 cars of frui are iced annually for shipment; creamery; ice cream factory; grape juice plant and a bottlin works: a large cannery; a pickle and tomato sauce factory; two leather tanning, one shoe and one leather and harness goods factory; two shirt factories; a macaroni paste factory, and the other smaller plants, such as bakeries, etc., which go to supply the wants of a community of this size.

Two of the larger factories are branch plants, which are maintained here because of favorable labor conditions.

HOME ENVIRONMENT.

The stability of the community is shown by the fact that about ninety percent of its families live in their own homes, the majority of which are modern artistic bungalows, situated in beautiful gardens where flowers and trees form an inviting retreat,—homes in the truest sense.

Modern apartment houses are available for temporary residence, and adequate hotel accommodations at reasonable rates extend hospitality to travelers.

Opportunity for religious expression is afforded through the eighteen churches in the community, all of which own their own edifices.

EDUCATIONAL FACILITIES.

Santa Rosa has always enjoyed the reputation of being the educational center of the north-bay counties. Here, complete educational facilities are provided in modern structures on a par with California's reputation. Here, the students under a highly efficient corps of teachers receive instruction through the primary grades, junior high-school, high-school and junior college. The curriculum includes part-time and night schools of high standing.

The public library, having 29,000 volumes, is used by over 6,000 patrons reading an average of seventeen books a year. The reading public is also served by morning and afternoon daily newspapers and a weekly newspaper.

SANTA ROSA'S NEW $375,000 HIGH SCHOOL.
One of Three Modern Educational Buildings Recently Constructed.

SOCIAL LIFE.

The spirit of neighborliness and civic pride in Santa Rosa is exemplified by the fact that there are approximately fifty organizations in the city which have for their object the development of the individual and the advancement of the community welfare.

Santa Rosa is the district headquarters for all the major fraternal organizations in this section, many of which own their own buildings.

Fellowship and development toward the i[deal] of community service is stimulated in the [fol]lowing service clubs: Rotary, Lions and Kiwa[nis].

OPPORTUNITIES.

While the City of Santa Rosa at present [af]fords advantages for a complete commer[cial], civic and social life, the entire north-bay co[un]ties district holds out to the prospective sett[ler] opportunity greater than that afforded by o[ther] sections. This is due to the fact that during [the] ten years from 1910 to 1920 the remainde[r of] California increased in population at six ti[mes] the rate of increase in this district.

Opportunities in other districts have alre[ady] been capitalized upon. Here, however, du[ring] the past four or five years, a more rapid de[vel]opment has started to take place and prospec[tive] settlers coming to this district now will be a[ble] to enjoy the increased prosperity which co[mes] from opportunities in a rapidly-growing c[om]munity.

NATURAL PHENOMENA.

California is looked upon as a land of opp[or]tunity, abounding with the wonders of nat[ure]. Sonoma County has its full share of these n[ov]els of Mother Nature in its geysers, petri[fied] forest and towering redwoods.

Twenty-two miles to the northeast of Sa[nta] Rosa, at Calistoga, one has the opportunity [of] seeing spouting geysers. Forty miles to [the] north, east of Geyserville, extensive deve[lop]ments are being carried out by means of w[hich] to harness the steam from subterranean regi[ons] for the driving of dynamos to generate e[lec]tricity for industrial purposes.

RECREATION.

In Sonoma County, the lover of the great outofdoors finds contentment in hiking, and hunting for deer, grouse and quail in the cool shade of oak-dotted and redwood-covered hills, and for ducks along the lagunas; in fishing for bass, salmon, steelhead and trout in the rivers and streams; in digging clams, getting abolones and fishing for halibut, rock cod and striped bass along the ocean shore; in boating and swimming in the Russian River, and in recuperating from fatigue at the many hot springs which dot the county and which have a greater variety of mineral waters than is found in any other part of the world.

The motorist finds adequate facilities for his comfort at the Santa Rosa Auto Camp. Highways and good roads, of which there are 1,600 miles in the county with Santa Rosa as the hub, make readily accessible the many points of interest in the county, and make it possible to take a trip over a different road each week-end.

Indoor recreation is afforded in Santa Rosa through four motion-picture theaters, at the largest of which vaudeville is shown regularly. Here are presented the main road-shows which visit the larger centers of population. Dancing is enjoyed under proper supervision in the many halls in Santa Rosa and the pavilions at the summer resorts.

The golf enthusiast is provided for by the Santa Rosa Golf and Country Club, on its ninehole course on the rolling hills east of the city.

The tennis player is taken care of by the facilities controlled by the Santa Rosa Tennis Club.

The Santa Rosa Baseball Club affords opportunity for those who enjoy the national sport.

COMMUNITY ENTERTAINMENT.

Inter-community good-will is stimulated by the annual community entertainments that are held in various parts of the county—Cloverdale's Citrus Fair in February, Geyserville's May Day, Healdsburg's Fourth of July celebration, Sebastopol's Apple Day and Petaluma's Egg Day in August.

PEOPLE OF VISION.

That the people of Santa Rosa are appreciative, awake to their opportunities and have caught the vision as to future possibilities, is shown by the fact that they are now developing a forty-acre tract into a park as a tribute to the late Luther Burbank; that they are now preparing a city plan to insure orderly development in the future, and a zoning ordinance to protect land values; that the community chest plan of financing relief, charity and social welfare work has been adopted; that they have taken the leadership in the developmnet of the Redwood Hig way and the improvement of transportation f cilities across the San Francisco Bay, and a aggressively furthering the project to bui across the Golden Gate a bridge which will tru be the eighth wonder of the world.

MUNICIPAL ITEMS.

The area covered by Santa Rosa is 1,390 acre

The assessed valuation, on a forty percent a praisal, is $10,771,599.

The tax-rate is: city, $1.37; county, $4.2 total $5.65.

Free water is furnished from the municip wells, up to 10,000 gallons per month. This a service provided by but very few cities. Twe ty cents is charged for each 1,000 gallons water above the free allotment. Water is al available from a privately owned system.

Electric light and power service is provid by two companies. The lighting minimum $1 per month, with a sliding scale from 6c dov to 2½c per KWH. The minimum for domest cooking, heating and power is $3 per mont with a sliding scale from 3½c to 2c per KW. The power rates are 4c per KWH for two hors power loads down to 1.8c per KWH for lar industrial plants.

The gas rate minimum is $1 for 500 cub feet, with a graduating scale down to 93c p 1,000 cubic feet.

Weekly scavenger service charges are 50c p month.

Adequate sewage disposal is provided at t modern sewage farm of 108 acres.

Santa Rosa has thirty-six miles of stree seven miles of which have graveled surface; t miles are rock macadamized, and nineteen mil are covered with hard pavement.

Police and fire protection is rendered by ficient forces.

Santa Rosa recognizes that frequently man facturers, wholesalers, retailers, profession men and homeseekers "find their city" while tending conventions. She is aware that t delegates to the Forty-ninth Grand Parlor Se sion of the Order of Native Sons of the Gold West will be outstanding leaders from this glo ious Golden State. She bids you come, parta of her hospitality and appraise her attractio and advantages. And consider the Santa Ro Chamber of Commerce at your service, duri your stay in "Imperial" Sonoma County.

"THE WORLD'S EGG BASKET"

PROSPEROUS PETALUMA, IN SONOMA COUNTY

C. A. Miller

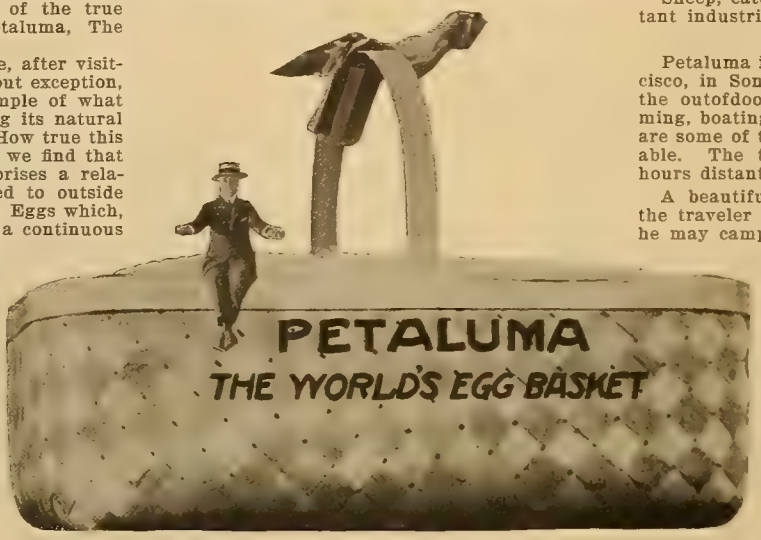
(SECRETARY, PETALUMA CHAMBER COMMERCE.)

WHEN PAY DIRT IN EARLY CALIfornia days began to run out, many of the sturdy adventurers who had been lured to her by that magic word, "Gold!", turned their thoughts to a new field and found a new gold far richer than that in any California stream or in the fertile soil of her valleys. History's pages are replete with the wonderful development of California's agricultural wealth, but on none of its pages is there a story more fascinating, more interesting or more typical of the true western spirit than that of "Petaluma, The World's Egg Basket."

Eminent men in all walks of life, after visiting this unique district, have, without exception, said: "Here is a remarkable example of what a district can do toward developing its natural advantages to the fullest extent." How true this statement is, can be realized when we find that the Petaluma district, which comprises a relatively small area, last year shipped to outside markets 29,212,372 dozens of eggs. Eggs which, if placed end on end, would make a continuous chain reaching more than halfway around the world at the equator.

The reasons of this stupendous production and unusual development are found to be a series of basic natural advantages and a spirit of aggressive progressiveness which has capitalized on them to the fullest extent.

The most important of these advantages is the sunshine, with which most of California is blessed. The year round sunshine enables the poultry to run outofdoors almost every day in the year. During the summer months the sun's heat is tempered by a cool breeze blowing from the Pacific Ocean, which is but a few miles away. The absence of extreme heat is an important factor, as eggs produced in a hot climate are of an inferior quality and will not stand shipment to Eastern markets, where most of the California eggs are sold. The maintaining of a high quality by care in feeding and grading, together with the natural climatic advantages, has built up a reputation for the Petaluma poultrymen which enables them to ship their eggs to New York and other Eastern markets and sell them at fancy prices.



The Petaluma eggs are uniform in color and flavor and, when marketed, in size. This uniformity has been obtained by all of the poultrymen specializing in the raising of one breed of fowl and a similar method of feeding. The single comb White Leghorn has been found the most profitable to keep, and is the only breed to be found in the Petaluma district.

In addition to ideal climatic conditions, the Petaluma poultry district owes a large measure of its success to the type of soil. Light, sandy soil with a gentle slope is a requisite for the successful location of a poultry ranch. Such a soil is found in the Petaluma section.

The backbone, as it has been called, of the Petaluma poultry section is the Petaluma River. In operation, the commercial poultryman buys all of his feed, excepting greens, and turns this feed into eggs. Each poultry ranch is a miniature factory. Feed constitutes the raw material and eggs the finished product. The machines are the 9,000,000 chickens in the district.

As in any industry, cost of raw material is an all-important factor, and the ability to bring by water direct from the grain fields of the Sacramento and the San Joaquin Valleys the bulk of the grain needed, gives the Petaluma poultryman a tremendous advantage over inland towns and other poultry centers. Volume in buying and handling also means much and enables the grain dealers to operate on a small margin of profit.

Another important item is the benefit derived by the individual through the opportunity of association with others who are dependent for their living on the same industry that he is. The combined effort of over 3,000 poultrymen is a tremendous force and has resulted in much beneficial legislation, egg laying contests, accredited hatchery projects, university experimental laboratories, co-operative marketing organizations, etc.

The vision of the early settlers is being fulfilled, and before another decade is passed it is expected that Petaluma will have doubled her present production, so that her yearly shipments of eggs could be placed end to end and make a chain of eggs around the world.

DAIRYING.

Because of the unique position it occupies in the poultry world, Petaluma is seldom considered as a dairy section by the prospective settler. The extent to which dairying is carried on can be judged by the fact that last year the Petaluma creameries made 4,551,244 pounds of butter, and the total value of the dairy products was $3,048,259.26.

There are thousands of acres of low-priced land in the district now being used by dairymen. On account of the uniform rainfall and ideal climate, natural grass grows abundantly and the general practice of the Petaluma dairyman is to depend on this grass for most of his feed. Wh other feed is needed, the same transportati advantages which the poultryman receives a helpful to the dairyman.

The failure of a dairyman in this section an unheard-of occurrence, and most dairym in the district become financially independe after a few years in the business.

There is a wonderful opportunity for t dairyman in this section. Land values are ceptionally low and new and up-to-date metho of operation result in even larger profits th are now received. The settler interested in cating a dairy ranch will do well to fully inv tigate Petaluma.

Sheep, cattle and hog raising are also imp tant industries in the Petaluma district.

PETALUMA FACTS.

Petaluma is thirty-eight miles from San Fra cisco, in Sonoma County. For those who lo the outofdoors, it has many surprises. Swi ming, boating and fishing, both river and oce are some of the many means of recreation ava able. The towering redwoods are but a f hours distant.

A beautiful, well-equipped auto park awa the traveler by auto, and in this beautiful sp he may camp until he finds his future home in Petaluma. Four public par are to be found here, and they a equipped with slides, swings, et for the children's amusement.

Educational advantages are supreme importance to any co munity, and the citizens of Pe luma district have reason to proud of their school syste Modern primary schools are fou in all the rural districts, and t to-date free auto busses bring p pils to the fine new union hi and junior high school. Spec agricultural courses are given, a night school is conducted for th who cannot attend during the da The public and parochial schools maintain hi standards and are recognized by higher insti tions of learning as among the best in the sta

All religious denominations are represent in Petaluma. Most of them own splendid bui ings and are well supported. There are fif six clubs and fraternal orders in the city, ma owning their own homes and being very acti

On account of the favorable transportation cilities, working conditions, power and other a vantages, Petaluma has become a very imp tant industrial city. There are seventy-six dustries, employing from t to two hundred fifty peop In all, over 2,600 are e ployed, and the total pa roll is about $5,000,0 Some of the most importa industries are flour and fe mills, silk factory, shoe fa tory, box factory, creamer railroad shops, tanner hatcheries, incubator a brooder stove manufactu ers, overall factory, ice a cold storage plants, chee factory and marble works.

The combined deposits Petaluma's banks are o $13,000,000, making it o of the richest cities, perca ita, in the world.

Petaluma is one of Ca fornia's busiest and m prosperous cities. It is "cash town"—the ranch receives his egg or da check weekly. Money plentiful, interest rates a low, and there are no cr failures.

The Petaluma Chamber of Commerce w gladly, on request, furnish any desired inform tion regarding "The World's Egg Basket."

SONOMA COUNTY

the party arrived early Sunday morning, June 14, 1846.

Notwithstanding the fact that General Vallejo had been and was still friendly toward the Americans, to these men he was the commander of the Mexican forces and represented a hostile nation. He therefore was seized and with others taken to Sutter's Fort and kept in confinement. The success of the movement now began to bring with it responsibilities and embarrassments. Although Fremont had entered into their councils, he had not taken part in their activity. Although they were American citizens, they could not be said to have the backing of the United States. They had taken down the Mexican flag, what should replace it?

Among the Americans was one man who was not abashed by success. This was William B. Ide, who had come forward as a leader. He proposed the formation of an independent California Republic. A suitable flag was constructed for the occasion and, from the fact that it had upon it a grizzly bear, has since been known as the Bear Flag. Not all accounts agree as to the original flag, but it seems to have been designed by William Todd. It was constructed of unbleached cotton cloth some five by three feet in size. In the upper left-hand corner was drawn in red ink a five-pointed star and opposite this a crude grizzly bear. The words "California Republic" were lined in across the lower part, just above a wide red stripe across the bottom.

Of the later history of this episode, we may best pass over without detail, for while up to this time no blood had been shed, during the subsequent operations lives were taken on both sides in a manner which did no great credit to those responsible therefor. Fremont soon convinced himself that the movement needed, or was worthy of, his support. With his leadership added to the forces already gathered, it would appear that the Americans of California were well on their way to do upon the Pacific Coast what their compatriots in Texas had done upon the Gulf of Mexico.

MILITARY RULE, 1846-49.

Following the Bear Flag War and the conquest by the United States forces, the town of Sonoma held a position of importance in the north bay region. Among the documents still extant are many that shed interesting light upon both governmental administration as well as upon the life of the time. Among the early of-

SONOMA COUNTY CREATED, 1850.

Upon the organization of California as a state, noma became one of the original counties, e county-seat being established at Sonoma. that time geographical knowledge of the state s limited and the population sparse. It is not rprising, therefore, to find that for nearly a cade the actual jurisdiction of Sonoma County s much larger than it is now. Although Mencino County was given a name and somewhat definite boundaries, as a matter of fact it was t organized until 1859; meanwhile it was unr the jurisdiction of Sonoma County.

During these years the increased immigration ifted the population of the district, peopling new valleys and creating new town centers. Along the coast section a settlement had begun at Freestone in 1849, followed in 1852 with another at Valley Ford, and the next year with others at Bloomfield and Bodega Corners. Further inland a beginning had been made at Sebastopol in 1850 with a store and postoffice, with rival towns arising the next year at Petaluma, Santa Rosa and Geyserville. Healdsburg followed in 1852, and Cloverdale in 1856. Thus it is seen that within a few years the town of Sonoma had numerous rivals, some of them even bidding for the capital of the county.

Chief among these rivals was the new town of Santa Rosa. In 1851 a store was opened there by two Americans in the old adobe built by the Carrillo family on the banks of Santa Rosa Creek. The next year a postoffice was established, with Donald McDonald as postmaster. With this start the town began to grow, and with an ambition so characteristic of rising California towns it felt itself the natural metropolis of the county and consequently entitled to the county-seat.

In the state election in 1853, Joe Hooker of Sonoma, later general in the Civil War, was defeated by Bennet of the northern end of the county because the latter had declared himself favorable to a plan to move the county-seat to Santa Rosa. A bill providing for a county-seat election was introduced and passed by the Legislature. The election, on September 18, 1854, decided favorably upon the question of removal of the local capital from Sonoma to Santa Rosa. The people of the latter place lost no time in effecting the removal four days later in proper Western style.

"On the day appointed," relates Robert Thompson, an early county clerk, "Jim Williamson, with a four-horse team and wagon, accompanied by Horace Martin and some others, went to Sonoma, captured and brought up the archives, amid due threats of injunction and violence from the Sonoma people, who saw, with no little chagrin, the county-seat slip through their fingers. The Santa Rosans had the law, wanted only possession, and would not have hesitated to use all the force necessary to get that. As it was, they captured the archives by strategy, and the dry and dusty documents of former drowsy old alcaldes were whirled over the ground as fast as Jim Williamson's four-in-hand could take them to the new capital."

The later history of Sonoma County is closely related to the history of the great commonwealth of which she has become such an important part. The story of the growth of her towns, taken one by one, would be interesting; her industrial and horticultural development would make a story worth relating; the wonderful contributions to the world of the remarkable genius —the late Luther Burbank—would be most fascinating. But all these do not lie within the scope of the present article. Sonoma, the Land of Romance, is still producing history.

SONOMA COUNTY'S NATIVES

(CLARENCE M. HUNT.)

THE ORDERS OF NATIVE SONS OF the Golden West and Native Daughters of the Golden West are well fortified in Sonoma County, the former being represented by five Subordinate Parlors and the latter by three Subordinate Parlors. Brief sketches of all of them follow:

IN THE "CITY OF ROSES."

Santa Rosa Parlor No. 28 N.S.G.W. was originally instituted as "Western Star Parlor" March 15, 1884, by D.D.G.P. Charles W. Decker. The name was changed to Santa Rosa June 1, 1891. It is not generally known, but there once was another Parlor in Santa Rosa—Marshall No. 176—but it consolidated with No. 28 August 17, 1895. The Parlor's present membership is 117, and it has assets of $5,833.94.

Officers of the Parlor are: Leland S. Lewis, junior past president; Alva Barney, president; Clement L. Miner, first vice-president; William E. Cook, second vice-president; Karl F. Stolting, third vice-president; Carl A. Patterson, recording secretary; John Hawkes, financial secretary; J. Ralph Williams, treasurer; Frank Luttrell, marshal; John W. Leggett, inside sentinel; William E. Evans, outside sentinel; John Seegelken, Thomas J. Hutchinson, Thomas V. Butts, trustees.

Santa Rosa Parlor has direct charge of the entertainment of the Forty-ninth Grand Parlor. In arranging an attractive program it is having the assistance of all the Sonoma County Parlors. No. 28 owns its own home, one of the substantial structures that grace Santa Rosa's business section.

N.S.G.W. BUILDING, SANTA ROSA, THE HOME OF SANTA ROSA PARLOR.

Santa Rosa Parlor No. 217 N.D.G.W. was instituted May 29, 1920, with forty-two charter members by Grand President Mary E. Bell. Katheryn Quigley Branstetter was the charter president. It now has a membership of eighty-eight.

The officers of the Parlor are: Lenora Mello, junior past president; Jemella Cook, president; Clytie Lewis, first vice-president; Beatrice Cook, second vice-president; Dorothy Thomas, third vice-president; Ruby Berger, recording secretary; Katheryn Branstetter, financial secretary; Eva Close, treasurer; Marie Mack, marshal; Leopold Vier, inside sentinel; Irene Burke, outside sentinel; Beatrice Jackson, Effie Thomas, Laura Quigley, trustees; Inez Mundell, organist.

IN "THE WORLD'S EGG BASKET."

Petaluma Parlor No. 27 N.S.G.W. was originally instituted under the name of "Bear Flag Parlor" by D.D.G.P. Charles W. Decker, March 1, 1884. It now has a membership of 98, and assets of approximately $1,000.

Officers of the Parlor are: R. Momboisse, junior past president; H. Sweed, president; Charles Weber, first vice-president; Al Smith, second vice-president; E. L. Mangin, third vice-president; C. F. Fobes, recording secretary; A. Wengen, financial secretary and treasurer; T. Moreda, marshal; H. Ronsheimer, inside sentinel; Ed Souza, outside sentinel; J. Murphy, M. Hickey, George Petersen, trustees.

Petaluma is the owner of the Vallejo Adobe, one of the interesting historic landmarks of Sonoma County. The Parlor has spent much time and money in preserving the adobe and in improving the grounds.

Petaluma Parlor No. 222 N.D.G.W. was instituted May 20, 1922, with forty-five charter members by Grand President Dr. Victory L. Derrick. Irene Tomasi was the charter president. It now has a membership of ninety-four and assets of $803.87.

Officers of the Parlor are: Ellen Sebesta, junior past president; Elsie Jennings, president; Dolly Seeney, first vice-president; Elmira DeCarle, second vice-president; Eva Pedrotti, third vice-president; Margaret Oeltjen, recording secretary; Valora Matthews, financial secretary; Josephine Tagleaferri, treasurer; Angie Miner, marshal; Florence Anderson, inside sentinel; Genevieve Ricioli, outside sentinel; Julia Perolini, Elsie Ricioli, Myrtle Vallier, trustees; Edna Meadows, organist.

IN THE "VALLEY OF THE MOON."

Glen Ellen Parlor No. 102 N.S.G.W. was instituted February 19, 1887, with fourteen charter members by Grand President Charles W. Decker. George S. Zane was the first president and J. W. Gibson the first secretary. It now has a membership of thirty-two and assets of approximately $1,000.

The officers of the Parlor are: Charles J. Pagani, junior past president; Frank Kirch, president; Lindo Gemini, first vice-president; Robert Kennedy, second vice-president; Louis Pagani, third vice-president; Charles J. Poppe, secretary; Henry J. Chauvet, treasurer; W. E. Cowan, sentinel.

Sonoma Parlor No. 111 N.S.G.W. was instituted July 10, 1887, by D.D.G.P. William McBreen. H. C. Lutgens was the first president and Charles E. Earrant the first secretary. It now has a membership of 125 and assets of approximately $9,000.

Officers of the Parlor are: William Bosch, junior past president; A. J. Kerner, president; L. Bosch, first vice-president; T. W. Palmer, second vice-president; A. Barracchi, third vice-president; L. H. Green, recording and financial secretary; R. A. Paali, treasurer; V. Eriebach, marshal; E. F. Robin, inside sentinel; W. I. Camp, outside sentinel; J. F. Prestwood, J. Kiser, George W. McGill, trustees.

SONOMA, IN THE VALLEY OF THE MOON

C. G. Murphy

(EDITOR AND PUBLISHER "SONOMA INDEX-TRIBUNE.")

SONOMA, VALLEY OF THE MOON, TAKES its name from the Indians who thus described the beautiful vale surrounded by hills over whose ridges the moon seemed to rise seven times. The Indian word "Sonoma," meaning "many moons," came to designate this afterwards historic locality. The valley which preserved it has been immortalized by the gifted California author, the late Jack London, in his novel, "The Valley of the Moon." At Glen Ellen, seven miles from Sonoma, is the Jack London ranch, where many of the author's famous books were written, and where he died in 1916.

Sonoma is best loved for its history and historic background. Its landmarks are the mecca of tourists from all over the world.

Many of the old adobes, such as the famous Blue Wing, the old Fitch House, the El Dorado of Salvador Vallejo, and the barracks still stand and are in a state of good preservation. With the Solano Mission, the Bear Flag site, the Vallejo hacienda and the home of such early history-making Americans as "Fighting Joe" Hooker and General Percifer Smith, they are heritages worthy of honor from all true lovers of California history. Successors of the grand old Pioneers have made the most and best of all they handed down to us and of all they recognized as supreme gifts of nature. The mineral springs of Sonoma Valley on the old Spanish grants at Boyes Springs, Agua Caliente and Fetters have been highly improved and are famed for their curative properties. Modern resorts have risen on the sites of hot springs where once the Indians came to bathe and fill their earthen jugs.

SAN FRANCISCO DE SOLANO MISSION

Sonoma was the Indians' paradise before the White man came. Abounding in easy living, plenty of fish and game, mild climate and abundant water, Sonoma's hot mineral springs were even then famous and used by the original inhabitants to cure their ills. It is not of record that the Indians were of a war-like nature, the grizzly bears being more belligerent, as American settlers afterwards found out.

In 1823 this Indian fastness was penetrated by the mission fathers, who came from Yerba Buena and San Rafael in quest of a site for another mission which was to be a barrier against the Russians, who landed at Bodega Bay in 1812, and evidently had designs on this country. Spain did not relish the Russian intrusion in Sonoma County and urged Father Altimira to penetrate this valley and establish a northern frontier.

Padre Altimira and a company of soldiers arrived in Sonoma in July 1823, coming over the then brown hills of Petaluma and descending into Sonoma Valley, which they thoroughly explored. Padre Altimira left a diary in which he set forth his reasons for finally deciding to plant the cross on the present site of the Mission San Francisco de Solano, as this most northerly mission was named. The diary confirms the belief that the mission fathers of California chose the garden spots of California whereon to plant the cross.

Many Indians were christened, and the mission, which extended its area for a mile about the place of worship, became a beehive of industry where agriculture and grape-growing were encouraged and a granary and tannery were put into operation. Mexico became active in California conquest and in 1834 dispatched General M. G. Vallejo, a young California-born soldier and statesman, from Monterey to become commandante of the northern frontier. The mission was secularized and Vallejo and the Mexico military command brought to an end the mission era.

SONOMA CITY HALL.

Vallejo ushered in a brilliant and colorful regime. He proceeded to fortify the presidio of Sonoma with cannons and to train his soldiers to protect it from aggressors. He laid out the pueblo of Sonoma in true Mexican style and near the plaza built a handsome residence with glass towers from which he could view the country for miles around. The plaza was his parade ground and upon it he drilled his troops, among them many young Indian war braves. Chief Solano proved a valuable ally among the Indians and greatly aided Vallejo in pacifying the tribes and in peaceful penetration of the country. There is no doubt that General Vallejo's presence in Sonoma County had the desired effect on the Russians, for in 1840 negotiations were completed whereby General Sutter bought out all their holdings. In these negotiations General Vallejo was an active factor.

During the Mexican regime in Sonoma a steady influx of Americans was noted—hardy Pioneers who crossed the Sierras and drifted down this way to settle in an equable climate. Fremont and his gallant aides were among those who appeared on the Western horizon and were destined to change the destiny of Sonoma and all of California. The Mexican governor of California and General Castro, who was in charge of military affairs, ordered Americans to leave the country about 1846 and then ensued guerilla warfare and the fomentation of bitter hatred toward the "gringo."

This state of affairs incensed the Yankees and precipitated the formation in Sonoma of the now famous Bear Flag party. It was here, in the shadow of the old Solano Mission, that the Bear Flag, now the California State Flag, was made and raised. Its history is well known, its memory immortalized by the beautiful bronze tablet erected by the Native Sons of the Golden West in 1914. A daughter of the Pioneer Mother, Mrs. John Sears, who gave the manta, or plain unbleached muslin for the making of the Bear Flag, resides in Sonoma Valley today, a beloved daughter of historic Sonoma, the widow of a distinguished Californian, Major Snyder, quartermaster of Fremont's batallion. The original Bear Flag was destroyed by the fire and earthquake of 1906 in Pioneers' Hall, San Francisco, where it reposed as a hallowed treasure.

The Bear Flag party's descent upon the home of General Vallejo on that morning in June 1846, and the arrest of the gallant Mexican commander was an incident of the insurrection which Sonoma regrets, but it was a part of the fortunes of war and the distinguished Mexican soldier and gentleman became later an enthusiastic supporter of the flag of the great nation which he anticipated would be the rightful and safe guardian of this fair state.

CARNEGIE LIBRARY, SONOMA.

SONOMA PLAZA AT TIME OF MEXICAN OCCUPATION.

General Vallejo helped frame the first constitution of California, designated the counties and wrote down the origin of the names for our state records. His service to California cannot be too highly commended. His home town of Sonoma flourished under his benevolent administration and the present city water system, built by him, was a real philanthropy, never a paying enterprise. The bountiful living spring, Lachryma Montis, on his homeplace, now honored with a marker, is the source of this water and continues to supply the residents of the community, although now owned by a new corporation.

General Vallejo died in very reduced circumstances, the wealth and the power which were once his taking wing, but not so his courtesy and kindly spirit, generosity and hospitality. To the last he was beloved for these attributes and his memory is dear to all who recall him. On the peaceful slope of the hillside above Sonoma, in the quiet valley cemetery, he rests in eternal sleep.

The presidio which he once commanded, and the plaza which he gave as a public park to be forever used by the people, are now the center of a thriving municipality. Sonoma City is a sixth-class municipality. It has a population of 1,300, with paved streets, a Carnegie library, $160,000 high-school, a beautiful brick grammar-school building, many fine homes, branch banks and business blocks. Two newspapers, "The Sonoma Valley Moon" and the "Sonoma Index-Tribune," published weekly, chronicle local events and have been instrumental in accomplishing much good for the community. The "Index-Tribune," which was founded in 1852 under the name of the "Sonoma Bulletin," boasts one of the oldest Washington printing presses in California in addition to its modern motor-driven equipment and linotype. Its publishers are W. L. Murphy and C. G. Murphy.

Sonoma Valley is famous as a fruit-growing section. The soil and climate are particularly adapted to apples, Bartlett pears, prunes and grapes. No irrigation is required and a normal rainfall each year assures bountiful harvests. A citrus belt in the foothills produces as fine oranges as can be grown anywhere in California. Sonoma Valley gets little frost and very occasional fogs, the hills surrounding the valley protecting it from cold and wind. The vineyards of Sonoma Valley are famous. Prior to prohibition the finest of California wines were produced from Sonoma grapes. Now the grapes are shipped East in great quantities and prices are higher than ever dreamed of by early-day vineyardists.

The poultry industry is a leading one of Sonoma Valley and Sonoma boasts the largest and whitest eggs on the market. Scientists attribute the white shells to a peculiar mineral quality of Sonoma water. The baby chick industry is growing each season and bringing added fame to the Valley of the Moon. Shipments east of the Rocky Mountains this season have been the greatest in the history of the business.

As a community, Sonoma Valley boasts several fine improvement clubs owning their own homes. It has a Jack London memorial library at Glen Ellen, women's clubs affiliated with the federation and a Kiwanis Club. Sonoma Parlor No. 111 N.S.G.W. has the largest membership in Sonoma County. Sonoma Parlor No. 209 N.D.G.W. is one of Sonoma Valley's flourishing and active organizations, and at Glen Ellen is Glen Ellen Parlor No. 102 N.S.G.W.

Five denominations are represented by churches. All of the leading fraternal orders have large memberships in the community and some of them own their own halls, including the Masonic and the Odd Fellows lodges.

The volunteer fire departments of Sonoma, Boyes Springs, Agua Caliente Park and Glen Ellen are most valuable organizations and have saved thousands of dollars' worth of Sonoma Valley property.

Transportation facilities have been augmented by several motor-bus lines since the completion of the Black Point cutoff through Sonoma to Santa Rosa, and excellent state highways bring Sonoma, Valley of the Moon, within two hours of San Francisco. The valley is also served by the Southern Pacific and Northwestern Pacific railroads.

For those who want to know the real hospitable California, revel in its romantic background and enjoy this Golden State, Sonoma, the Mission City, the cradle of the state's flag, the homeland of some of our most distinguished Pioneers, extends hearty welcome. Here, in the Valley of the Moon, is life truly better.

BEAUTY, PRODUCTIVITY COMBINE IN VALLEY OF THE MOON.

Was General Vallejo right, when he made the statement that he had traveled all over California and had reached the decision that the climate in and around Sonoma was the most delightful he had found anywhere? In analyzing the situation to discover the proof of this statement, draw an imaginary circle, taking Sonoma as a center with a five-mile radius, and within that area will be found a varied climatic and soil condition hard to duplicate anywhere.

Sonoma, Valley of the Moon, faces south, where the warm bay breezes ladened with moisture so temper the climate that an ideal protection from frost or heat is obtained. The high mountains to the east, north and west act as a protection alike from the hot, dry and cold winds which blow from these directions, thus giving an ideal climate for fruit production and proving a delight to summer visitors. It is therefore quite natural that the Valley of the Moon district should be one of the great playgrounds for the people of California, for natural mineral waters and a most delightful climate combine with scenery of unsurpassed beauty.

The soil conditions are so varied that, combined with the climatic conditions, they permit the culture of practically every fruit of importance to be found in California, and this without the usual resort to irrigation practice. The same moisture-laden breezes release their burden on the wooded mountainsides, to be carried down to the valley, giving the lands an abundant subirrigation.

Within the Valley of the Moon are to be found, in commercial quantities and of a quality ranking with the best, fruits ranging from oranges to apples. The mission fathers planted cactus, figs, grapes and olives. It was here that the first great vineyards of the state were established with vines brought from Europe. Shade and ornamental trees from all parts of the world are found. Palms from the tropics, flowering trees from the Orient and Australia, and corkoaks from Spain rival in size and thickness of bark their European parents. Pears, grapes, apples, cherries and prunes are the major fruits, with plums, apricots, peaches, quinces, figs, oranges, lemons, olives, walnuts and almonds holding secondary place.

To see is to believe, to sample is to be convinced. General Vallejo was certainly right. The best advertisement of Sonoma, the Valley of the Moon, is its satisfied, home-loving people.

CALIFORNIA TODAY

constant loyalty and devotion, greet California with protestations of pride, fealty and deep affection. She will always be to them as Seward declared her to be, the "Youthful Queen of the Pacific,"—youthful in spirit, youthful in beauty, youthful in ambition.

THE "TIN-CAN TOURIST" IS A DISGRACE TO THE OUTDOORS.

The spirit of fair play is one of the American traditions. It is met with in business, on the athletic field, and during the social hour.

Yet many citizens, both young and old, when they visit the national forests, seem to forget this spirit of the square deal. They play most unfair with the courtesy of their host, Uncle Sam. Tin cans, rubbish-befouled campgrounds, smouldering fires which result in blackened hillsides are all too common monuments to the American tourist's discourtesy. The "tin-can tourist" is becoming a disgrace to the outdoors.

The spirit of fair play in the forest always remembers the other fellow. He, too, wants a green forest to play or rest in, a clean spot to pitch his tent on, a pure stream to drink from. When visiting the woods this summer, remember to play fair,—do your share,—and help tell the other fellow.

THOUSANDS OF OPPORTUNITIES.

"Those of us who have been so fortunate as to be born in California should live a life of thanksgiving," says J. R. Williams, vice-president of the Exchange Bank of Santa Rosa and a member of Santa Rosa Parlor No. 28, a banking-house that was established thirty-five years ago by early Pioneers who had crossed the plains in the '40s and '50s, a bank which today is owned and controlled by sons and grandsons of those Pioneers.

"We should not only be thankful that we were born here, but that we live in this land of opportunity. North, east, south and west—throughout the state—there are thousands of opportunities that await the enterprising man or woman who has the foresight to see them."

HAPPY CHILDREN RADIO FROM EVERYWHERE

Mary E. Brusie

(SECRETARY N.S.G.W. AND N.D.G.W. CENTRAL HOMELESS CHILDREN COMMITTEE.)

THIS IS RADIO STATION N.S.N.D.G.W. broadcasting for the hundreds of little children and friends of little children scattered throughout this Golden State and some in other states of our country, who are all enjoying the blessings and opportunities made possible through the benevolence of the two organizations of California-born men and women—the Native Sons and the Native Daughters of the Golden West. The first message you will listen to will be from Massachusetts, operating through N.S.N.D.G.W., where there lives a little seven-year-old girl who wants to tell you her story in her own way:

"Dear listeners-in of radio land: When I was a tiny little baby about six weeks old my mother died and went to Heaven, and there was a lady in California, where I was born, who had lost her own little baby and was searching everywhere for one to take her baby's place. Through the Native Sons' and Native Daughters' Central Committee she 'chose' me. I tell my mother that when I die and go to Heaven I am going to run up and put my arms around my own mamma's neck, and then I am coming back as fast as I can and sit in her lap. She often takes me on her knee and tells me that while she loved the baby that was 'borned' to her and taken away, she couldn't have loved her any more than she loves me, and I know she means it because she is so good to me.

"After living four years in the land where the flowers are so beautiful and where the oranges grow and I could play outofdoors every day in the year, father and mother came here. Now we are living in an old New England home that belonged to their great-grandparents. It is a big white house with green shutters, and it sits way back from the road; trees are all around, and the lawns slope down from the great front door. There is an attic where I play and a big fireplace which Santa Claus comes down every year. I have my own room and a green enameled bed with pretty pink roses painted on it and a bureau in which my mother teaches me to put away my clothes. Bridget makes cookies and spreads my bread-and-butter for my tea-party in the afternoons, but I am learning how to set the table, and I can mend my stockings and make pretty dresses for my dolls—oh, such a big family I have—and I am very, very happy. But—I want a sister! That is why I am talking over the radio, hoping that the Native Sons and Daughters of California will hear me and tell my mother and father about her just as they told my mother and father about me."

Br-r-r-r. Interference? No, it's the mother speaking. "Friends of radio land, you have just listened to my little daughter who was born in California. She has said that she is very happy, but, dear friends, you cannot know how happy. She skips and sings and stops in her play to hug her father and me and to tell us how much she loves us. I wonder if you can really understand, you listeners-in, how great is the joy and comfort and happiness that she has brought into our lives. I wonder if you can realize the need we feel of living up to high Christian ideals that she—little human sponge that she is—may absorb only that which will make her a true woman. We thank you, out there where the West begins, for the California 'Sunshine' you have given to father and to me. God bless you all!"

This is station N.S.N.D.G.W., California. The next one on the air will be a little woman who lives in Southern California, who has just taken into her home a fourteen-months-old baby girl. "Friends of radio land: It is seven o'clock, and all is well! I suppose you would like to know how 'we two' have survived the week. It has been a mighty happy one for me, let me tell you, and for baby, too, if I can judge by her laughter and her dancing eyes of blue. Every morning by 8:30 we are ready for a lively day. Baby knows every corner of the house and every cupboard, but she never takes a thing out of place, or, if she does, she puts it back when she is told. She goes to bed without a whimper at 10 a. m., 2 p. m. and 6:30 p. m., a marvel of discipline. I wish you might see her run to her highchair when she sees food in preparation. The trying time of the day is when I am dressing her, as she squirms so. When night comes, believe me, I have a healthy tiredness all over, but she is worth every ache.

"Tonight her lovely hair was a mass of ringlets; with her long eyelashes, her rosy cheeks and dark eyes she is indeed a beautiful child. She has already lost that wistful look and shrieks with delight. Tonight there are bits of paper strewn all over the room and the sight of them does my heart good—for the first time in all these years the place looks like a real home. We cannot thank the Native Sons and Daughters enough for supplying this wonderful joy to us, and my one prayer will be that this darling little girl will never have cause to regret her placement."

Station N.S.N.D.G.W., Central Committee, San Francisco, California. Next on the program is a little babe in Nevada County, born in San Francisco on Christmas Day: "Mother tells me that she first saw me in a little white bed in a nursery where there were about a dozen other lit white beds with babies in them. The dain pillowcases and fluffy, downy blankets had been made and embroidered by the Nati Daughters of the Golden West. Mother tells that I was not so big or so plump or so pret as some of the other little baby girls in t other beds, but when I looked up at her a smiled (the nurse said it was 'colic', but som times nurses are stupid) and looked so whi and wee and so in need of 'loving', no oth baby would do. Mother puts her face down my neck and calls me 'Gloria, my Christm Child', and father comes in and stands by little white crib and asks mother when s thinks I'll be big enough for him to take me without breaking me. Mother smiles in her wi way, and laying her hand caressingly on h father's shoulder, says with tears in her ey 'She will grow all too fast, father dear; she giving us these blessed days of helplessness prepare us for our greater responsibilitie Father replies, 'Right-o, mother, as usual.'

"When I hear these tender parents of mi talking together I wonder if my natural paren (or unnatural parents, perhaps,) would be ta ing my development as seriously and would weighing every word and action as carefully le 'Gloria' should misunderstand or be given wrong impression."

Next on the program of N.S.N.D.G.W. is Jo Smith, a real problem: "Hey, fellows! Stati N.S.N.D.G.W. wants me to tell you somethi about myself. Well, I'm fourteen years ol My mother deserted me when I was about a ye old and somebody put me in an orphanage. father took me out after a while and let me r the streets. I liked that! But my father nev seemed to care much what happened to me a they put me back in the orphanage agai Through the orphanage I got into the hands the Native Sons' and Daughters' Central Co mittee and they have tried me in five differe homes. They said I needed a mothe so they moved me to another place, but th mother said I was too saucy and didn't lik school, and she wanted a boy who would 'tak an education. So I moved again. The next fam ily I went to thought I was a 'crackerjack' fo a while, and I was kinda on my best behavio but somehow or 'nother I couldn't keep up t their idea of things, and anyhow they wer going to sell their place and go East. Then was put in a family where they spoke Germa Now, I couldn't understand German, but I go onto it after awhile and knew when the ma swore at me in Germna, and that was enoug for me. I wouldn't have minded if he had swor at me in my own language—and anyway I didn do anything the way they wanted a boy of their to do, so I was moved to another place.

GIVING TO GET

WILLIAM J. FIELDS, Governor of Kentucky, defines co-operation as "Giving to Get." He said that he regarded that as a pretty good definition of the Golden Rule and decided to put it into practice and see what would happen. "The results," says the Governor, "were instantaneous and most successful."

The Kentucky Governor has struck the right note and he is only one of many leading citizens of the country who are rapidly reaching this same conclusion. There is no soft sentimentalism in the proposition, but just practical business insight. They are finding that in making their business plans the larger the number of people they endeavor to benefit, the broader and richer will be their own fields of opportunity and prosperity.

Mr. Leighton discovered this truth ten years ago and, like the Governor of Kentucky, decided to put it into effect and see what the results would be. And like the Kentucky Governor, he found the results to be "instantaneous and most successful."

The Leighton Industries, founded in 1916, have grown from a company with twenty employes and $3,000 capital to one with more than 1,300 employes and one million, five hundred thousand dollars invested, with the employes owning 99% of the stock and receiving 99% of the dividends.

The idea adopted by this company ten years ago is being put into effect in some form by thousands of concerns all over the country, and as a result wider and richer fields of opportunity are constantly being created for millions of people.

The public is coming rapidly to appreciate this kind of business organization and is supporting these concerns with their patronage.

takes and I'm behind in my schoolwork, and they get mad when I say 'Manners don't git you anywhere.' But it's a mighty good home and if I don't want my good friends in the N.S. and N.D. committee to get too sore, I've got to behave myself and do different. What I want to do is to work and earn money. I've got all the schooling any boy needs, I think. If I could get the N.S. and N.D. Central Committee, who look after me, to see it the way I do, there wouldn't be so many changes, but they say I've got to go to school. I'd like to hear from the fellows of radioland—you can address your letter to Native Sons' and Native Daughters' Central Committee on Homeless Children, 959 Phelan Building—whether you don't think a fourteen-year-old boy ought to be making money, running errands, cutting lawns, and other little jobs instead of going to school."

Station N.S.N.D.G.W. This is a six-year-old girl named Alberta: "I hear the programs about homeless children even way off here in Honolulu. One night I heard a voice from San Francisco. He said he was James A. Wilson, and he was urging everybody to go to a big masquerade ball so that they could earn some money for the work of finding homes for homeless children. I asked my father to send some money to help. He said, 'What will you go without if I do?' and I said 'A skooter!' Do you want to know why? Listen:

"When I was a bit of a baby, it looked as if my mother was going to need to give me away to some one because she couldn't take care of me. Somebody told my mother that the Native Sons and Native Daughters would take her baby for adoption, and so my mother with tears in her eyes and with her heart in her throat (that's the way she explained it to me), went into their office in a big, tall building on Market street and told her troubles to a lady there. This lady begged my mother not to cry and comforted her by telling her that it was not the policy of the Native Sons and Native Daughters to take babies away from their own mothers if any other solution of the trouble could be found. So they planned together, appealed to my grandparents, and finally placed me to board in a selected family boarding-home until my mother could make arrangements to have me with her. My father cared little what became of us, and after his death my mother found me a really fine father and we three are very happy together.

"I know that the adopted children we have heard from are happy with their new parents because I love my father who adopted me, but I want to thank the Native Sons and Native Daughters for helping my own mother to find a way to keep me. When I am eighteen years old I am going to join the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West and help them take care of children. My mother says that I have the right idea, and if she had been born in California she certainly would want to belong to an organization whose members are devoting their money and energies to such a worth-while purpose."

Station N.S.N.D.G.W., San Francisco. "I've been listening in on the homeless children stories from time to time, and tonight I want to tell you an experience we had in our family!

"One night about midnight we heard a little wail (you know that mother and father of three boys are quick to catch a baby's cry). I opened the door to find an infant lying on our doorstep, apparently a newly-born baby boy. Wife mothered him until morning, and as we sat looking at the tiny mite and wondered who could have been so heartless as not to leave at least a name or some word as to his birth, we began to discuss the wisdom of keeping him as our own. If that baby had been a girl we might have been less philosophical in our discussion, but we finally decided that we had about all we could do to rear creditably and educate our three boys. We inquired around and found that the Native Sons and Native Daughters were very careful in their choice of homes and had a great many—1,600—waiting most of the time where he could be legally adopted if, after sufficient time for observation, he was found to be physically perfect.

"We took the baby to a scientifically-equipped receiving home, called the Allen Jr. Home for Babies, where a baby specialist and a staff of three trained nurses looked after him together with sixteen other little ones. It was decided that if no parents could be found and no inquiries were made for him that the Native Sons and Native Daughters would select one from their hundreds of homes which they have assured themselves are 100 percent, and place him in it.

"Mr. and Mrs. Allen Ratteree of Los Angeles, who have adopted two children, built the Allen Jr. Home for Babies out of gratitude for their blessings, and with the hope of inculcating in their children the spirit of helpfulness to other children less fortunate than themselves. This home affords temporary care to infants whose mothers are under physical or mental stress and in need of financial aid.

"Two months later we saw the boy again. We did not know him. He made me want four boys. The workers told us that he had been chosen by an exceptionally good man and woman of culture and intelligence who refused to worry about antecedents and were willing to take a chance that the child whose history was a blank would develop into a normal child. I said to the worker: 'Have you known of other foundlings who have come out all right and been a credit to the family assuming the responsibility?' And she smiled knowingly and said, 'Not one, but many.'"

Station N.S.N.D.G.W., California. You have been listening to a program given by the recipients of blessings which have been bestowed by the Native Sons and Native Daughters of the Golden West. The 5,548 parents and the 2,274 adopted children have asked me to voice a benediction upon the two fraternal organizations whose members have obligated themselves to the noble charity of finding homes for homeless children. God bless you always, and may we all meet in radio land. Station N.S.N.D.G.W. signing off until some future edition of The Grizzly Bear. Good night.

UNIQUE BRIDGE TO SPAN GORGE IN THE HIGH SIERRAS.

One of the most interesting structures in the entire highway system of California is the bridge being constructed at the Donner summit of the Sierra Nevada Mountains on the Victory highway, near the site where, some years ago, the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West dedicated a magnificent monument to the Pioneers of California.

The bridge does not cross water, but spans a deep, dry gorge impossible of filling. Its arches and piers are laid straight across the gorge, while the deck is built on a curve, to accommodate the highway. At one end of the structure will be an observation platform with seats; from here travelers may obtain a wonderful view down the mountain to Donner Lake, where tragedy overtook, in 1846, that band of immigrants known as the Donner party.

The bridge will be finished some time this summer and will be formally dedicated to the California Pioneers by the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West.

LOOK TO YOUR HEADLIGHTS.

A spring offensive against all California violators of headlight provisions of the Motor Vehicle Act was launched April 1 by the traffic department of the State Division of Motor Vehicles.

Declaring that the glaring headlight must go, Will H. Marsh, chief of the division, issued an order to the captains of all county squads to have their men devote at least two nights a week to this important work during the summer months. More than 200 state officers will take part in the drive and scores of municipal and county officers will co-operate.

"The glaring headlight still remains one of the biggest problems of traffic safety," Marsh said in a statement.

until it has been cleaned and adjusted for another trial.

Excess oil or a particle of moisture or carbon on the plug will cause it to fail and when these are removed, it is as good as new, if the porcelain is not cracked. The space inside between the metal and the porcelain can be cleaned with a small blade and excess carbon or sediment blown out with air.

TO MAKE BRUSHES FIT.

When new brushes are fitted in the generator, it sometimes happens that they do not fit the curvature of the commutator surface. This can be remedied by placing the rough side of a strip of 00 sandpaper under the brush when it is in the holder and working the strip back and forth until the brush conforms to the curve of the commutator surface. This should be done for each brush separately.

Worn out starter or generator brushes should never be replaced with any except those supplied by the manufacturer of the car.

LEAVE GARAGE DOORS OPEN.

"Leave your garage doors open when you start your engine," is the warning sounded by the State Division of Motor Vehicles, due to deaths by asphyxiation from carbon monoxide gas.

"This gas is so deadly that it will kill any person overcome by it within a short time unless he is rescued," the division's statement says. "A number of deaths from it have been reported in California in recent months."

AUTO CAMPS OF CALIFORNIA.

The Automobile Club of Southern California has issued its 1926 edition of "Auto Camps and Camp Grounds of California" for the information of those who plan to enjoy a vacation in the great outofdoors.

The booklet was compiled by the club's outing bureau, and the information is authentic. The camps are listed alphabetically under the name of the nearest town or city.

Autos Kill Many—During 1925, 1,484 persons—including 202 children under 15 years of age—were killed by autos in California, according to the State Board of Health's bureau of vital statistics. The 1924 auto deaths totaled 1,364, 120 less than in 1925.

PREPARED ESPECIALLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY ANNA STOERMER.

TAFFETA RETURNS TO FASHION

The "page boy" is also seen in some of the newest cloth suits, that are to be worn this spring and are very practical because the flared peplum can be manipulated so as to correct a figure that is too wide, or can be made to suit the slim figure and emphasize the slender waistline.

Every jumper frock must have a pleated skirt. This solves, very cleverly, the problem always before designers of wresting last year's garments from the clutch of the woman who has grown attached to their smart practicability.

Taffeta has returned to fashion and is more lovely than ever when utilized for the more feminine gowns with bouffant skirts, flounced, ruffled or perkily draped. Taffeta, this season, has regained the popularity it lost when the straight boyish styles prevailed. It has become as smart as chiffon, but crepe remains the spring fabric and, of course, is very smart indeed.

The new taffeta is a glorified version of the old in every way, for not only is it softer but it will actually wash, an essential quality in gowns for spring and summer. Even the brides have adopted taffeta instead of the favorite bridal satin in some instances, and it must be acknowledged that it is very attractive and suitable. There is one great virtue in taffeta as an all-round fabric. It lends itself to the strictly tailored mode but is frivolously feminine when made into flares and pleats, or gaily ruffled creations.

The embroidered woolen shawl from Italy has returned to favor. Its new feature is fringe, which is silk instead of wool. Then again, the color selection is more varied. To the regular colors have been added the new rose and pink shades as well as a full range of pastels.

Large flowers are being supplanted by groups and sprays of small field flowers and fruit blossoms. Flowers of every hue are being received with great enthusiasm for wear with all sorts of costumes. Some new species have been introduced for wear with the new costumes.

Lacquered pansies, so fresh looking that they may be mistaken for the real, come in attractive little bunches. Then there are the large carnations in new shades of pink and lavender, and mammoth gardenias in shell pink and white with buds tucked under the leaves are said to be the latest fad.

For those who either prefer or require a flat shoulder flower, there is the one made of finely pleated georgette petals and having a soft silk floss center. These creations either match a dress or add a touch of contrast.

The cape has forced itself into the plans of dame fashion to such an extent that for the moment, at least, it has been strongly favored. Costumes with full bishop sleeves are very smart as summer advances. Very short, tight-above-the-elbow sleeves will be ultra fashionable. Just now many of the afternoon gowns are made without sleeves, except for the capelike scarfs which fall from the shoulders and are caught, sleeve fashion, at the wrist.

Many of the lace gowns have lace or chiffon cape sleeves, and the satin and woolen weave sport dresses have cape-like shoulder sleeves which can actually be buttoned in case the wearer wishes to really indulge in a game of golf or tennis.

The cape coat will maintain its present vogue throughout the season and be adopted for afternoon and evening wraps as well.

Speaking of coats and wraps, I want to call your attention to the fact that color, though it has been in high favor all winter, will be less elegant than black. Many of the smartest new models are of black with touches of fur on a huge collar of the fabric of the coat. Fur is not lavishly used, however, and the collars almost inevitably are narrow.

Regarding evening gowns, it is more difficult to be specific and say just what is what, for there is less novelty and less opportunity for it. As long as the sleeveless gown is in demand, one must depend on exquisite materials and chiffons treated in original fashion.

The "costume complete" is not at all complete without its matching or harmonizing accessories, and now there is something decidedly new for the smart woman. Necklets, bracelets and earrings of plain gold or silver in the form of a simple band are having a wide vogue, as also are amethyst bracelets and earrings to match, and link ornaments to thread through turnover collars and cuffs.

Collars and cuffs of cretonne, cuffs of embroidered edged material, and cuffs and collars of moire silk tucked in clusters are good.

Shoes combine linen and straw with leather. Heels are decorative.

Sports hosiery comes in all silk and silk lisle.

patterns in contrasting colors.

The new cotton fabrics are quite as fascinating in weave and coloring as their more aristocratic neighbors of the silk family. This season, they come in every color imaginable and every color combination. The printed effects seem to be most popular, and it is no wonder, for they are as diversified in treatment as the inventive mind of the designer can make them.

The novelty ginghams are most attractive. Never before has fashion so kindly made frocks that "twenty" and "sixty" can wear them with such equal becomingness. All women like to get the cotton sewing out of the way early, and the new goods are on display in all the shops.

Rayon alpacas are something new. The most decorative effects are obtained with stripes and borders. The tendency is toward a more subtle and less bold blending of colors. Then we have the plain color rayons to match any of the patterns.

Floral prints are favored in crepes. Chiffons, voiles and swiss organdies are offered in coral, rose, green, orchid, poppy red, gold and orange.

The fifty-four-inch bordered goods are popular because they make up so well into one- or two-piece dresses. The deep border with about a quarter of the plain for trimming is most effective.

Broadcloths, printed foulards and rayons are the three outstanding cotton fabrics of both imported and domestic assortments and are now on display.

A BIT O' FARMING

PROSPECTS GOOD FOR FARMERS

WHEN AN EARLY WINTER drought threatened the crops of the state this year, bountiful rains fell and the precipitation came near to normal. Only to fall far below again, however, as spring approached. April in California this year was a truly rainy month, though, and in nearly every section of the state the rainfall now is close to normal, in many places well above that mark.

As a result, the outlook is for the greatest yield of all crops the state has known, with anything like average weather between now and harvest. Grain crops have plenty of moisture to carry them through to maturity. The orchards in irrigated districts will draw from a mountain storage that is plentiful. The frost danger season has come and gone, leaving no mark of damage. Pests, while not lacking, have not marked the year as an unusual one and such dry weather insects as red spider should prove less troublesome than usual.

Altogether, it is a year of unusual prospect for California farmers.

RADIO ON THE FARM.

In surveying the latest addition to the farm home that has added to the already long list that is fast breaking down farm isolation, the United States Department of Agriculture estimates that there are more than a million radio sets owned by farmers. In some states, from 25 to 40 percent of all farms are thus equipped. In California the movement is going ahead at marvelous pace, and today the farmer of this state not only is able to get entertainment and instruction, but valuable news as well. He learns of the day's market reports, the weather prediction for the night and following day, gets advice as to timely farm practice, hears agricultural economics discussed and is able to make valuable use of his equipment.

Adding to the programs in this state, the California Farm Bureau Federation has been broadcasting programs designed to aid the farmers, and its venture, while perhaps not financially successful for the organization, has been most helpful to the farmer who has listened in. With the development of the radio, its improvements will go far in establishing permanency in its use for the benefit of agriculture.

BETTER LIVESTOCK ENCOURAGED.

An impetus to the movement toward better livestock has been given by the railroads of the Pacific Coast, in their announcement of half-fare for registered stock transported for breeding purposes. This reduction has been made to encourage the breeding of better stock in the West and to assist stockmen who wish to improve their herds and flocks by the use of pure-bred sires. As the rate applies to less than car lots, the small breeder is given a chance to benefit. Certificates of registration must be furnished when shipping.

WATERGLASS FOR TREE WOUNDS.

There has been much discussion concerning the proper treatment of scars on fruit trees caused by cutting off limbs. Grade D asphaltum has been generally recommended, but there are many who do not like this, and who claim, evidently with some good grounds, that injury follows. White lead and raw linseed oil make a paint that gives satisfaction. Recently waterglass has been suggested and many orchardists who have used it during the pruning season say it makes a hard and permanent coat over the wound that is not as liable to check as the lead and oil, and stays put better than asphaltum.

CATTLEMEN'S ASSOCIATION ACTIVE.

That the California cattlemen may have a knowledge of the probable offerings during the run of grass-fed cattle in the markets of this state, the California Cattlemen's Association is conducting a survey as to the available supply from all the Western states. While the California organization cannot hope to control the flow of cattle over this large territory, it can put its members in a position where they can sell their own holdings at the most opportune time, by putting them in possession of the facts.

SMALL FRUITGROWERS UNITE.

Consider the small fruitgrower and his problems on his half-acre or two-acre tract, with more produce than he can use, yet not enough to enable him to go about marketing it himself. County Horticultural Commissioner H. M. Kingwill of Glenn County saw this problem and did consider it. He called together all who thought they might profit by organization, and some fifty men responded.

They formed a marketing organization, a small co-operative, which will market for them the fruit that heretofore has gone to waste. Standards will be watched and quality stressed, according to the program; and if this plan is faithfully followed the experiment will be worth while. And it ought to furnish material for thought to thousands and thousands of "little landers" throughout the state.

SUBSTITUTE FOR POULTRY.

Codliver oil as a substitute for green feed and sunshine is gaining in popularity. Mixed one percent by weight with dry mash, the hens do not refuse it, and they get twice as much vitamine A as they would get from green feed and twice as much vitamine D as from sunshine. But before it is generally adopted, the poultrymen will do well to wait until they hear how egg production is affected. There are few parts of California where sunshine and green feed are not available the year round. Codliver oil sti is in the experimental stage. Sunshine an greens have been proved.

TO EXTERMINATE CITRUS PEST.

Plans are under way for the extermination the citrus white fly in Sacramento, Marysvil and Yuba City, where the pest is not econon ically serious, but is believed to threaten th citrus fruits of the southern counties. A frien ly suit will be instituted at once to stop possib injunctions when the season for exterminatio arrives next winter. The State Department Agriculture will take charge of the work, and circumstances are at all favorable, one less pe will answer rollcall next spring.

DIVERSIFICATION PREVENTS LOSS.

Many districts in California have gained fan through the production of some one crop. Mo districts grow but two or three crops. Howeve the farmer who diversifies enough that his eg are not all in one basket, often is saved fro financial difficulties when the single specialt through climatic, pest or marketing difficulties, shows red ink on the farm balance sheet.

And in diversification, those farmers who have been most successful are those who have had at least a few head of stock on their farms. It may be that turning unprofitable produce into milk or meat saved the day. Perhaps the manure made the yields good enough that the land yielded above the loss mark. Or perhaps it was just that he was fortunate to have a livestock product to sell when produce of the soil was not profitable. Few good farmers ever have lost money on good livestock.

DEVELOPING EMBRYO FARMERS.

Three thousand boys and girls in California last year learned practical farming through agricultural club work in schools or under the tutelage of the Agricultural Extension Service of the University of California. The machinery was loaded to its capacity, and this year a system of local leadership has been installed, whereby men and women in various communities take the responsibility of developing the embryo farmers.

As a result, the club membership has been increased 50 percent, and there are now 4,500 boys and girls working with agricultural teachers in schools, with farm advisers and club leaders, and with the 432 local leaders who have volunteered for the work. Another and most potent means of teaching agriculture, and of interesting the youngsters in the farm and keeping them there.

FLORIDA MENACES ORANGEGROWERS.

California supplies 60 percent of the oranges consumed in the United States and Canada, according to the annual report of General Manager E. D. Dezell of the California Fruit Exchange. In this state practically all the crop moves to market in an orderly manner, gluts are prevented and prices controlled. But Florida continues a menace to the orangegrower of this state. Unorganized, its fruit not standardized, its plantings increasing, producers there throw their fruit on the market in great quantities, and with a big crop so glut the market that prices are demoralized.

A result, of course, is that California growers suffer. The proposition recently has been made to organize Florida at the expense of California growers; and this bit of apparent philanthropy might be a stroke of good business. As well as aiding Florida growers, its cost would be saved many times over in a single year of big production.

LOOK OUT FOR MILDEW.

Watch out for mildew on grapes. Maybe this year it won't be bad, but again it may, and there is no use taking chances. Dust thoroughly with sulphur when the canes are half a foot long, again when they have added another foot, a third time when they are two and a half or three feet long, and be always on the lookout. The cost of the control is small in proportion to the insurance benefits it gives.

ELM LEAF BEETLE A PROBLEM.

The elm leaf beetle appears to have spread rapidly last year, and this year has appeared in several new places, according to report. Starting with an infestation two years ago in Fresno, probably brought by automobile from Oregon, this pest has killed hundreds of beautiful shade trees in cities and on farms. The remedy is arsenical spray, difficult to apply on the great trees so often gracing older farms. Truly a lesson on quarantine, but a problem to the San Joaquin Valley right now and probably to the whole state in the near future.

THE THIN BLUE LINE GROWS THINNER

IT HAS BEEN SIXTY-ONE YEARS SINCE the Civil War ended, sixty-five years since it started. Almost a full lifetime, as measured by the customary "three score years and ten." Small wonder, then, that of the 2,620,272 "boys in blue" who marched away in those stirring days, singing "We Are Coming, Father Abraham," only 115,000 are still living.

Of the total, approximately 360,000 died during the war on Southern battlefields or in hospitals. More than two million more have since answered the last roll-call. Only a meagre handful remain, and they are passing, the Federal War Department tells us, at the rate of 1,500 a month.

The rifles of that historic war were still spitting lead, and the big guns were still booming, when Major B. F. Stevenson and Chaplain W. J. Rutledge of the Fourteenth Illinois Infantry, Sherman's Army, conceived the idea of a great soldier organization to follow the close of the war.

February 12, 1866, at Springfield, Illinois, in the office of Major Stevenson, who was a physician in private life, the Grand Army of the Republic was born. Dr. Stevenson was its first commander-in-chief. Two months later, Post No. 1 was mustered in at Decatur, Illinois. The first national encampment was held in November of 1866 at Indianapolis, Indiana.

The new organization grew rapidly. By 1878, twelve years after it was founded, the membership totaled 31,016. Each succeeding year saw an increase, until, in 1890, the membership achieved a total of 409,489. From then on, it dwindled, slowly at first, then more rapidly.

There are now less than 50,000 living members, and for the last few years the membership has been decreasing about 10,000 annually.

Each year since its birth, the Grand Army of the Republic has held a national encampment. The largest one ever held was at Boston in 1890, the year when the organization attained its greatest membership. During that encampment, almost 50,000 "boys in blue" marched through the streets of Boston with flags flying, fifes shrilling and drums tum-de-tumming. It was the largest parade of ex-soldiers that America had ever seen. On they came, filling the streets from curb to curb, marching with firm step, their heads erect and their eyes sparkling, apparently an endless procession of soldierly, virile American manhood. The nation thrilled and applauded.

Again in 1924, two years ago, the Grand Army of the Republic paraded through those same Boston streets. But it was no endless procession this time. Instead, it was a thin blue line—a line that had been growing thinner year by year. The youngest of the marchers was past seventy. He had been a drummer boy of ten in the war. The average age of those 1,900 men for there were less than 2,000 of them marching, with 3,000 more following behind in automobiles—was eighty-one.

Long before the parade was scheduled to start, a drizzling rain began to fall. Just as the column started to move, the drizzle turned into a steady downpour. But there was no hesitating, no desertions. With their hats dripping, their coats and trousers soaked, their flags soggy on the staff, those 1,900 aged veterans, buoyed up by the spirit that had fired them sixty years before, trudged on through the downpour. Many of them carried umbrellas, but the umbrellas were closed, the men who carried them obviously scorning to seek even that slight protection. Several of the marchers were on crutches. On they marched, shoulders bent but spirit undaunted, drums rolling and fifes shrilling, while the rain fell in torrents and the dense crowds banked along the route took a drenching to stand by and cheer themselves hoarse.

Such was the spirit of the men who rallied around the colors, as youths, more than sixty years ago, and such is the spirit of those men who today are the survivors of that gallant army which saved the American Union from dismemberment.

DEPARTMENT ENCAMPMENT IN PASADENA, MAY 16-22.

It has been eight years since a national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic was last held on the Pacific Coast, fourteen years since one was held in California. The 1918 national encampment was held at Portland, the 1912 encampment at Los Angeles. San Francisco has entertained the national encampment twice, once in 1886 and again in 1903.

Each year, however, a department encampment is held. The annual encampment of the California and Nevada Department, Grand Army of the Republic, together with the conventions of its five auxiliary and allied orders, was held in Sacramento last year. This year it is to be held in Pasadena.

The department was organized May 1, 1867, about a year after the Grand Army was founded. Like the national organization, of which it is a part, its membership has slowly but very steadily dwindled. It now has less than 5,000 living members. It is expected that 1,000 or more of them will attend the fifty-ninth annual encampment in Pasadena, May 16 to 22. In addition, 2,000 or more of them will attend the annual conventions of the Woman's Relief Corps, Ladies of the G. A. R., Daughters of Veterans, Sons of Veterans and Sons of Veterans Auxiliary, all of which are to meet in Pasadena at the same time the department encampment of the Grand Army is in session.

This will be the second time that the department encampment has convened in Pasadena, the forty-second annual encampment having been held there in 1909, when the department was many times larger than it is now.

An elaborate program of entertainment for the veterans has been arranged by the encampment committee of John F. Godfrey Post, G.A.R., and the Pasadena Chamber of Commerce and Civic Association. The management of Busch Gardens, world-famous beauty spot, will be host to the visitors one afternoon, and there will be special excursions from Pasadena to Mount Lowe and the beaches, as well as sightseeing trips through Pasadena's noted residential districts.

Naturally, there will be a parade. The parade always is the high-spot of a Grand Army encampment, whether national or sectional.

Headquarters of the Grand Army encampment will be at the Hotel Maryland, famous resort hotel, and the main sessions will be held in the huge auditorium of the new Pasadena First Methodist Church.

The Grand Army encampment is only one of several large meetings and conventions to be held in Pasadena this summer. About 1,500 members of the California Conference of Social Workers will assemble in the Crown City for their annual convention May 9 to 13. The annual meeting of the California Mercantile Agencies also will be held here in May, and members of the California Osteopathic Association will convene for their annual meeting in June. July 1, Pasadena will be host for a day to 1,500 or more members of the National Editorial Association, who are to hold their annual convention in Los Angeles, June 30 to July 2. A sightseeing trip will be followed by a dinner and an evening entertainment.

The annual meeting of the California High-school Principals' Association was held in Pasadena April 19 to 23, and the Los Angeles district meeting of the Federated Women's Clubs April 6 to 8. For two days—April 10 and 11—Pasadena was host to 150 distinguished guests, members of the Garden Club of America, who stopped over here while enroute to their annual meeting at Santa Barbara. The two days were devoted to inspecting Pasadena's many beautiful gardens.

Pasadena is becoming more and more popular as a summer convention city, partly because of the city's beauty and partly because of the vast hotel facilities available in the summer, when the big resort hotels of the Crown City are not so completely filled as during the winter months.

WHEN DAN PLAYS

(MISS ESTHER CRONE.)

When Dan plays,
Most everybody stops to hear.
Sounds like it must be angels near
A playing harps of gold maybe,
There's such a flood of melody
Comes floating on the air;
'Tis so soft and sweet and rare
It spreads throughout the place
Like melted music filling space;
We long for the evening of our days—
When Dan plays.

When Dan plays,
Methinks perchance the angel choirs
Must listen and tune anew their lyres,
That they may catch a newer score
That broadcasts on the air to soar
Heavenward and touch the strings
Of gold and bear on wings
To realms above, to there repeat
The wondrous harmony so sweet,
And join it to their hymns of praise—
When Dan plays.

TWO MATCHES

One day there was a traveler in the woods in California, in the dry season, when the "trades" were blowing strong. He had ridden a long way and he was tired and hungry, and dismounted from his horse to smoke a pipe. But when he felt in his pocket, he found but two matches. He struck the first and it would not light.

"Here is a pretty state of things," said the traveler. "Dying for a smoke, only one match left, and that certain to miss fire! Was there ever a creature so unfortunate? And yet," thought the traveler, "suppose I light this match, and smoke my pipe, and shake out the dottle here in the grass—the grass might catch on fire, for it is dry like tinder; while I snatch out the flames in front, they might evade and run behind me and seize upon yon bush of poison oak; before I could reach it, that would have blazed up. Over the bush I see a pine tree hung with moss; that, too, would fly in fire upon the instant to its topmost bough. And the flame of that long torch—how the trade wind would take and brandish that through the inflammable forest! I hear this dell roar in a moment with the joint voice of wind and fire. I see myself gallop for my soul, and the flying conflagration chase and outflank me through the hills. I see this pleasant forest burn for days, the cattle roasted, the springs dried up, the farmer ruined and his children cast upon the world. What a world hangs upon this moment!"

With that he struck the match, and it missed fire. "Thank God," said the traveler, and put his pipe in his pocket.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

TOURING THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA

NATIVE SONS AND NATIVE DAUGHTERS

MAKE THESE PLACES YOUR HEADQUARTERS

A WORTH WHILE JOURNEY

A TRIP ACROSS TRINITY COUNTY, from Redding, Shasta County, to Eureka, Humboldt County, in the touring season over the Trinity highway, is worth anyone's time, says the "Weekly Trinity Journal," even if he does not stop to fish in the mountain streams or hunt for game, if the game season be open. The Trinity highway is a part of the Redding-Arcata lateral, which promises a way for the motor tourist from the great inland country down to the seashore. The entire route is under state maintenance and is partly graded.

There is an ever-changing panorama for the traveler—mountain chain on mountain, barren peaks that pierce the blue, clear streams, infested with trout, that mirror the green foliage overhead. Then there are the old towns and camps of the days agone, when the dreams of golden wealth lured men on from stream to stream. A land with a more romantic history cannot be found.

A few miles out from Redding the road leads through the old town of Shasta, once the county-seat of Shasta County and the metropolis of Northern California. The town is now almost a ruin, but the Masonic lodge, the first in California, the warrant for which was brought across the plains by Peter Lassen, is still kept in good shape. The lodge has a large membership, but they are scattered far and wide.

Tower House, too, is one of the landmarks, and if one continues the journey French Gulch, once a thriving mining camp but now a relic of former days rich in historic memories, can be seen. The French Gulch road bears to the right at Tower House, and if one takes this course the old camp of Deadwood, from the mines of which several millions of dollars were taken in the years gone by, may be visited. It is almost a ghost town now, only a few of the more hopeful ones remaining.

By turning to the left at Tower House, one has two other roads—the state highway or the turnpike, the latter one of the toll roads of the days of gold. Both routes are beautiful in scenic attractions, as is also the route via French Gulch. In crossing the divide between the Sacramento Valley and the Valley of the Trinity, one gets a wide view of the upper part of the Sacramento Valley, with Mount Lassen on the eastern rim and, when one has crossed the divide, the grand jumble of peaks and ranges of Trinity County bursts into view.

The state highway swings down beside the Trinity River, passing through the old town of Douglas City, once a thriving headquarters for hundreds of miners. The place once had its newspaper and other business concerns and was an aspirant for county-seat honors. Little is today left of the town.

From here, the road turns to the north, to Weaverville, the county-seat of Trinity County, the town that would not be on a stub road and that said so so loudly that all the north sat up and took notice. One may see many of the marks of pioneer days in Weaverville—in its old buildings and spiral stairways leading to the lodge halls in second stories, in its old court house, in the adobes, in its Chinatown with its joss-house—but one can also see progress in the new memorial hall, the well-patronized county library and other modern features.

From this county-seat town one travels westward, over Oregon Mountain and down the "gulch" of the same name that yielded its millions when the country was young and which was later made a dumping place for the La Grange placer mine, the largest hydraulic mine in the world up to the time of the world war, when low values and high taxes forced it to close. Yet some work is done there every winter, and the optimistic hope for better times in the future. Oregon Gulch once had its town, with a church, but it was deserted, and the debris from the La Grange buried it—perhaps for people countless ages from now to dig up and wonder at.

Junction City, a few miles beyond, and Helena, several miles further down the river, are

CALIFORNIA'S 1926 FUN PROGRAM IS EXTENSIVE.

Confetti, horns, gala colors, fun, prosperity, livability—this is California in 1926!

"The spirit of fun is progressive, increasingly inspiring, and more and more communities of the state have tuned in with California's waves of mardi gras and festivals." So reads an announcement of the California Development Association in calling the public's attention to the fact that there are more than one hundred celebrations taking place in the state during the remainder of the year—an increase of 33 percent over the festival program of last year. Some of the events listed for May are:

5-9, California lemon and avocado show, Oxnard, Ventura County.

14-23, valencia orange show, Anaheim, Orange County.

15-16, annual asparagus carnival, Isleton, Sacramento County.

17, Monrovia day, celebrating fiftieth anniversary city's founding, Monrovia, Los Angeles County.

20-22, Santa Clara Valley carnival of roses, Santa Clara City, Santa Clara County.

20-22, fiesta de la rosas, San Jose, Santa Clara County.

28-June 10, annual cherry fiesta, Beaumont, Riverside County.

also among the landmarks of the time that was. Many of the old buildings still stand to tell of a time when gold was king.

At the latter-named place the highway enters the Trinity River gorge, where river and cliff and mountain combine to furnish sights that please the eye and keep the traveler interested in what is coming beyond the next turn. Along the way is Big Bar, also an old mining camp, which could only be reached on foot or horseback until a few years ago.

Further on is Salyer, known as a fruit and nut section, and Burnt Ranch, a name given during the Indian war period. Then the road leads on into Humboldt County, to the sea breeze, through the giant redwoods, and to the hustling seacoast City of Eureka.

This road will be in better condition for spring and summer tourist travel this year than in the past, as the state highway commission is installing a maintenance station at Douglas City, which will have charge of the road during the coming season.

About five miles of the strip has been graded by the forest service, and although it is not paved, the grade, and the rock surface which is on the road in places, are in good condition, and under state maintenance will be kept in a good condition for the tourist traffic.

COTTON AND GOLD

AN INTERESTING ADDRESS BY DR. James A. B. Scherer, the recently appointed director of the Southwest Museum in Los Angeles, marked the March 23 gathering of the California Historical Society in San Francisco. Dr. Scherer took as his subject "Cotton and Gold," treating them in their important relations to the history of the country. He first drew attention to the fact that the Southern states were the earliest opponents of slavery. Not only were such prominent statesmen as Washington and Jefferson against the institution in their capacity of individuals, but the State of Georgia was the first to write into its constitution a prohibition to the importation of slaves. In 1790, the speaker pointed out, there were about 30,000 slaves in the State of New York, as opposed to about 15,000 in Georgia. In 1810, due to an event of tremendous importance, the statistics told a very different story.

This event was the invention by Eli Whitney of the cotton gin. Until that time the only American cotton of commercial importance was the Sea Island cotton, which was produced in a limited area along the coasts of the Carolinas and Georgia. Through Whitney's epoch-making device a vast quantity of upland cotton was made marketable; economic history was revolutionized, and the South became one huge plantation. At once the Southern states revoked their laws and set about fostering systematically the institution of slavery which, when applied mainly to the cultivation of sugar and tobacco alone, as heretofore, had become unremunerative.

Down to the year 1810 the South had been the greatest manufacturing section of the country. From then on New England, which was climatically unsuited to the growth of cotton, became the factory section. The two great orators and statesmen, Webster and Calhoun, interchanged views on the tariff; the advocate of free-trade favoring protection, and vice versa. It was not conscience, but cotton, that produced the Civil War.

The new South—Alabama, Mississippi and the rest—was opened up by cotton planters pushing out for more lands. From the first, the South did its best to dominate California. Even before the gold discovery had become generally known—that is to say, in May of 1848,—an effort was made to develop a transoceanic trade in cotton with the Orient. In this Senator T. Butler King of Georgia was a prime mover. But mining soon became the all-consuming occupation, and in mining, labor alone counted. Many of the miners were from the South, and naturally they were unwilling to work beside Negroes in the mines. Hence the convention which drafted a constitution for the new State of California stood solid against slavery.

Dr. Scherer added that it might not be an exaggeration to say that the gold of California may have decided the outcome of the Civil War. Hitherto the South had been far ahead of the North in the sinews of war. But in one year the gold production of the entire country leaped from $1,000,000 to $50,000,000. Cotton remained the sole asset of the South. Moreover, cotton is bulky, whereas gold is money in essence.

The discovery of gold alone helped open Japan to the world. The celebrated expedition of Perry has been called "the most important peaceful voyage since Columbus." Now, the whirligig of time makes it appear that cotton may be a prime consideration in the so-called "mastery of the Pacific." Dr. Scherer concluded with the significant remark that the time is now here for the intelligent disposal of all economic forces, if our terrible experiences of the past are to teach us anything. And among these economic forces two of the greatest are cotton and gold.

CITY OF BALANCED PROSPERITY.

For some time the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce endeavored to find an appropriate slogan for use on its own letterheads and those of its members. It finally selected the following: "Los Angeles, the City of Balanced Prosperity."

The Chamber feels that this is most appropriate, since the impression is still prevalent throughout the rest of the nation that Los Angeles is merely a tourist center, whereas it produces annually $1,202,000,000 worth of manufactured products and handles over 26,000,000 tons of cargo valued at over $643,000,000 annually through its port.

Another reason for selecting this slogan is that, contrary to the nation-wide belief, the industrial and commercial development of Los Angeles has kept pace with the city's tremendous growth in population.

Population Increased—Los Angeles City's population was increased by 12,000 April 2, when Watts voted to annex to the state's metropolis.

ABEL STEARNS: CALIFORNIA PIONEER

Pearl Pauline Stamps

FIRST YEARS IN CALIFORNIA.

ABEL STEARNS WAS BORN IN LUNenburg, Massachusetts, February 9, 1798. Little is known about him until he arrived at Monterey, California, in July 1829. During his early years he must have received a good education, as his letters of later days show they were written by a keen, educated man, with a good understanding of the English language.

Stearns' ancestry runs back to Isaac Stearns, who left England April 8, 1630, and arrived at Salem, Massachusetts, June 12, 1630, on the ship "Arabella." In 1622 he had married Mary Barker, the daughter of John and Margaret Barker of Stoke, Nayland, Suffolk, England. He came to this country a free man, and rose rapidly in the new country. He settled at Watertown, Massachusetts. Mary and Isaac Stearns had eight children. One of them, a son, Isaac Stearns Jr., born January 6, 1633, was the great-great-grandfather of Abel Stearns. He married, June 24, 1660, Sarah Beers, daughter of Captain Richard and Elizabeth Beers of Watertown, Massachusetts. Captain Beers was an original proprietor, a captain in King Philip's war, and was slain in battle by the Indians September 4, 1675, at Northfield, Massachusetts. Isaac Stearns Jr. settled at Cambridge Farms, now Lexington, Massachusetts. To Sarah and Isaac Stearns were born six children.

Abel Stearns' great-grandfather was Samuel Stearns, tithing man and assessor in Lexington for several years. His son, Thomas Stearns, born July 4, 1710, at Littleton, Massachusetts, was the grandfather of Abel Stearns. Thomas Stearns married three times. His second wife was Mary Heald of Chelmsford, Massachusetts, who was the mother of Levi Stearns, the father of Abel Stearns.

Levi Stearns was born January 12, 1765, at Littleton, Massachusetts, and married January 7, 1794. His wife was Elizabeth Goodrich of Lunenburg, Massachusetts. After their marriage they lived in Lunenburg, where Levi Stearns was a farmer. To them were born ten children, one of whom was Abel, our subject. His father and mother died within a few months of each other, in 1810.

In 1822 Abel Stearns was the owner of the schooner "American Ranger" and January 22, 1822, received a passport signed by the Spanish vice-consul, Don Juan Cualberto de Ortega, for the schooner to trade with the Spanish colonies.

It was in 1826 that Abel Stearns, young and adventuresome, decided to try life in the Spanish colonies. So he went to Cuba, where he met Alexander Forbes. Stearns and Forbes traveled together for several months about the island, after which they decided to move on to Tepic. In 1827 Stearns received a passport from the president of Mexico permitting him to go north, and in 1828 he was naturalized as a citizen of Mexico.

In 1829 Stearns, acting for Forbes and himself, left Tepic and went to Monterey, California. He arrived on a Mexican vessel belonging to Don Jose de la Guerra y Noriega, late diputado to Mexico. He came with the intention of obtaining a large tract of land, to be selected in the Sacramento or San Joaquin Valleys for colonization purposes, which was apparently for some claim the Mexican government had offered him. George Washington Ayer and Alexander Forbes, both famous men on this coast, were associated with him in this scheme.

After spending several months in Northern California in the employ of Captain Juan B. R. Cooper, Stearns decided to return to Tepic and to give up his colonization scheme. So he took shipping with Captain Dieppe, to go back to San Blas.

Upon entering the Santa Barbara Channel trouble arose on the ship, and Dieppe was forced to put in at San Diego. When the ship docked at San Diego, Stearns went ashore and became acquainted with Don Juan Bandini, a native of Peru who had come to California in 1802 with his father, captain of a Spanish frigate. The two became fast friends, and when Dieppe set sail again for San Blas, Stearns remained at San Diego.

After deciding to remain in California, Stearns re-entered the employ of Juan B. R. Cooper, and traveled for him, selling merchandise. In this way he became well acquainted with Southern California and seems to have selected his land, or at least to have reached a point where the action of the diputacion was required. This made it necessary for Governor Victoria to call together the departmental assembly, in order that he might enforce the lawof 1824, and the reglamento of 1828, providing for the granting of public lands to citizens.

MISS PEARL PAULINE STAMPS

Miss Stamps prefaces the sketch with this statement: "When I undertook this thesis with Don Abel Stearns as its theme, I had two aims in mind: first the collection of all his available correspondence and second, the writing of a biography of Stearns, including in it as much of the original material collected as would be profitable to the discussion.

"In pursuit of these aims I have searched through the manuscripts, newspapers, published and unpublished works in the Bancroft collection of the University of California, the manuscripts of the California State Historical Association and have interviewed many of the descendants of Arcadia Bandini Stearns and early settlers of Los Angeles County. I have not been able to compile a complete collection of Stearns' correspondence as there are a number of letters in private hands which I have not been able to secure. Among the owners of such letters is John T. Gaffey of San Pedro, California, whose wife is a niece of Arcadia Bandini Stearns, and who has a valuable collection of letters written and received by Stearns. He was greatly interested in my work, and secured from the letters in his possession a number of important items covering the life of Abel Stearns, and dictated them to me. I wish to take this opportunity to thank him for the service rendered.

"The biography of Abel Stearns has never before been written, and any success I have attained along this line is due to Dr. Herbert Eugene Bolton, who suggested this field of study to me, and who has been a source of guidance and inspiration to me. I wish to express my deep gratitude to him.

"Others whose friendly interest and aid are highly appreciated are Mrs. George Fuller and Allin Rhodes of Los Angeles, California, Dr. Owen C. Coy, director of the California State Historical Association, Joseph J. Hill and the other assistants of the Bancroft Library, who have so generously used their time to place before me the manuscripts and books that I desired.

"One of the greatest satisfactions that I have received in the writing of this thesis has been the friendly interest and desire to help upon the part of those with whom I have come in contact." -Editor.

In urging a meeting of the diputacion, Stearns brought matters to a climax between himself and Governor Victoria, who regarded Stearns as a sympathizer with his enemies, the party of padres and Vallejo, because he had joined with others, Californians and Americans, including Alvarado, Castro, Captain Cooper and William Hartnell, in energetic opposition to the flagrant misgovernment or mal-administration of Mexican governors sent here; and to the sending of felons to California as soldiers in large numbers.

Victoria refused to give Stearns the necessary permission to go from Southern California to San Francisco to attend to business affairs, and a few months later, September 23, 1830, he issued Stearns a passport to leave the country. Stearns was not given a chance to prove his innocence, but was "told to present his claims and complaints to the supreme government" at Mexico City. Stearns soon sailed from Monterey, but did not go further than San Diego or the frontier of Baja California.

Victoria, fearing that Stearns might make trouble for him with the home government, wrote to the Mexican secretary of interior in March 1831 explaining why he had taken these steps against "el estrangero, Abel Stearns." Victoria wrote that he had already, in many previous letters, written about the pernicious qualities of this foreigner. He now charged that Stearns had come to the territory with the sole object of getting land. His motives had been [illegible] one of the most [illegible] disruption. He had made common cause with padres and the other [illegible] disturbers of the territory, and had participated in all their evil and [illegible] designs. He had been active in a scheme [illegible] to get together the territorial deputation for the purpose of exercising his malevolent influence upon its members, and, among other things, [illegible] to give the writer of his official [illegible]

He [illegible] compelled to go to San Francisco by the writer, being firmly satisfied that it was only to meet padres and his accomplices, and to forward their [illegible] purposes had not only prevented the journey, but had ordered Stearns to leave the territory. Still, notwithstanding this peremptory order, Stearns had resisted. He had taken [illegible] public meetings of the people and protested against Victoria's orders as acts of violence. In those meetings he had made [illegible] representations. He had pretended, among other things, that the prevention of his journey to San Francisco had caused a serious loss to his interests and business, whereas he had, in fact, no business at San Francisco, or if he had, it was only in connection with one of his friends and countrymen, a certain John B. R. Cooper, whose only occupation was publicly and continuously murmuring against the governor and the supreme government, and claiming that the nation was indebted to him in a large amount of money and had treated him with great injustice. It was understood that Cooper proposed to present and urge his claims at headquarters, and that for this purpose he had prepared a number of certificates and other documents; but they were all fabricated by his partisans, and the governor would at any time be able to show their falsity, if invited to do so. But as to Stearns and the order requiring him to leave the country, the governor was entirely satisfied that he had proceeded with all justice and moderation, as in all his operations he had always done.

September 14, 1831, Victoria again wrote to the secretary of interior accusing Stearns of pernicious conduct, of plotting with padres to have the department meet, of trying to go to San Francisco to join the other plotters and of being a vagabond dependent on Captain Cooper. Victoria's hostility only served to aid Stearns in establishing himself in the feelings of the Californians.

July 18, 1831, Stearns sent a petition to the jefe politico, asking to be allowed to remain in the province and, apparently, to be exempted from a journey to Mexico, but whether he ever received a reply to his petition is not known. He did remain in San Diego, although he had been exiled from California by Victoria, and padres had written him, July 24, 1831, advising him to go to Mexico with his complaints against Victoria.

The revolution of November 1831 against Victoria broke out in San Diego, while all former revolts had been around San Francisco. The instigator of the movement was Jose Antonio Carrillo, an exile on the frontier who had stolen into San Diego. He was seconded by Abel Stearns, also suppposed to be in exile at this time. The real leaders of the revolution were Juan Bandini, diputado suplente to congress and sub-comisario of hacienda, and Pio Pico, senior vocal of the diputacion.

After several days of planning, November 29, 1831, they drew up and signed a formal pronunciamiento, and that evening, with about a dozen companions, started out to take possession of the presidio and garrison, which was used as a prison for the town and country. It was seized, and the comandante of the post, Santiago Arguello, and Captain Portillo were arrested. A commission was sent to Los Angeles to secure the co-operation of Los Angeles in this movement, in which aim it was successful.

The pronunciamiento, which was apparently the production of Don Juan Bandini, was made to embrace substantially the following points: the suspension of Victoria, the vesting of the diputacion of the political and military command in separate persons, and the provisional resumption by Echeandia of both commands. This pronunciamiento was finally signed, December 1, by Echeandia. In it Abel Stearns is referred to as follows: "The expatriation suffered by the citizen, Abel Stearns, without notification of the reasons demanding it, the scorn with which he was treated, the most just demand which with great proofs was presented by the very honorable pueblo of Los Angeles, leaving unpunished the public crimes of the present alcalde."

Victoria, before November 29, hearing that there was trouble brewing in the south, had set out to restore order there. The revolutionary forces met him and his men near Cahuenga, December 5. Victoria was severely wounded and was carried by his men to San Gabriel, December 9. He had a meeting with Echeandia, at which he was forced to ask to be sent to Mexico, promising to interfere no more in the affairs of California.

At the same time Don Juan Bandini, at San Diego, made a contract with John Bradshaw of the American ship "Pocahontas" to carry Victoria to Mazatlan for $1,600 in silver to be paid before sailing. When Victoria arrived he went immediately on board the "Pocahontas," although it did not sail for twenty days. The delay was caused by the failure of Abel Stearns, who acted as agent to obtain the money, to collect it immediately for Victoria's transportation. Echeandia and Bandini became responsible for its repayment. The money was paid over to Bradshaw January 11, 1832. Victoria had planned on having Stearns leave the country on the ship "Pocahontas," and it was by irony of fate that he, instead of Stearns, was a passenger of the "Pocahontas" when it sailed from San Diego to Mazatlan.

Meanwhile, in October 1830, Stearns had "a quarrel on hand with ex-alcalde Soberanes for disrespect, by whom he had been imprisoned, and justly as the asesor decided."

Little is heard of Stearns between 1831 and 1833, when he settled at Los Angeles as a trader, in partnership with Don Juan Bandini, who remained at San Diego.

A BUSINESS MAN AT LOS ANGELES.

Abel Stearns came to Los Angeles in the year 1833, as a trader, and remained there until his death, in 1871. During the year 1833 he conducted his business from the pueblo of Los Angeles/but, shrewd and Yankee-like, saw the advantages that would be his if he had a warehouse at San Pedro, and thereby could conduct a large share of his merchandising business from there. By having a warehouse at San Pedro he would be able to control the hide and tallow trade of his section. Before this time, when a trading vessel arrived at San Pedro it was necessary to send out Indian runners, who would notify the ranchers that a ship was docked at San Pedro which would exchange merchandise for hides and tallow. The cattlemen would then have to kill their cattle and prepare the hides and tallow for market. This necessitated a long wait on the part of the ships, and they would sometimes sail before the ranchers had brought their products to the port.

In 1821 two foreigners, William Hartnell and Hugh McCulloch, had obtained from the acting governor, Alvarado, a permit to establish a warehouse at Point San Pedro, about where the parade ground of Fort McArthur exists at the present day. They constructed a small adobe warehouse, but after a few years the project was abandoned, and the permit was transferred by McCulloch and Hartnell to the mission fathers of San Gabriel, who continued to use the warehouse for storage purposes until 1834, when Abel Stearns purchased it. He also obtained a large town lot at the same time.

Stearns immediately enlarged the small adobe warehouse and made it into a large quadrangular building with transverse wings; the latter were used as storehouses, while the center was comfortably furnished as a house of accommodation for strangers, drawn there by commerce. At the time of the remodeling of the warehouse Stearns headed a subscription list for the making of a better road from his place of business to the beach, which was the first public improvement work done at San Pedro Harbor.

The largest portion of the commerce of Southern California at this time was confined to hides and tallow, which were usually paid for in merchandise. The balance of the trade was made up in cash, and this was practically the only way in which gold and silver came into California. Thus Stearns, controlling as he did the hide and tallow trade around Los Angeles, received all the money coming in, which gave him a great advantage in his business relations. Up to the time of the discovery of gold he was practically the only man who had in his possession any real money.

Besides Stearns' controlling the hide and tallow trade of his section, he also traded extensively in lumber and had buyers in the northern part of the state who bought and shipped the lumber down to him at San Pedro. He, in turn traded it to the settlers in Southern California for hides and tallow. Another important product in which Stearns did much trading was wine and there was hardly a trade in which some wine did not exchange hands.

The trade between Stearns and other merchants along the coast was carried on by orders one upon the other. One merchant would draw upon another for so much merchandise, which the other would pay. The captains of the trading vessels would transact the business and act as middlemen. Orders were also drawn upon each other for debts, if they could not be paid in/any other way.

Stearns, about 1837, went into partnership with Henry D. Fitch and T. Temple in several trading vessels, and later Santiago McKinley entered the partnership. Fitch and McKinley died

A Dream Fulfilled

LESS than four years ago a group of clear-visioned business men looked upon an abandoned barley field and saw that it was good. They pictured on that vacant land a community to be the home of cultured Californians and a monument to those great builders of the Golden State who have passed into history.

Time, thought and labor have worked miracles on that barley field. Today it is Carthay Center, the new community of Southern California with an old historic background.

The Carthay Circle Theatre, most modern playhouse of the West, is nearing completion. It is the final fulfillment of that dream four years ago. It is unique in the annals of theatrical architecture. No effort has been spared to preserve within its walls those California memories of which we are so proud. Its murals portray historical episodes of the Golden State. They are done by artists of international reputation—masters of their craft.

It is planned to make the Cathay Circle Theatre a museum of Californiana. And the founders extend an invitation to all loyal Sons possessing relics of their native state to communicate with the Historical Committee at Carthay Center. Your co-operation is sought in making this theatre an undying monument to our glorious forbears.

ROBERT M. CLARKE
FOR UNITED STATES SENATOR

A "SELF-MADE MAN" who has cut many notches in the bow of his still young life is Judge Robert M. ("Bob") Clarke, progressive Republican candidate for the United States Senate.

Clarke is still in his "fortunate forties," yet he has been an assemblyman, superior judge, president of the Los Angeles Bar Association and its delegate to England, successful lawyer, harbor commissioner, freeholder, and several other things. Incidentally, he is the father of four, the eldest of whom is Thurmond, ex-Stanford "U" trackman and now his father's campaign manager.

"Bob's" father, a "round-the-Horn" Pioneer, died when the lad was an infant in Santa Paula, leaving the widow to support three children with the sale of needlework. Early the boy took hold of life, working his way through grammar and high-school and helping the family besides. His passion was for first-hand knowledge, and the neighbors tell of seeing him chatting with mechanics, lawyers, businessmen and all manner of men, asking incessant questions and drinking in their answers. He studied law while working, and at the age of twenty-one he was admitted to the bar. Prior to this, however, he had shown his genius for politics by having prepared arguments in the famous 16-to-1 campaign, arguments that were used by McKinley to capture California.

At the age of twenty-one he was elected to the State Assembly from Ventura County as a progressive over a strong opponent. At Sacramento he was associated with a man who came to be one of his nearest friends—the late John M. Eshleman. Clarke and Eshleman were "progressives" before the days of Hiram Johnson, and together battled for popular laws before it had become fashionable. He and "Honest John" were about to become law partners when the latter died.

JUDGE ROBERT M. ("BOB") CLARKE, above, and THURMOND CLARKE, His Son, Manager of the Clarke Senatorial Campaign.

Both are affiliated with Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W.

At the age of thirty, Clarke was elected superior judge in Ventura County. Following this he became assistant state attorney-general in Los Angeles. In 1920 he was delegate to the National Republican Convention. In 1924 he was elected president of the Bar Association of Los Angeles County, and the same year he was sent to England to study legal, political and economic problems of the Old World. He helped draft the Los Angeles City charter as president of the board of freeholders, and has aided his city's commercial growth as a member of the Los Angeles Harbor Commission.

Politically Clarke has always been Republican, a believer in the tariff and other planks in the creed. He has, however, leaned toward the progressive wing. When William Kent ran for the senate six years ago Clarke was among the few prominent Southern California Republicans to support him.

His chief concern recently has been for the Swing-Johnson bill and for water conservation for the state at large. When the water crusaders of Los Angeles were looking about for the man to represent their interests in the upper house they naturally sought out Clarke. His candidacy was sponsored by the Boulder Dam leaders. Clarke has also made a particular study of oil problems and farm matters.

Tall, wiry, active and genial, Clarke is said to have more people calling him by his first name in Los Angeles than any other public man. His office is a beehive for energy, amplifying the claim of his friends that he is not going to Washington because he needs the salary of a senator.

"Big times are upon us," Clarke says. "I want to help California, all of California, to grow. I think I can do it best by using my energies in Washington. That's why I'm a candidate."

As in rare cases, the candidacy of Clarke appears to be one in which the office seeks the man, not the man the office.

the commanding of the ships. In 1842 conditions arose which led each concerned in the enterprise to believe he was getting the little end of the bargain. The partnership was slowly dissolved, and it was not until 1845 that the accounts were finally settled. They were so badly kept that when looked into little headway could be made. Hugo Reid, in writing to Stearns about the loss he received in the transaction, states that "every dog has his day as the vulgar say."

Between 1830 and 1835 there were very few residents at San Pedro, and no local authorities, although a large portion of the country's produce was shipped there, and few trading vessels failed to visit it.

In 1835 Stearns was suspected of carrying on extensive contraband operations at San Pedro. Williard, in his history of Los Angeles, seems to think that the accusations against him for smuggling were brought about by his political enemies, when they could find no better method by which to annoy him, but Bancroft says that "Don Abel was perhaps not more addicted to contraband trade than Larkin, Fitch, Spence and others, but he was less cautious and less fortunate in keeping on the right side of the authorities." Evidence seems to indicate that he did, during his early years of trading, engage in contraband trade along the coast.

Early in March 1835 the citizens of Los Angeles complained to the governor of California and asked that Stearns' establishment at San Pedro be suppressed. A committee was ordered to investigate, composed of Romero, La Osa and Guirado. April 7, 1835, this committee reported to the ayuntamiento that permission had been duly given to Abel Stearns by the jefe politico to construct the warehouse at San Pedro, and that it had been constructed in accordance with all requirements. The committee believed it to be conducive to the interests of the community to encourage a settlement on the beach at San Pedro, as it provided traders with a living, and advised the administrador of Monterey, if he was suspicious that contraband trade was being carried on there, to set a watch himself.

It was not long before another complaint, to Figueroa, was lodged against Stearns, signed by Ramirez, May 16, 1835. It stated that Abel Stearns had built large warehouses on the beach at San Pedro, where he received goods of all kinds, and that only about ten or twelve miles from the shore was his Island of Santa Catalina, with a fine port, where foreign ships could enter and lay in safety and carry on contraband trade with him. By arriving at sunset, they would have time to unload their cargo before daylight, and thereby escape observation. It was asked that steps be taken to prevent this fraud against the government.

DONA ARCADIA BANDINI-STEARNS.
—From an Old Print.

No action seems to have been taken by Figueroa on the above accusation. So, May 29, 1835, another complaint was lodged against Stearns, and signed by a long list of names. It stated that no investigation had been made as to whether the warehouse was built in conformity with the ordinances of marine, with permission of the superior government, and with regard to the capacity of the building and the safekeeping of goods against dampness, fire and animals. It charged that persons secretly took hides t Abel Stearns' warehouse and that he bough them and put them upon ships without anyon knowing where he got them or to whom the belonged. It was well known that he had n ranch; then, whence came all the hides he sol to the ships?

He was accused of illicit dealings with me who went into the country and killed cattle bringing the hides to him to trade for goods o money, and putting them in the warehouse with out anyone seeing the brand. He was furthe accused of maintaining warehouses in solitar spots, in order to carry on these infamous oper ations where there was no guard. The signor petitioned that strict orders be given the captai of the port of San Pedro to remove the ware houses from that point, and that no permissio be given for the building of any in the futur except under proper safeguards. This petitio was referred to the same committee which wa previously appointed to investigate the suppose proceedings of Stearns.

September 29, 1835, the committee reporte to the ayuntamiento. The report stated tha the committee named to investigate the report of contraband trading by Abel Stearns found n grounds for despoiling a citizen of his legitimat property. "Therefore, the possession of th warehouse by Abel Stearns on the beach of Sa Pedro, which was acquired with rightful titl could not be taken from him. Since propert could not be taken from its owners, they hav the right to prosecute in the law those who stea it from them." The committee concluded wit the following proposition: "That those wh sign representation shall prove according to th law that Abel Stearns bought the stolen hide aforesaid." The report was signed by Romer La Osa and Guirado. Contraband trade wa carried on constantly along the coast of Cal fornia and it was natural that Stearns was sus pected, along with others, in having a hand in i

October 11, 1836, Chico issued a printed proc lamation of bando, on commercial topics, pro hibiting the retail trade on board foreign ves sels which had been so long practiced on th coast, requiring a landing of all cargoes at Mon terey, and imposing other restrictions more i accordance with Mexican laws than with Cal fornia usages.

Stearns, between 1835 and 1840, was a raigned for smuggling from time to time, bu

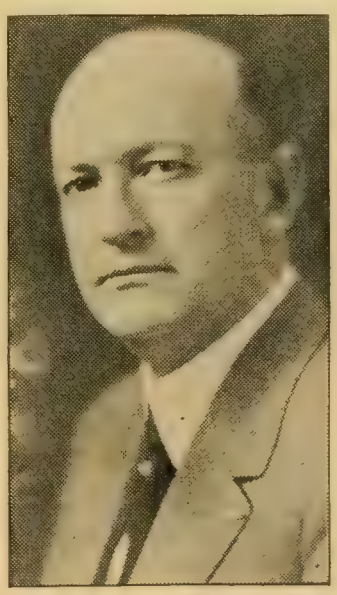
JUDGE REX B. GOODCELL, A NATIVE SON, ANNOUNCES CANDIDACY FOR GOVERNOR OF CALIFORNIA ON PLATFORM OF PROGRESS AND ECONOMY



NATIVE SONS of the Golden West throughout California are rallying to the support of Judge Rex B. Goodcell, who is seeking the Republican nomination for governor at the primary election to be held August 31.

Judge Goodcell, who is a member of Arrowhead Parlor No. 110 of Native Sons, San Bernardino, the city of his birth, formally opened his campaign in that city Monday evening, March 12, with an old-fashioned political rally. The Opera House was packed to the doors for the affair and Judge Goodcell's appearance was the signal for a most notable demonstration.

Automobile caravans of Goodcell boosters from all over the southern part of the state attended the meeting, at which Judge Goodcell made the formal announcement of his candidacy and made public the platform upon which he will seek favor at the polls.

Bands paraded the streets, which were illuminated with red fire. Mayor Grant Holcomb, also a Native Son of the Gate City, presided at the rally, and addresses were made by Mrs. J. Harold Barnum on behalf of the women's organizations, by Alfred L. Bartlett of Los Angeles, vice-chairman of the Republican State Central Committee who is managing the Goodcell-for-Governor campaign in Southern California, and representatives of a score of communities in the southern part of the state.

Vital planks in his campaign platform were elaborated in his address by Judge Goodcell, who was given a wonderful reception by the people of his home city and the delegations from other Southern California communities.

JUDGE REX B. GOODCELL,
ARROWHEAD 110 N.S.G.W.
CANDIDATE FOR GOVERNOR OF CALIFORNIA

For nearly twenty-five years Judge Goodcell has been a member of Arrowhead Parlor of Native Sons of the Golden West and he will attend the sessions of the Grand Parlor in Santa Rosa in May as a delegate from his home Parlor.

Some of the notable highlights in Judge Goodcell's platform are:

Republicanism: Always a member of and active within the Republican party. Endorses Coolidge administration.

Taxation: Condemns present system as unsound. Urges survey of taxation problems with a view to new system that will be equitable to all.

Economy: Economy, not penuriousness, in conduct of state affairs. Expenditure of sufficient money to care for state affairs, but no more.

State Commissions: Eliminate waste of over lapping commissions. Appointment only of persons having a thorough knowledge of work to be handled. Condemns spoils system.

Irrigation: Statewide policy of reclamation and irrigation. For Colorado River project and All-American canal, and other projects in every section of state to conserve every drop of water. Urges development of hydro-electric power.

Reforestation: Broad comprehensive policy of reforestation in connection with the Federal Government, irrigation districts and private enterprises.

Agriculture: Foster, promote and protect the agricultural, livestock and dairy interests of the state as basic sources of wealth.

Mining: Encourage in every way the development of this source of wealth on which industrial development and growth so largely depend.

Highways: Completion of original highway system as mapped out in 1909; new highways as warranted by the state's development; and maintaining in best of repair the system already built.

Recreation: Beauty spots at seashore and in the mountains should be preserved for all the people through more state parks.

Fish and Game: Wild life of California, not inimical to agriculture, should be fostered and protected in every way.

Education: Urges abandoning of unwise economy in the schools, which cannot be too good. Adequate compensation for teachers. Provide the best for the children's education, not grudgingly or sparingly, but ever avoiding extravagance.

Prison Reform: State's aim should be to redeem, not to punish, and thus lead the wrong-doer to good citizenship. Urges extension of road camp system for first offenders and those convicted of minor felonies.

Veteran Aid: Endorses Proposition No. 1 on the November ballot for a $20,000,000 bond issue to continue the veteran welfare work.

Summary: Purposes to avoid personalities in the campaign, to unite all factions of the Republican party in the state, and to obliterate factional suspicions and jealousies which have long tended to retard the state's growth and development; urges a well defined plan of development of state's natural resources.

"I wish to be Governor of California," says Judge Goodcell, "and if the people of our state so honor me, I promise to put service above self and to ever strive to promote the general welfare of all our people."

SEBASTOPOL, SONOMA COUNTY
THE HOME OF THE GRAVENSTEIN APPLE

George E. Burlingame

(SECRETARY, SEBASTOPOL CHAMBER COMMERCE.)

SEBASTOPOL IS LOCATED FIFTY MILES north of San Francisco, and lies approximately in the geographic center of Sonoma County. There are three outstanding features of this favored town, any one of which might be regarded as a sufficient distinction. It was the workshop of the late Luther Burbank, where for forty years he conducted within a five-minute walk of the center of town the experiments that made him world famous and enriched agriculture beyond that of any other individual or firm in all history. Sebastopol is also the center of the Gravenstein apple industry of California, and holds the unique position of being the one place on earth where this quite exceptional apple comes to maturity in early summer. Sebastopol's third distinction is its proximity to the Russian River resort section, one of the outstanding playgrounds of California.

It was on the 28th of December 1885 that Luther Burbank, after ten years of struggle and hardship, found himself financially in a position to begin in earnest the life work of his ambition, and on that date he purchased the Sebastopol farm. He had arrived in Sonoma County ten years before, from Lancaster, Massachusetts, and of this section he had written his mother and sister: "I firmly believe from what I have seen that this is the chosen spot of all the earth as far as nature is concerned. The climate is perfect; the air is so sweet that it is a pleasure to drink it in; the sunshine is pure and soft."

With the purchase of the Sebastopol farm Burbank said: "The project of devoting a lifetime to the work of plant experimentation was fairly and finally inaugurated." One of the outstanding features of Burbank's work is the amazing variety of fruits and flowers and all forms of vegetable life with which he experimented, carrying all these experiments along simultaneously. There is, for example, what we call the "400" of Sebastopol. "When I see mention in newspaper headings of the doings of New York's celebrated four hundred, I am sometimes reminded of the four hundred of Sebastopol," said Burbank. "By the four hundred of Sebastopol I mean a very aristocratic colony, comprising four hundred families of pedigreed cherries, that are colonized on a single tree in my cherry orchard.

"I could speak only from vaguest hearsay as to the lineage of New York's aristocratic coterie, but may claim to discuss the pedigrees of the four hundred of Sebastopol with final authority. And I can vouch for the blueness of blood, so to speak, of every one of them. That there are about four hundred families in my patrician cherry colony is a matter of accident quite uninfluenced by any thought of imitation. It chances that year by year the process of elimination about balances the process of addition to the family, and the census of the family is not greatly altered."

But in addition to a "four hundred," Sebastopol holds the distinction of royalty as well. There is one quiet resident of the Sebastopol section, royal in name and in fact, that has the distinction of founding a dynasty. Few here are personally acquainted with this chap although he has been among us for forty years. Indeed, few of his neighbors have ever heard of him, although knowledge of him extends to the uttermost parts of the world. Reporters from the "yellow" press have never interviewed him and no front page story, so far as we know, has ever featured him. And this is surprising, too, considering the fact that the most common terms that are used in referring to him are "grafts" and "nuts."

The resident I refer to is the original Giant "Royal" Hybrid Walnut tree at the Burbank Experimental Ground. This tree is an 1885 cross of Juglans Nigra and J. Californica, and it has well merited the name with which Burbank christened it, for it has for the past fifteen years paid six percent interest annually on ten thousand dollars in nuts and grafts. That its progeny is worthy of the parent is indicated in the statement of Burbank, that at sixteen years of age one of the trees produced twenty lug-boxes of nuts and in one year he sold more than a thousand dollars' worth of nuts from a single tree. Turning from cherries and walnuts we find that Burbank produced approximately 2,000 new varieties of plums.

SIXTY-EIGHT VARIETIES SOIL PRODUCTS GROWN WITHOUT IRRIGATION ON ONE RANCH IN THE SEBASTOPOL, SONOMA COUNTY, DISTRICT.

Lloyd Austin, writing for the "American Fruit Growers," has reduced Burbank's contribution to the fruit industry to hard figures and unsentimental facts, and presents an array which is so imposing that one would find it difficult to credit it if it came from a less authoritative source. "The best way to determine the importance of Burbank's work," says Austin, "is to compare the varieties which have originated elsewhere. A survey to determine the number of crates of each plum variety shipped in 1924 by the leading California fruit-shipping companies has recently been completed by the writer. The results show that the Burbank varieties constitute over 67 percent of all the plums shipped in 1924. A total of 91 varieties were reported by the different companies. Of the 24 most important varieties, 14 are the result of the work of Burbank. Of the minor varieties 9 came from Burbank, while 58 originated elsewhere. Thus the varieties of major importance are seen to be Burbank's, while his varieties are scarcely represented among those of lesser importance."

It must be borne in mind that all the experimental work at Sebastopol was done on the soil that is typical of the entire Gold Ridge section, that it was all done out in the open and under the natural climatic conditions that obtain here, and that artificial irrigation was not resorted to. It was Burbank's dearest wish that his work should be continued after he should be no longer here to take care of it himself, and pursuant to this wish Stanford University gladly agreed to assume the responsibility for the administration of an endowment to be raised for that purpose. Certainly nothing could be more fitting than that the work of this amazing man be perpetuated for the service of future generations. Agriculture is and must remain the basic industry of the world and failure to preserve for it and to California and the nation the vastly important uncompleted work of Burbank, and the inspiration of his name which will grow into greater and greater significance in generations to come, would constitute a loss that can never be repaired and that must be the source of great future regret. America is founded upon the inspiration of its great characters. The value to the nation of monumental memorials such as those lovingly erected to Lincoln and Washington certainly cannot be measured by their cost. But the preservation of the Burbank farm goes far beyond this. To the inspiration of a great example it adds that of taking up the actual labors, of continuing the same tangible problem on the same spot and with the same living material. And to this inspiration it adds the practical results of building upon an uncompleted program, of utilizing the riches of forty years' intensive experiment in one peculiarly adapted spot and saving the painful labor of building again from the ground up, even if this could be done.

Taking up the second outstanding feature of the Sebastopol section, I can do no better than repeat the testimony of J. P. McDonell, long a resident and grower of this section, owner of several orchards and president of the Sebastopol Apple Growers' Union. To my question, "What is the significance of the Gravenstein apple industry to Sebastopol?"

The "Home of the Gravenstein Apple"

McDonell replied, "There is usually some outstanding factor in the life, progress and prosperity of every community. While the resources of California are tremendous and its interests more diversified than those of any other state, there is one commanding factor that has made this great land of opportunity veritably a self-supporting empire, and that is the tendency of the various agricultural communities to specialize in the particular products in which they excel. Fitting into the general scheme of confining activities to the development of an industry that is peculiarly adapted to a certain locality, we find the great Gold Ridge district, of which Sebastopol is the capital and center, producing the finest Gravenstein apples in the world. Nowhere else does this wonderful early summer apple attain such quality as is developed here and consequently we are in a class by ourselves, with the world as a market, and practically free from competition. The apple business, in its many and complex phases, from planting to marketing, has been so intensely developed during the past several years that it might well be said that the apple is the outstanding feature around which our community affairs revolve.

"Good crops and reasonable prices, which over a period of fifteen years have been the rule rather than the exception, are always attuned to optimism, public and private improvements and a general whirl of the wheels of progress. On the contrary, an occasional light crop, or a heavy yield and low returns, are usually reflected in local business circles. It makes little difference whether a hen lays four eggs or six eggs a week; whether broilers sell for 20 cents or 30 cents a pound; whether grapes go into the refrigerator car at $50 or $100 a ton, or whether prunes, peaches and plums are high or low in the market—the sun seems to rise and set just about the same in Sebastopol. But let the crop or the price of Gravensteins show a very material fluctuation and an immediate reaction is recorded in the barometer of community affairs. Many and diversified are the agricultural products that have a place in the general welfare of this district, but no individual industry or combination of industries ranks with the Gravenstein apple in regulating the local business pulse. Grown elsewhere in a very limited way and simply as a side line, the Gravenstein has found here all of the elements and natural conditions that make it the only apple of real quality ready for shipment in early July.

"Throughout the entire United States, the total annual production of Gravensteins outside of the Gold Ridge district does not exceed two hundred cars, while a normal yield here at the present time is upward of two thousand cars, and the tonnage will continue to increase for many years to come. The origin of the Gravenstein apple is a question that has never been more definitely settled than the origin of man, though attracting somewhat less attention. By many it is claimed to have German ancestry and there are those who give the credit to Russia. The latter theory is probably due to the fact that the first Gravenstein trees were brought to America by the Russians in 1812 and planted at Fort Ross, in Sonoma County. These trees, now one hundred and thirteen years old, are still standing almost within hightide mark on the shore of the Pacific Ocean and bear annual crops. Neglected for more than a century and exposed to the elements of land and sea, they are a living testimonial to the fact that no one knows what the life span of a Gravenstein tree really is. For many years Gravensteins were grown and marketed in a more or less careless, hit-and-miss way by some of the pioneer fruitgrowers of this section. There was no particular importance attached to the tree's great producing capacity or the splendid quality of the fruit. It was simply an apple, just as 'pigs is pigs', and was not given preference, or even a reasonable proportion of consideration in the early plantings here. Less than twenty-five years ago growers began to realize the true worth of this great apple and gradually the acreage devoted to its culture has spread over a wide area.

"In 1920 a careful survey of the entire district from Forestville to Stony Point, a distance of fifteen miles, and extending four miles west, revealed the acreage given over to Gravensteins as follows: Trees 1 to 4 years old, 988 acres; 5 to 8 years old, 2,700 acres; 9 to 12 years, 1,725 acres; over 12 years, 1,725; total, 7,136 acres. In 1921 shipments of Gravensteins from this district amounted to approxiamtely 350,000 boxes; in 1922 the output was 650,000 boxes, and in 1923 the total reached one million boxes. The 1924 pack, owing to insufficient rainfall, which resulted in a great percentage of small apples, declined to the half-million mark. The 1925 season's pack, due to unfavorable weather at blossom time, was the lightest on record, but as the trees took their first good rest in many years, it is not extravagant to predict a million and a half box output in 1926. More than seventy-five percent of the Gravensteins produced in the Gold Ridge section are marketed co-operatively, and the price per packed box, net to the grower, has averaged about $1.10 for the past fifteen years, or since co-operative marketing was inaugurated here. The man who has the perseverance to face occasional adversity with a smile, and who can look upon the high and low tide of business as a factor in every line of endeavor, is more certain of success in Gravenstein apple culture than in any other branch of fruitgrowing. Being confined to a small territory, and not adapted to climatic and soil conditions prevailing elsewhere, the Gravenstein is essentially a Gold Ridge district product, and appreciation of this fact will increase with the passing of the years."

The third feature that I spoke of at the beginning of this article is one which is particularly appealing, and in spite of the importance of the other two features I have mentioned it is considered by many the most important of the three. I refer to the rapidly growing resort section of the Russian River and its vicinity. May I turn here to an interview I had with E. H. Maize, manager of one of the newer resorts which has made heavy investment to provide the most modern and attractive entertainment facilities possible for its thousands of guests. "Every section of the country," said Maize, "has a favorite nearby spot which particularly meets its requirements as a place for recreation. It is perfectly natural that this be the case. In California this is probably more evident because vacations and recreations are tied up so closely with the state's commercial interests. For the great San Francisco Bay district there are two major areas of recreation, one centering around Monterey Bay and the other in Sonoma County, particularly for some twenty miles or less on the Russian River. There are other beautiful spots near San Francisco available to the vacationist, but they do not hold the popular appeal.

"Sonoma County and all the North-of-Bay district has all of the features to provide ideal resort conditions and only needs the Golden Gate bridge to receive such patronage as has never been dreamed of before. The main artery of travel from San Francisco to the Russian River district passes through Sebastopol, resulting in two-fold benefits to the community, direct and indirect. The former is plainly obvious to the most casual observer. The latter is possibly not so apparent, but nevertheless just as beneficial or more so. A large percentage of the personnel serving the public after it reaches its destination is supplied by Sonoma County, much of it from Sebastopol. Thousands of dollars' worth of foodstuffs and supplies from within the county are consumed by these visitors on the river, and Sebastopol supplies its share. When large numbers of vacationists center in one favored place year after year, a demand arises for better and more permanent improvements, which again supplies the county with labor and material revenue. Also, and very important, these improvements mean increased valuations which, in turn, help to carry the taxes. It is the out-of-county vacationist crop that brings the county this revenue. The automobile has changed the whole idea of a vacation. More and more the family plans an itinerary for a vacation, to be spent at several different places, and the resort district that provides the most attractions and best roads holds them the longest and brings them back a second year.

"We, on the Russian River, are aware of this fact and are doing all we can to improve accommodations and service, but we are not making the headway we should as regards roads. Our roads are not bad. A few years ago they would have been considered good, but the automobile has created a demand for nothing but the best concrete pavement and the Russian River district will have to meet this demand at the earliest possible date. At present the wheels have been put in motion to pave the last five miles of approach between Pocket Canyon and the river at Guerneville, but we cannot expect to satisfy the visitor, nor can we exhibit our wares to advantage, until we have a full-width pavement the whole length of the district clear to the ocean. It is the writer's opinion that the Russian River highway, with 95 percent of its patronage without the county, should receive state aid in construction, the same as other similar districts of more than local importance. Sonoma County is interested as a whole, for business reasons, and if all three forces, state, county and district, would get together for action, we would soon see a worth-while work completed. It would be hard to find a more favored vacation area than Russian River Valley. The water is

PREPARE!

WELL, CALIFORNIA MAY LOOK forward to a continuation of Japan's "peaceful invasion," suspended, but temporarily it now appears, with the going into effect of the Federal Immigration Law with the ineligible-to-citizenship exclusion provision. The new invading army, however, will not be recruited in Japan, but right in United States territory. But the invaders will render just as faithful and efficient service to their worshiped mikado as if they had come direct from the mainland of Japan.

The Federal Department of Labor has removed the restrictions against the entrance of Hawaiian-born citizens of Oriental origin into the United States. This will make it possible for as many as 125,000 Japs to flock here and carry on for Japan. And they cannot be denied the right to lease or purchase land of any nature, for, being born upon United States soil, they are citizens of the country and entitled to all the rights of citizens.

The one hope for California, is to have this action of the Labor Department nullified. If it be allowed to stand, then California and the Pacific Coast states are doomed! These Hawaiian-born Japs are dyed-in-the-wool loyal subjects of Japan, irrespective of their claim of loyalty to the United States. Once a Jap, always a Jap, and God himself cannot make it otherwise.

This lifting of the barriers by the Federal Labor Department means that the army of Japan already well intrenched upon California's soil will be augmented by almost countless thousands. Is anyone so blind that he cannot see the inevitable result? And who is responsible for the grave situation that now confronts this state? The despicable White-Jap dollar-worshiper and the idiotic brotherhood-of-mankindists. What a price must be paid, in the nearer-than-ever future, for their traitorousness and idiocy!

So far as throwing adequate safeguards about this country, the people and the national lawmakers have been fools. Long ago, they should have profited from the lesson of the Civil War and made another race conflict impossible by so amending the Federal Constitution that citizenship rights could not be attached to any child born to parents either one or both of whom was or were ineligible to citizenship. Had that been the law, Japan would never have undertaken the conquest of California and the Pacific Coast by peaceful invasion, and the situation now would not be so serious and disheartening.

Are we really to keep California White? Then, prepare to keep it White by force of arms!

The court-martial conviction at San Diego of Colonel Alexander S. Williams of public drunkenness may have the effect of causing others in public life to watch their step. Many of them evidently think the constitution and laws of the land are not applicable to them, and through their defy of the prohibition amendment they have made, and are making, a mockery of the constitution and have encouraged, and are encouraging, a general disrespect for all law and order.

It is refreshing and cheering to occasionally find a man in public life who, ignoring the petty clamor of the multitude, has the "guts" to perform his duty—and that's exactly what Brigadier-General Smedley Butler did. If more men of his caliber were in authority, there would be less crime and the country would be better off.

California and the whole world suffered a distinct loss when Luther Burbank, the plant wizard, went to his eternal rest at his home in Santa Rosa, Sonoma County. Of him, it can truthfully be said that humanity profited by his being. Burbank's final words were these:

"Do I ignore what is generally called the spiritual nature of man? No, it is the corona, the flower of life, the fruit of which is altruism, the desire to help ourselves and others to higher and better thoughts and actions—in other words, to a more perfect state of harmony with environment."

The first of the United States senators who voted to put this country into the League of Nations—League of Troubles—through the "World Court" trap-door to come up before his constituents, received a beautiful knockout at the polls in Illinois last month. So, Senator William B. McKinley will soon retire from the upper house of the National Congress.

And, as each of the pro-court senators seeks re-election, he, too, should be retired, to safeguard these United States from becoming entangled in the web of foreign trickery. Among the number is the junior senator from California, who advocated and voted for the "World Court." This and all the other states should follow the lead of Illinois.

Reforestation means the renewal and perpetuation of tree growth. In the main, its object is to rear and harvest on the same land, in an unending round, successive timber crops.

Unlike many natural resources, forests can be used and regrown forever and forever. Continuous production of tree crops on land best suited for that purpose is the aim of forestry.

Some red-hot speeches were made in the National Capital last month during the wet-and-dry debate, but none more sizzling with loyalty than that of Senator William E. Borah. Incidentally, the writer is a great admirer of the Idahoan, because he is a first-last-and-all-the-time American and has the Western trait of saying exactly what he thinks—and he generally thinks right on national questions. Here are some excerpts from what he had to say:

"The [prohibition] amendment binds every official and every citizen, and it is the first duty of good citizenship to respect it and seek to uphold it. . . . It [the campaign to find a lawful way to evade the prohibition amendment] is a campaign to sterilize the constitution while professing to respect it. . . . It is the duty of every citizen loyally to support and maintain it, not only in letter but in spirit. . . .

"The man hunting his neighbor with a shotgun, is simply impatient with the law, and those who would disregard the constitution because it takes too long to amend it, are appealing to the spirit of the mob." Referring to the proposal to let the states define and enforce the law, as each sees fit, Senator Borah said: "The great Civil War was fought over that principle. To my mind, it is treason; it is a deliberate evasion of the constitution. It is disloyalty to the first principle of a federal union and a violation of the oath which every federal officer takes when he takes office."

John R. McQuigg, national commander of the American Legion, in a recent address at Sacramento gave his auditors some real meat to feast upon, when he declared:

"Legionnaires must have no patience with the well-meaning but misguided pacifists who even now are making strenuous efforts to deprive the nation of the small defense it now has. They set too much store in 'World Courts' and Hague tribunals. Let us remember that these courts and tribunals cannot accomplish the impossible; that they cannot quench a nation's thirst for power and dominion when it thinks it is strong enough to win."

Frequently, The Grizzly Bear receives complaints from White parents whose children are forced to attend public-schools along with Japs.

They may relieve themselves of worry on that score, by invoking the California law to compel the board of education in whose jurisdiction the school is, to establish a separate school for the Japs.

The state law provides for the establishment of separate schools for children of Indian, Chinese, Jap and Mongolian parentage, but not for those of Negro or Mexican parentage. So, the White parents should cease complaining and get busy within the law.

At a reception of the Native Sons and Native Daughters of Long Beach to the Federation of States Societies, Mrs. Levi Bond, not a native, proposed this toast to the Natives, which was heartily applauded by the guests, and their applause was sincere, for assuredly they all do love California:

"They do not claim to be better than the rest of us, but we know that they are as good as the best of us. Here's to the Natives of the Golden West, the state we all love the best—California."

"If there are any women among the ranks of the California Federation of Women's Clubs," declared Dr. Mariana Bertola of San Francisco, president of the federation, in a recent Los Angeles address, "who do not give the American Flag one-hundred-percent reverence, they had better go back to the country from which they came."

Splendid advice! But why confine it to the ranks of the women's clubs? It should be extended to the population at large.

State Printer John King, in a recent address at Anaheim, Orange County, truthfully declared: "The Native Son is not a clannish sort of person, resenting the encroachments of new blood from the East. The Order of Native Sons of the Golden West is perpetuated as a California organization to preserve the memory of the early Pioneers who did a great deal for California."

YEARNING

(RUTH HARWOOD.)

O to be in California in the spring!
While torpid earth is held in winter shrouds,
To see her wreathe herself in pearly clouds
And break into a song of burgeoning!

And O, to watch the barren hills unfold;
First comes the mossy carpeting of green,
Fog-misted, sometimes, to a silver sheen,
And then to watch them flare to mauve and gold!

And O, to see acacias burst in bloom,
Like clustered sunshine billowing the trees,
To hear the droning music of the bees,
And scent the air weighed heavy with perfume!

To think she's showing now her pageantry
In all the glory of spring's verdant dress,
And flinging, open-armed, her loveliness!
To think of spring! . . . . And I not there to see!

SEBASTOPOL

warm for bathing; the long stretches of the forest-bordered river afford wonderful boating and canoeing; the redwood-covered hills hold endless trails and beautiful vistas; the cool evenings are crowded with interesting entertainment and dancing, or afford plenty of privacy and peace for rest. Probably the best testimonial of the attractiveness of the district is the hundreds of substantial private summer homes that have been built and where families return year after year. With San Francisco Bay district and its huge population only three hours' drive from the river, good train service several times a day during the season, modern roads, satisfactory service, clean wholesome entertainment and a wideawake policy among those who direct activities, the Russian River district, and Sonoma County as a whole, is destined to enjoy a popularity and resultant prosperity far beyond their present conception."

Sebastopol, as a home section of Sonoma County, offers such an array and variety and completeness of attractions that one hesitates to enumerate them lest it be taken as gross exaggeration. It has a particularly equable climate, with neither extreme heat nor cold; the soil is a deep sandy loam which retains the winter moisture throughout the summer season and requires no orchard irrigation. A short drive to the west are beaches and one of the most scenic coastlines in the west. Bordering the south is the famous Petaluma egg district, which has come now to extend even through and beyond Sebastopol. The combination of poultry and fruit is now looked upon by many as being the acme of intensive conservation in agriculture. Seven miles to the east is Santa Rosa, the metropolis of the North-Bay section, and among the attractive drives the residents of Sebastopol find pleasure in taking their guests on are to the Valley of the Moon of Jack London fame; to the northernmost mission of California at Sonoma; to the Petrified Forest, the most extensive of its kind in the world; to the geysers, which even now are being harnessed to produce the power of a Niagara; to the Armstrong redwoods, and to Fort Ross, the only settlement in the United States of the Russian; and all this in addition to the fact that the great Redwood Highway empire is at our door.

To the native son of California, Fort Ross is of especial interest. Through the influence of Hubert B. Scudder, State Assemblyman from Sebastopol, this historic old fort is to be restored and preserved as an historical monument by the State of California, under the provisions of a bill passed by the Legislature in 1925, providing a first appropriation of $2,500 for the beginnings of the restoration, and paving the way for further appropriations as needed. With this money, the southwest bastion is to be rebuilt and the stockade, much of which is still standing, is to be repaired. Hand-hewn timbers, cut in the surrounding hills and of the same shape and size as those used by the Russians, will go into the rebuilding of Fort Ross. The old fort will be maintained as a museum of relics of the Russians, and the call has gone out for the return, either through sale or through loan, of all the relics of that period now held by private owners throughout this part of the state. Later work contemplates a wide trail from Fort Ross to the summit of Mount Saint Helena, named for the blonde bride of one of the Russian commanders at Fort Ross.

OAKLAND NATIVE SONS' HALL ASSOCIATION MAKES REPORT.

Oakland—The receipts of the Native Sons' Hall Association of Oakland for the fiscal year ended April 1 were $7,667, and the disbursements $7,866.80. Balance cash in treasurer's hands $818.72.

The board of directors of the association is made up as follows: Oakland Parlor No. 50—Fred J. Bills (secretary), George P. Clough, William W. Rucker. Piedmont Parlor No. 120—James J. Dignan, Richard M. Hamb (vice-president), James J. McElroy (president). Athens Parlor No. 195—Charles F. Corrigan, E. Frank Garrison (treasurer), A. L. Gerhard. C. F. Kinsey is clerk of the board. The association was organized in 1906.

PIONEER MOTHERS EULOGIZED AT PAST PRESIDENTS' MEET.

Marysville (Yuba County)—The April meeting of Fred H. Greely Assembly No. 6 Past Presidents' Association N.S.G.W., held in Lincoln, Placer County, April 20, proved to be a reunion of the past officers of Parlors in the following places: Sutter City, Colusa, Marysville, Wheatland, Lincoln, Oroville, Roseville, Rocklin and Grass Valley. An invitation extended by Rainbow Parlor (Wheatland) to hold the May meeting there was accepted. The June meeting will be held in Grass Valley. This session may take the form of a picnic the day the Native Sons and Native Daughters will dedicate a marker on the spot near Grass Valley where gold in quartz was first discovered in California.

At the Wheatland meeting in May a paper will be presented by one of the members of Rainbow Parlor covering the history of Camp Far West, early-day military post maintained by the government near Wheatland for the protection of immigrants against wandering droves of Indians. It was reported that of late some miscreant has committed vandalism at Camp Far West by attempting to remove the markers placed there, presumably for the purpose of profiting on the metal in the plaques. A committee was named to investigate the report.

Following the Lincoln meeting Silver Star Parlor No. 63 introduced a surprise,—a number of interpretative dances in which two daughters of Financial Secretary Schroeder of Lincoln took part. This was followed by a banquet at which Robert Dixon, historian of the Parlor, was toastmaster. Toasts were responded to by D.D.G.P. Richard Sinnott of Hammonton, who outlined the aims and purposes of the Past Presidents' Association, Past Grand President Fred H. Greely, after whom the Assembly was named, Governor John P. Colford, who paid a glowing tribute to the Pioneer Mothers, Seth Millington of Colusa, who emphasized the peculiar pathos and romance attendant upon the history of California, and Superior Judge E. P. McDaniel, who added to Millington's toast a picture of the loyalty and sterling worth of the pilgrims who established the colonies on the Atlantic Coast. In his talk Sinnott declared that Fred H. Geely Assembly is the first to adopt as its policy the improvement of Subordinate Parlors, all others being limited to social activities. He appealed to the delegates to the Santa Rosa Grand Parlor for official recognition by that body of the Past Presidents' Association.

E. J. MITCHELL.

Whereas, It has pleased Almighty God to take from our midst to His Heavenly Parlor our worthy secretary, E. J. Mitchell, and whereas, in the passing of our beloved brother to the rewards he so justly earned, nothing is left to those who knew him save the loving memory of his loyalty, charity and brotherly love, and whereas, his family have lost a devoted and loving husband, an indulgent and kind father and a beloved and esteemed brother, his city a loyal and just officer, his state and Order a sincere and true Native Son, and we of Argonaut Parlor an efficient officer as well as a beloved brother, therefore, be it Resolved, That we of Argonaut Parlor No. 8 Native Sons of the Golden West with sorrowful hearts extend to his bereaved relatives our deepest and sincerest sympathy in their sorrow and loss, our hearts aching with theirs in grief over the passing of this beloved brother, and be it further resolved, that in token of our esteem for our beloved brother and in respect to his memory, that our charter be draped in black for a period of sixty days and that a page inscribed with Brother Mitchell's name and rank and the date of his death be placed in our minute book, and be it further resolved, that a copy of this resolution be sent to Brother Mitchell's family, that a copy be spread upon our minutes and that a copy be placed in our official magazine, The Grizzly Bear.

A. L. SMITH,
F. W. BOYLE,
Committee

Oroville, April 9, 1926

EMILY J. ORELLI.

To the Officers and Members of El Dorado Parlor No. 186 N.D.G.W. We, your committee appointed to draft resolutions to the memory of our departed sister, Emily J. Orelli wish to submit the following:

Whereas, Our sister has been called from our midst and entered into eternal sleep, El Dorado Parlor has lost a respected member and her family a loving and devoted wife and mother.

No one hears the door that opens,
When they pass beyond our call,
Soft as loosened leaves of roses
One by one our loved ones fall."

Resolved, That we extend to the sorrowing family in this their hour of affliction, our heartfelt sympathy and pray that our Heavenly Father comfort them in their grief, resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to them, that a copy be spread upon the minutes and that a copy be sent to The Grizzly Bear Magazine for publication.

IRENE M. IRISH,
METTA E. BUCKLER,
HATTIE E. PRESBY,
Committee

Georgetown, April 10, 1926

Emily J. Orelli was born at Georgetown, El Dorado County, October 4, 1872, of Pioneer parents, Marie and Isaac McCullough. She died at Roseville, Placer County, April 6, 1926, and was buried in Georgetown April 9. She leaves her husband and one son, Milton, to mourn her loss.

SARA HENNIGAN.

Whereas, In view of the loss we have sustained by the passing on of our friend and sister, Sara Hennigan, and of the still greater loss sustained by those nearer and dearer to her, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the officers and members of Annie K. Bidwell Parlor No. 168 Native Daughters of the Golden West do hereby extend our sincere regard and deepest sympathy to the family of our departed sister, and we desire to add our words to the many that have been spoken of her as a loyal and true Native Daughter of the Golden West; and further be it resolved, that copies of this resolution be sent to her son and family and to The Grizzly Bear Magazine and that a copy be spread upon the minutes of this Parlor.

Respectfully submitted

BOOK REVIEWS

(MARGERY BOYD.)

"THE HOUNDS OF SPRING."
By Sylvia Thompson; Little, Brown & Company, Publishers, Boston; Price, $2.00.

Incredible that a girl of twenty-four should write a novel with such depth and insight, such scope and vision, as "The Hounds of Spring." Yet, Sylvia Thompson, stepping lightly across the narrower boundaries of youth and inexperience, has accomplished, with skilled sureness, a remarkable literary work.

Like a series of many-hued, softly-glowing pictures is the beautiful home-life of the Austrian-English Renners. Impossible that any shadows should ever cloud that happy, sunny life.

They made a lovely group, gathered at teatime on the spacious English lawns,—beautiful Cynthia Renner, her handsome Austrian husband, their three lovely children, Wendy, Zina and John, Colin Russell and Nurse Nannie. Zina, radiant at nineteen, took with accustomed sureness greatest happiness in her perfect, happy world—the splendid love of Colin.

War, inavoidable, inescapable, resounded its hoarse clangor through England. Smudged, and stained now with anguished tears, are the beautiful pictures of the Renners' home-life. John and Colin are gone, the lovely estate turned into hospital quarters, Cynthia, outwardly brave but sick at heart, hand in hand with her husband, Edgar, hoping, praying; Zina terrified and still.

Through the heartrending years that follow Zina dumbly seeks oblivion from pain, the pain of remembering. Almost too late, joy finds her out. "And time remembered is grief forgotten."

"DOODLE, A CALIFORNIA BOY."
By M. Francis Reid; Dodd, Mead & Company, Publishers, New York; Price, $2.00.

Stafford Hunt Doodlengtry, at six, possessed a red mop of hair, topaz eyes, a sprinkle of freckles and the comradely title of "Doodle." Just how far red hair and freckles can carry a boy into the land of romance and adventure, will never be known. It is certain, however, they played a large part in "Doodle's" success.

Californian boys—ranging anywhere between the ages of 12 to 90—will find an added flavor in the reading of "Doodle's" busy career, since the scenes are laid in the colorful foothills of Southern California, in the rambling town of Santa Ynez.

Reid has very successfully combined these series of boyish adventures, without his hero ever becoming tiresome or out of character. Admirers of "Doodle" can only hope that book one may have a follow-up.

"THE STRANGE ADVENTURES OF MR. COLLIN."
By Frank Heller; Thomas Y. Crowell Company, Publishers, New York; Price, $2.00.

"The Strange Adventures of Mr. Collin" range, in this chronicle, from England to France, to Sweden, and to a profitable cruise in southern waters.

"Beginning late in the autumn of 1910," Professor Pelotard, alias Philip Collin, and his inseparable companion, M. Lavertisse, sail upon a perilous cruise in the good ship "Medusa," unbeknown to that worthy detective, James Kenyon, a companion shipmate.

Following this journey, lucrative to the two friends but painfully disillusioning to Kenyon, the two enjoy a few quiet days in the country.

There, Pelotard and Lavertisse sponsor woman's suffrage until pastorial life becomes too heated an existence. From "the frying-pan into the fire," they next visit a French hades. Not content with these playful jaunts, the inseparables ship to Sweden. Here, Pelotard, playing his trump-card, proves to his own satisfaction and his enemies' chagrin, that it is a wise fatherland which knoweth its own son.

These Swedish heroes of crime remind one of those distinguished English personages, Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson, with the rather glaring exception that Collin and Lavertisse are on the wrong side of the fence. Let us hope the four never met.

"A NEW NAME."

By Grace Livingston Hill; J. B. Lippincott Company, Publishers, Philadelphia; Price, $2.00.

This is a Pollyanna story with a heavy moral. It belongs in the category of "wholesome books"—(fair warning).

The plot novel is that of a rich young man who, in a frenzy of fear and guilt, flees from his home, his wealth, even his name. Left to his own resources, a gold watch, cigarette-case and match-box, he begins a new career.

Things commence to happen. The poor, rich young man at once stumbles inadvertently upon a sumptuous church supper. The result plays havoc with the supper and the young man. And thereby hangs the tale.

Unbounded imagination, a blind belief in the miraculous and complex for prodigal sons are earnestly recommended prerequisites to the uninitiated reader.

"THE GANG AGE."

By Paul Hanly Furfey; The Macmillan Company, Publishers, New York; Price, $2.00.

Many puzzling questions confront the parent, teacher and recreational leader concerning the needs and training of the preadolescent boy.

In his book, "The Gang Age," Dr. Furfey presents the gist of many of the scientific and documentary treatises dealing with the subject. Type cases, serving as illustrations of the different phases of preadolescent boyhood, give both added interest and a personal touch to the book.

The chief worth in "The Gang Age" lies in its practicality and its common-sense treatment of a rather difficult subject.

INDUSTRIAL AND TRADE EXPOSITION FOR LOS ANGELES.

Under the auspices of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, there will be staged at the Shrine Civic Auditorium in Los Angeles, from August 16 to and including August 22, an exposition of products manufactured and distributed in Los Angeles. It will be known as the "Industrial and Trade Exposition of Los Angeles" and it is planned to make it an annual affair patterned somewhat after the very successful exposition that was held in 1922 under the same auspices.

The object of the exposition is to establish Los Angeles as the buying center of the Pacific Coast and intermountain states and to attract buyers of merchandise and products throughout these states to Los Angeles for their market. This central thought, that the Exposition must be a real sales opportunity and produce tangible business, is guiding the committee formulating the exposition's plans.

SACRAMENTO GRAND PARLOR PROGRAM AND CANDIDATES.

SACRAMENTO'S NATIVE DAUGHTERS are rapidly perfecting plans for the entertainment of the Fortieth Grand Parlor, which will be in session in the Capital City the week of June 21. Grand President Sue J. Irwin will preside throughout the session and at its close will, automatically, become the Junior Past Grand President.

Arrangements for the Grand Parlor's entertainment are in the hands of a joint committee representing all the Sacramento County Parlors. Past Grand President Ema Gett is the chairman, Gertrude Keehner the secretary, and Genevieve Didion the treasurer. An attractive program is being arranged and the Capital City's visitors are assured a week of real pleasure.

Monday evening, June 21, there will be a reception. Tuesday will be given over to an auto trip down the Sacramento River to Courtland, where lunch will be served, followed by a drive over the Garden Highway. In the evening, the grand ball. Wednesday evening will be devoted to a flag ceremony at historic Sutter's Fort, concluding with an open-air concert. Thursday evening the newly-elected grand officers will be installed.

During each afternoon session of the Grand Parlor the Sacramento County Parlors will present a program, and arrangements are being made for a speaker of note to address the gathering one afternoon. The Sacramento Native Daughters hope that the visitors will remain in the city throughout the week, and are planning additional attractions to keep them there.

"Sacramento," says Past Grand President Gett, "being happily situated in the 'Heart of California,' makes it possible for members from all the Parlors of the Order to attend the session, so we are anticipating a number of visitors, and all will be most welcome."

CANDIDATES.

The Grizzly Bear's efforts have, to date, brought to light a few additional candidates for Grand Parlor offices. Subordinate Parlors elect their delegates the first meeting in May, and then the list of candidates will likely be considerably augmented, for rumor has it that there are to be numerous seekers for Grand Parlor offices.

Grand Vice-president Pearl Lamb (El Pescadero 82) of Tracy will undoubtedly be elected Grand President without opposition.

Another candidate, as predicted in The Grizzly Bear for April, has come into the "big" contest for Grand Vice-president, the "stepping-stone to the Grand Presidency." Rumor has it that still another is possible. At this time the entrants are: Mae Himes-Noonan (Portola 172) of San Francisco, Florence Danforth-Boyle (Gold of Ophir 190) of Oroville, Grand Marshal Dr. Louise C. Heilbron (San Diego 208) of Sacramento.

Others who, in response to The Grizzly Bear's queries, have declared themselves candidates for Grand Parlor offices at the Sacramento session include:

Grand Secretary—Alice H. Dougherty (Angelita 32) of Livermore, incumbent.

Grand Trustee—Annie C. Thuesen (Alta 3) of San Francisco.

Grand Marshal—Josephine C. Barboni (Vendome 100) of San Jose, Grand Trustee Esther R. Sullivan (Marysville 162) of Marysville.

Grand Inside Sentinel—Grand Outside Sentinel Evelyn I. Carlson (Dolores 169) of San Francisco.

Grand Outside Sentinel—Marvel Thomas (Los Angeles 124) of Los Angeles.

Seven trustees are to be selected, but to date there is one seeker for the honor, so far as The Grizzly Bear knows. What's the trouble? For the Order's good, there should be a "flock" of Grand Trustee candidates, and they should come from all sections of California—the Sacramento and the San Joaquin Valleys, the mining counties, the San Francisco Bay district, the coast counties, the southland, etc.

Has anyone heard of any place wanting the 1927 Grand Parlor? The Grizzly Bear has not. —C.M.H.

Carrying On.

Quincy—Two gifts that Plumas Pioneer 219 highly esteems are a handsome hand-made silk American Flag, the work of Rhoda A. Thompson and Violet Cole-Mori, and a beautiful altar of native woods presented by Josephine Jones-Braden, the handwork of her son, Wayne.

The Parlor's pioneer committee—Sisters Mori, Swingle, McElroy, Clark, Duffy, Remick, Stark, Eldred, Dunn, Hall—is working diligently and constantly adding interesting relics to the already-crowded relics cabinet. The board of supervisors of Plumas County has granted additional space in Memorial Hall, with permission to install another cabinet.

Plumas Pioneer, ambitious to own its own hall and to further the best interests of the organization, has sought the co-operation of Quincy 131 N.S.G.W., and a joint building committee has been appointed to proceed with the purchase of a lot, preparatory to the erection of a building. The personnel of the committee are Gertrude Elam-Remick, Rhoda A. Thompson, Mary Quinn-McLaughlin, M. C. Kerr, W. J. Miller, J. D. McLaughlin.

D.D.G.P. Louise Lee-Stephan visited the Parlor April 5, when one candidate was initiated. President Nellie Barker-Erwin deserves special mention for the able manner in which she presided. In the near future Plumas Pioneer plans on taking its charter to Portola and Indian Valley and there initiating classes of candidates which are already being formed. J. C. Knickrem, an old-timer of Plumas County who served several terms as supervisor, died recently at San Jose; among the surviving relatives are his wife, Louise Gard-Knickrem, and Vivian Knickrem-Long, members of the Parlor.

Mission Benefit Great Success.

San Jose—"April fool" was joyously played in an impromptu fashion by Vendome 100 April 1. Phoney stunts and eats galore comprised the program. A class of candidates for the Parlor were in line at the district initiation April 22.

A very successful card party for the benefit of the mission restoration fund of Reina del Mar 126 (Santa Barbara) was held April 15. Past Grand President Mamie Pierce-Carmichael and Clara A. Gairaud of the Past Presidents' Club were the jonit chairmen for the evening. When the blank checks were passed around during the last Grand Parlor in Placerville, with a plea for the restoration of Santa Ynez, Mrs. Gairaud promised the Santa Barbara delegates Vendome would make $100 for them. The card party was such a success that a great deal more than the promised amount will be sent.

Miss Tillie Brohaska and Miss Anna Worth entertained the Past Presidents' Club April 14. The Sunshine Club of the Parlor spent a very busy fortnight. Ward No. 5 in the U. S. Veterans' Hospital at Palo Alto was visited, and the boys treated to home-made cakes, cookies and ice cream, and a program of music provided by Dr. Borden of the medical staff and Miss Phelps of the Red Cross service paid great compliments to Vendome for its thoughtfulness and interest which have never waned, even though the war is over. A truckload of magazines were delivered to the county poor farm, also magazines and phonograph records to the isolation ward at the county hospital. A blind girl and the tubercular inclined children at "Sunnyholme" have also received special attention. Sunshine Club members are: Miss Tillie Brohacka, Mrs. Clara Gairaud, Josephine Barboni, Rose Baker, Gertrude Mathers. Any hour of the day they are at the service of the unfortunate and needy.

Gala Event.

San Juan Bautista.—April 7 was a gala event in the history of San Juan Bautista 179, the occasion being the official visit of Grand President Sue J. Irwin to the Parlor. Among the visitors were Past Grand President Bertha A. Briggs, Grand Trustee Sallie Thaler, D.D.G.P. Pearl Baker, Supervising District Deputy Justina Lewis, and large delegations from Copa de Oro 105 (Hollister) and Aleli 102 (Salinas).

At 7 o'clock dinner was served in rooms of the old mission fitted up as a banquet-hall. Appetizing Spanish viands were served from beautifully decorated tables by charming young girls in Spanish costumes. Appropriate toasts were responded to during the serving of the menu. Then adjournment was taken to the meeting-place, which had been converted into a bower of spring blossoms. Several candidates were initiated. Grand President Irwin gave an interesting and forceful address on the Order's various projects and highly complimented the members of the local Parlor. During the evening San Juan Bautista and Copa de Oro presented gifts to Miss Irwin, and the other grand officers were remembered with flowers.

Memorial for Pioneer.

Willows—Berryessa 192 plans to erect a memorial to General John Bidwell, one of the earliest of California Pioneers. On a hill near Elk Creek, west of this place, where General Bidwell camped early in July 1844, it is proposed to set up a stone shaft appropriately inscribed.

"Baby" Growing.

Santa Ana—At the April 5 meeting of Santa Ana 235 six candidates were initiated, bringing the membership of this "baby" Parlor to 134. At the April 3 cooked-food sale $55 was cleared. Several members went to San Pedro April 9 to attend the pioneer night celebration of Rudecinda 230.

Mrs. Bertha L. Hitt, organizer of Santa Ana, has a parlor for Fullerton, Orange County, well under way. It is expected it will be ready for institution before the Sacramento Grand Parlor meeting in June.

Grab—For Table Silver.

Santa Cruz—Following the April 5 meeting of Santa Cruz 26 Mrs. Pearl Reid and committee produced numerous packages for a grab-bag and a neat sum was realized for the fund for purchasing table silver for the Parlor. Refreshments were served by a committee composed of Mmes. May Williamson, Alta Macauly, Edith Dodge; Misses June Lindsay, Anna Linscott.

Members Inspired.

Grass Valley—Grand President Sue J. Irwin paid an official visit to Manzanita 29 March 26 and inspired the members with an earnest address on the creed and work of the Order. Dinner was served preceding the meeting. Beautiful gifts were presented Miss Irwin, Past Grand President Allison F. Watt and D.D.G.P. Lottie Eden. A program of toasts and vocal solos was presented.

The Parlor's card party for the benefit of the homeless children was a great success. There was a banner attendance and all had a fine time. Refreshments were served.

Card Party Coming.

San Jose—Following the April 8 session of San Jose 81 Miss Edythe Johnson was given a shower of numerous beautiful articles for her hope-chest. May 6 the Parlor will feature a card party; Mrs. Mary F. Mitchell is chairman of the arrangements committee. Miss Mary Meyer entertained the Past Presidents' Club of the Parlor April 13.

Monument Unveiling in June.

Alturas—At its April meeting Alturas 159 initiated twelve candidates, in the presence of forty-seven members. The sewing committee reported five complete layettes had been shipped the Central Committee on Homeless Children. Members and invited guests spent a pleasant social hour at whist and dancing after the busi-

HOLLYWOOD'S INCREASING POPULATION

Harry Barratt

(ASSISTANT SECRETARY HOLLYWOOD CHAMBER COMMERCE.)

THAT HOLLYWOOD, AS A COMMUNITY, continues to press forward under the impetus started about five years ago is indicated in various community mediums, all of which seem to prove that Hollywood is to continue its upward trend indefinitely.

Important among the indices are bank clearings, building permit values and population growth, statistical information on which has been compiled in the past few weeks for general publication by the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce.

Probably as important a factor tending to prove the upward trend of Hollywood as any is the bank clearings report, provided by R. B. Odell, manager of the clearing-house association, a report which covers the month of March. This report shows all prior records to have been broken when clearings reached $33,811,143.71, the largest for any month since the clearing-house association was formed five years ago. This figure is $6,000,000 greater than for the corresponding period last year, and is nearly $21,000,000 more than for the first March in the history of the clearing-house. The total for the year to date is $92,648,388.67, an increase of $15,679,565.52 over the first three months in 1925.

January of this year was the second largest month in clearing-house history, with a total of $32,103,441.18. The third largest month was October 1923, with $31,286,414.78. Clearings for the last week in March this year reached $7,003,582.96, while the total for the corresponding week in 1925 was $5,787,155.91, an increase of $1,216,427.05.

Figures for the months of this year are: January, $32,103,441.81; February, $26,733,803.15, March, $33,811,143.71. For the corresponding months last year they were, respectively, $26,730,374.99, $22,689,336.23, $27,549,111.93. The total for March 1921 was $12,857,669.78.

Another important indication of the continuance on the upward grade is found in buildings proposed for construction under permits issued in March. These amounted to more than $2,000,000, as against $1,663,416 for March in 1925. It was one of the best months since the peak of building operations was reached in 1923, and seems to suggest something important for the future, since there are many theater and some large business blocks projected for construction this year.

Schools, too, present a figure of singular importance in the general trend forward, this year's enrollment being 19,251, as against 17,711 last year. These figures include enrollment at the University of California Southern Branch in Hollywood, which is 5,721 for this year and was 5,017 last year.

There is still another prime factor which proves the accepted theory that Hollywood still continues to press ahead, that being population as deduced through utility meter installations for residences and business places. Taking gas-meter installations as an example through which to arrive at census estimate, the Los Angeles Gas and Electric Corporation informs that there are in Hollywood 39,361 such meters. The company, through its research and statistical department, finds that, as a rule, each meter serves 3,732 persons. By the simple process of multiplying the greater amount by the lesser it is found that the result is 146,895, which the gas company considers a conservative estimate for Hollywood's population. In the spring of 1922 the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce estimated the census at from 55,000 to 60,000, an increase of more than 90,000 in four years.

Landscaping—

Older residents of California are familiar with the fact that Howard & Smith have created many of the most beautiful gardens in the State. With the vast development which has recently taken place in Southern California, however, it may be that some of the newer residents are not aware of the fact that Howard & Smith have a landscape department capable of rendering the very highest service in the treatment of their grounds. ¶In the development of a property, confidence can only be placed in those having a thorough understanding of landscaping in its entirety. A full comprehension of this subject, from the minutest detail to the placing of the house itself, is essential if beauty and harmony are to be the ultimate result.

If you are contemplating the development of your grounds we will be pleased to have you confer with us.

Again, we find the latest issue of the Hollywood business directory telling a story of progress and increase in business houses in this community. The book, issued by the retail bureau of the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce, lists 2,770 business houses and offices, against 2,265 in 1925.

CALIFORNIAN PRODUCES DAY AND NIGHT AD. SIGN.

After many years of labor there has been perfected and is now being marketed by the Tri-Ad Automatic Electric Sign Company of Los Angeles, George J. Teague (Ramona 109 N.S.G.W.) manager, an advertising sign that attracts attention both by day and by night. It is mechanical in action, starts and stops every five seconds and has three sign surfaces. It is claimed to be mechanically perfect.

The sign surfaces have varicolored backgrounds, with raised glass letters in colors. Because of its tri-angular design the sign can be read on a flat storefront 180° and 250° if placed on a corner. Having three word surfaces and changing face every five seconds, the Tri-Ad produces 10,000 word flashes a day.

It is a twenty-four-hour efficient sign. Operates all day without being illuminated and compells attention with its turn and stop automatic action. At night uses only ten or twelve small electric bulbs. Action in the day time and illumination plus action at night, the Tri-Ad tells them fast and tells them often.

The sign, including motor, is of five working parts, finest machine work and finish. It is claimed to be mechanically foolproof, and the cost of operation is insignificant. The Tri-Ad automatic electric sign looks for customers and finds them. It is made by a Californian for California.

Lawns need fertilizer. Grass must have nourishment from the soil if a good lawn is to be maintained. Just how this nourishment is provided makes little difference, just so it is given the plants. Manure is perhaps the easiest to apply, but just what kind of manure is another question. As far as plant food is concerned, there may be little difference. However, chicken manure has the advantage that no weed seeds are introduced into the lawn to make trouble. Manure from the stable may easily have enough weed seed to cause serious difficulty, at least to make lots of work digging them out. Sheep manure is less likely to give trouble, and the pulverized products give very good results.

If the manure is applied after the rains have stopped, see that water enough is applied to carry the necessary elements into the soil. Lawns are too valuable to be neglected or to be denied the proper treatment because of the relatively slight expense involved.

ness session. Friends of Irma Laird are urging her candidacy for Grand Organist at the Sacramento Grand Parlor.

The committee in charge of the Modoc War monument has received the bronzes, and the rock and cement work will be finished during May. Plans are now being formulated for the formal unveiling and dedication of the monument June 12 and 13.

Grand President Visits.

Modesto—Grand President Sue J. Irwin officially visited Morada 199 March 24 and was entertained at a banquet. Past Grand President Addie L. Mosher was also a visitor. Miss Irwin addressed the members on the work being accomplished in restoring the missions and in protecting the redwoods. Bertha Stowe, a member, has composed the following lines, dedicated to Morada:

"M for our members, all born in the West,
O for our Order, California's best;
R for the ritual, rules and regulations,
A for all of us that make up this nation;
D for the duty we never should shirk,
A for altogether, the way we should work.
Put them together makes Morada so fine,
Our own dear Parlor number one ninety-nine."

AMELIA SEXTON

To the Officers and Members of Magnolia Parlor No. 12 Native Daughters of the Golden West—Dear Sisters: We, your committee appointed to draft resolutions of respect to the memory of our departed sister, Amelia Sexton, do respectfully submit the following:

Whereas, The angel of death has again hovered over a home and has taken for his own a loving mother and sister, whom we dear Amelia Sexton, you were ever a loving sister and a devoted mother, being ready at all times to make any sacrifice on their behalf; sister you were ever a true and loyal Native Daughter at all times being faithful to our Order and ever ready to serve, therefore, be it

Resolved, That our charter be draped in mourning, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, that a copy be spread upon the minutes of our Parlor and that a copy be sent to The Grizzly Bear Magazine, our official organ of publication.

"As slow our ship her foamy track
Against the wind was cleaving,
Her trembling pennant still look'd back
To that dear land 'twas leaving.
So loath we part from all we love,
From all the links that bind us,
So turn our hearts wherever we rove,
To those we've left behind us."

Respectfully submitted in F.D.F.A.,

ETHEL VAN VLECK,
BERTHA REEG,
MARY McBETH,
Committee.

Placerville, April 15, 1926

ANNIE OTIS METCALF.

To the Officers and Members of Peumas Pioneer Parlor No. 219 Native Daughters of the Golden West—We, your committee appointed to draft resolutions of respect to the memory of our departed sister, Annie Otis Metcalf, respectfully submit the following:

Whereas, The infinite wisdom of Almighty God has seen fit to remove from our Parlor our beloved friend and sister, Annie Otis Metcalf, to take up her duties in the Heavenly Parlor on High, whereas, in the passing of our sister, this Parlor has lost one of its most loyal members, the town of Quincy one of its most beautiful characters and the Metcalf family a loving wife and mother, therefore be it

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, that a copy be spread on the minutes of our Parlor and that a copy be sent The Grizzly Bear Magazine for publication.

LOUISE LEE STEPHAN,
ALTA F. LEE,
BIRDENA SWINGLE,
Committee.

Quincy, April 9, 1926.

EMMA MILLER COUGHLIN.

Whereas, The Almighty, in His infinite wisdom has deemed it fit to call to her heavenly home our beloved sister, Emma Miller Coughlin, thus taking from us one of our most loyal members, a faithful and true friend, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the officers and members of Marysville Parlor No. 162 N.D.G.W. do hereby extend our sincerest love and deepest sympathy to the family of our departed sister in this hour of grief and bereavement, and be it further resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, that a copy be placed on the records of Marysville Parlor No. 162 N.D.G.W., and that a copy be sent to The Grizzly Bear.

INA M. WELLS,
AGNES W. MEADE,
GERTRUDE F. CABLE,
Committee.

Marysville, March 26, 1926

CALIFORNIA CAMPBELL.

To the Officers and Members of Piedmont Parlor No. 87 N.D.G.W.—We, your committee appointed to draft resolutions of respect to the memory of our departed sister California Campbell, respectfully submit the following:

Whereas, Our Heavenly Father, in His infinite wisdom, has called from our midst our beloved sister, California Campbell, thus taking from us a loyal member, a true and faithful friend whose loss is deeply felt by all, and whereas, by her death the family has lost a loving mother, Resolved, That the officers and members of Piedmont Parlor No. 87 N.D.G.W. extend to the bereaved family our sincere sympathy, and be it further resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, to The Grizzly Bear Magazine for publication and that a copy be spread upon the minutes of our Parlor.

ORANGE COUNTY FURNISHES THE NEW NATIVE SON "BABY."

SANTA ANA—WITH THE INSTITUTION March 27 of Santa Ana 265, the chain of Native Son Parlors was extended into Orange County. The Parlor started with a charter membership of seventy. The following Parlors were represented at the institution ceremonies: Los Angeles 45, San Diego 108, Ramona 109 (Los Angeles), Arrowhead 110 (San Bernardino), Cabrillo 114 (Ventura), Santa Barbara 116, Corona 196 (Los Angeles), Long Beach 239, Vaquero 262 (Los Angeles), Sepulveda 263 (San Pedro), Glendale 264. Deputy Grand President Albert V. Mayrhofer organized the Parlor.

Following the installation D.D.G.P. Ronald M. Ross, assisted by the officers of Los Angeles 45, installed Santa Ana's officers, as follows: Dr. Charles E. Price, senior past president; Joseph M. Backs, junior past president; Z. Bertrand West Jr., president; Charles C. Carrillo, first vice-president; James B. Utt, second vice-president; Dr. John M. Bulpitt, third vice-president; Basil J. Smith, marshal; Clayton B. Tillotson, inside sentinel; Dr. J. B. Edgerton, outside sentinel; H. Mel Head, recording and financial secretary; Charles D. Swanner, treasurer; Franklin G. West, Alvin E. Selvidge, Francis C. Westgate, trustees.

Grand President Cutler, in a brief address, eloquently outlined to the members of the new Parlor the aims and purposes of the Order, and Grand Second Vice-president Thompson and Deputy Grand President Mayrhofer also responded to President West's call for a few remarks. Santa Ana was the recipient of the following gifts from neighboring Parlors: Holy Bible, Los Angeles 45; framed map of California, Ramona 109; vice-president's gavel, Corona 196; ballot-box, Long Beach 239; president's gavel, Pasadena 259; state seal, Vaquero 262; American and State (Bear) Flags, Sepulveda 263; altar flag, Glendale 264.

The first meeting of 265, April 14, was largely attended and enthusiastic. Long Beach sent over a big delegation. Several candidates were initiated, the ritual being exemplified by the following officers of Long Beach 239, assisted by Grand Trustee John T. Newell as first vice-president and William G. Newell (Los Angeles 45) as senior past president: Junior Past President Edgar McFadyen, President J. A. Max Schlimmer, Second Vice-president Edgar C. Crowell, Third Vice-president Harold Oliver, Marshal Charles E. Crowell, Inside Sentinel Henry Meier. During the evening there were remarks by Grand Trustee Newell, President Schlimmer, Edgar Crowell, Dr. S. T. Luce and other Long Beachites, President West, Alfred M. Stanley and others of Santa Ana. Several applicants are awaiting initiation, and there is every indication that the "baby" Parlor will grow in numbers and in due time become one of the strongest links in the Native Son chain.

Pioneer Night.

Placerville—The reception of Placerville 9 to its "pioneer" members brought out a large crowd March 23 and the affair was thoroughly enjoyed. Several California Pioneers were among the guests, and quite a few out-of-town members were in attendance.

Past President George E. Pierce was toastmaster at banquet, which was prepared and served by members of Marguerite 12 N.D.G.W. Among the speakers were Past Grand President Clarence E. Jarvis, James Keane, Thomas Rust, Lawrence Barrette, Ted C. Atwood and Pioneer Lev Gignac; the latter recounted several incidents of early days.

Splendid Move.

Marysville—To advise members of the Order particular travelers, of its meeting time and place Marysville 6 plans to install signs at the city's main entrances. They will be three feet wide by thirty inches in height, and will be in five colors, featuring the American and the State (Bear) Flags.

Promise Fulfilled.

Santa Barbara—Despite the downpour, Grand Trustee John T. Newell and D.D.G.P. Ronald M. Ross of Los Angeles paid a visit to Santa Barbara 116 April 7. D.D.G.P. Ross installed the Parlor's officers, and Grand Trustee Newell delighted those in attendance with an account of the Order's doings. Refreshments were served and the visitors started for home, only to get caught in a landslide and having to "lay out" in the rain-torrent all night. But—they kept their promise to Secretary Harry Sweetser of 116.

Going Strong.

Ferndale—"Ferndale 93 is wide awake and going strong," says C. H. Rasmussen, the new recording secretary elected to fill the vacancy caused by the recent death of George Collins. Several applications for membership were presented April 6. Entertainment was furnished by the Modoc orchestra, and a clam chowder feast was served by the committee in charge for the evening: C. H. Rasmussen (chairman), L. S. East, A. Stone, E. P. Calanchini, Arthur Dedini. "Hamburger Charlie" Krider concocted the chowder.

Pleasure Derived.

"Editor Grizzly Bear: I am enclosing herewith $1.50 to cover my annual subscription to The Grizzly Bear. I have continuously subscribed for the magazine during its entire life and get pleasure out of reading it each month.

"Very truly yours,
"PERCY G. WEST,
"State Assemblyman.

"Sacramento, April 6, 1925."

Financial Secretary Retires.

Merced—Louis Schroeder resigned as financial secretary of Yosemite 24 April 5, and Calvin Hart was elected to the vacancy. It was voted to present one of the Parlor's active and popular members, I. H. Reuter, former Grand Marshal, to the Santa Rosa Grand Parlor as a candidate for Grand Trustee.

Birthday Parties Popular.

San Bernardino—The March birthday party of Arrowhead 110 was enjoyed by a big crowd March 21. An old-time California supper was served. Louis Wolff was chairman of the arrangements committee.

Monte Weeks had charge of the April 28 birthday party for the April-born boys. These birthday parties have become very popular with the Parlor members, and are stimulating interest in the Order's affairs. Arrowhead's membership drive is making satisfactory progress.

Building Association Formed.

Oroville—Argonaut 8 and Gold of Ophir 190 N.D.G.W. have formed a building association for the purpose of erecting a $35,000 home on the Parlor's property. Florence Boyle was made president of the association, Bert Baldwin vice-president and Frank Boyle secretary.

Expresses Appreciation.

San Rafael—Grand Trustee Alfred H. McKnew, a resident of this city, paid a visit April 12 to Mount Tamalpais 64, the first made to any Parlor other than his own since the terrible accident that befell him about a year ago. He expressed deep appreciation for the attentions shown him during his illness by the boys of 64, and urged on the members the importance of building up the sick-benefit fund.

Newman Cohn also addressed the Parlor on legislation he proposes to introduce before the Grand Parlor at the Santa Rosa session in May.

Old-timers' Night.

Sacramento—May 6 has been set aside by Sacramento 3 as the date for paying homage to the old-timers and past presidents of the Parlor. Dinner will be served and an unusual program will be presented. In charge is this committee: Wilbur Green, J. W. Haley, Otto Futterer, T. W. McAuliffe, E. H. Kraus, G. A. Burns, H. Wittpen, August Henderson.

Entertained the World.

Oakland—Piedmont 120 heard an illustrated talk on subways April 15, the speaker being George Posey, Alameda County surveyor, who dwelt particularly on the estuary tube, connecting this city and Alameda. The Parlor's minstrel show of April 22 went over big and was a financial success. Charles Herkenham trained the troupe of seventy-five and Al Weber furnished the music.

Piedmont entertained the world over K.L.X. April 23, and so favorably received was the program that a return engagement has been requested. The Parlor's homeless children's committee, acting jointly with the Alameda County Central Committee, of which Grand Trustee Richard M. Hamb is chairman, is arranging for the annual benefit ball. The committee of Piedmont handling the campaign of "Dick" Hamb for Grand Third Vice-president will have a round up May 6. It is to be an Alameda County gathering and a good time is assured.

Annual Outing.

Elk Grove—The Native Son Parlors of Sacramento and San Joaquin Counties held their annual joint field day at Elk Grove Park. Sports of all kinds were featured and the picnic spirit prevailed.

Membership Standing Largest Parlors.

San Francisco—Grand Secretary John T. Regan reports the standing of the Subordinate Parlors having a membership of over 400 April 20 as follows, together with their membership figures January 1 1926:

CONCRETE A NECESSITY ON FARM.

One of the best investments the farmer can make, is in the small cement mixer. Nowhere has concrete proved a greater boon or necessity than on the farm. Floors that are vermin proof, that never become mudholes, that are easily cleaned and sanitary, walks that need no repair; silos that stay built, platforms, foundations, feed troughs a hundred other uses, have been proved economical on the farm. The use of cement is an uptodate practice, one the farmer must follow not because it is in style, but because it means the saving of dollars and consequent profits.

SAN PEDRO THE GREAT

PIONEERS ENTERTAINED

AN OUTSTANDING EVENT AMONG fraternal affairs in San Pedro was the entertainment accorded to Pioneers of the harbor district April 9 by Rudecinda Parlor No. 230 N.D.G.W. There was a large attendance, including prominent Pioneers of San Pedro and Wilmington. Past President Margaret Deever of the Parlor's entertainment program committee—Anna Clarke (chairman), Anna Spickler, Margaret Kreider—introduced the various speakers.

J. Kaveney of Wilmington spoke most entertainingly on early harbor history, telling in intimate fashion of the day when the only residences in San Pedro were those of the Linskow, Crittendon and Crocker families. Judge Savage, well-known jurist, told of the days of '64, when he was stationed at Drum Barracks. William Reuter, president Sepulveda, extended the Native Sons' greetings to the Pioneers. Miss Ella Ludwig, vice-principal of the high-school when San Pedro annexed to Los Angeles, asked cooperation in the history she is preparing and urged the revival of the local historical society. President Charlotte Bennett of Rudecinda announced the Parlor would soon mark, with fitting ceremonies, historic Drum Barracks. Alma Werner contributed several vocal solos.

Prominent among the pioneers present were: Mrs. A. G. Barton, for whose family Barton Hill was named; Mrs. M. E. Boschke, whose home on Boschke Island was in those times the social center of the district, and was located where the Kerckhoff-Cuzner lumber yards now stand; Mrs. M. E. Linskow, daughter of Captain Sanford, who operated the first vessels going in and out of San Pedro; M. Duffy, who operated the ferry to East San Pedro in those days of olden times; Mms. Mary Leonardo, Sarah Urquhart, Carolina Oden Sepulveda, Cross of the Crittendon family; Mr. and Mrs. James Dodson Sr., Miss Margaret and William Mahar. Refreshments were served by the following committee: Victoria Adler (chairman), Modesta Contos, Alice Parker, Lucia Guzman, Leota Brucker.

The March 26 meeting of Rudecinda Parlor No. 230 N.D.G.W. was opened by a salute to the flag by six Boy Scouts of America, two of whom —Carl Boston and William Hagenow—are sons of members. D.D.G.P. Marvel Thomas was present and was presented with a bouquet of roses. Refreshments were served by a committee composed of: Carmen Ardiaz (chairman), Susie Alvarado, Lottie Sandstrom, Ida McNamara.

WANTS 1927 N.S. GRAND PARLOR.

Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 N.S.G.W. had a rousing meeting April 13, when seven candidates were initiated. President "Bill" Reuter announced that a sufficient number of additional candidates will be taken in at the April 27 meeting to give this little-more-than-a-year-old Parlor four delegates to the Santa Rosa Grand Parlor. Among the many visitors in attendance were delegations from Los Angeles and Santa Ana Parlors. Among the speakers of the evening, all from among the visitors, were Grand Trustee John T. Newell, Deputy Grand President Albert V. Mayrhofer, D.D.G.P. Ronald M. Ross, Richard Fryer, Andrew Beazell, Past President M. A. Richley of Humboldt 14 (Eureka). The usual feast was enjoyed.

WILMINGTON'S POSSIBILITIES

Hugh A. Wilson

(DIRECTOR OF THE WILMINGTON CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.)

IF ENGINEERS WERE ASSIGNED THE duty of making and creating a harbor, they to go out and pick their site, they would in all probability select a location such as the City of Wilmington is so fortunate in occupying. Certainly the natural protection of the Palos Verdes hills and the breakwater that now extends from San Pedro east, is of untold worth in making this a permanent harbor and one of the world's greatest seaports.

One of the most striking features of the harbor is the growth that it has enjoyed in the last five years. Five years ago there were ninety inter-coastal and trans-Atlantic steamship companies making this city their port of call. Now, there are three hundred and fifty. As industry increases in Los Angeles and that city begins to manufacture the goods and materials needed for this southwest country, shipping will expand likewise.

As is generally known, Wilmington belongs to and is a part of the City of Los Angeles, and the harbor commissioners have presented necessary accountings to the city fathers at various times for needed development to take care of the future of this port. It is very gratifying to the people of Wilmington and this great city to know that when money is asked for for port purposes there is generally a unanimous verdict rendered at the polls and Wilmington receives the necessary funds to carry on.

A person has but to go to New York or any other Eastern seaport and there see the disadvantages of a harbor not situated as is Wilmington, relative to accessibility or approach from the ocean and where boats five minutes after leaving the rough water are safe and secure from possible winds and rough sea. Then, as ice in this locality in the wintertime is a curiosity—there being no fresh-water rivers emptying into this harbor—the dangers that the rugged winters of the East bring on are eliminated. Seamen are always glad to reach Wilmington, after leaving from Eastern ports and passing through the canal in the wintertime, for they know they are going to encounter pleasant weather and escape the extreme difficulties.

Wilmington does not only hold the key to the harbor and industries that need water front, but is also developing fast as a home center. During the past three years a great many homes and courts have been erected in Wilmington, and a survey of the town at this writing will show many homes under construction. However, there is an urgent need for more homes in this city.

Wilmington is the true key to the harbor in every respect—not only the terminal for transcontinental railroads, but also there are five main thoroughfares leading direct from the heart of Los Angeles to the harbor. Los Angeles is deeply interested in maintaining these boulevards and taking care of the heavy traffic to and from the harbor.

Records reveal the fact that over eight thousand cars are loaded per month in Wilmington. The five great railroads that enter Wilmington are the Union Pacific, Santa Fe, Southern Pacific, Pacific Electric and a municipal belt line. A significant feature of the shipping facilities of Wilmington is the fact that nearly as much tonnage is handled per month by the truck companies as by the combined totals of the railroads. Therefore, one can easily recognize the stratetgic position Wilmington holds as a distributing center.

Of tremendous importance to Wilmington is the complete faith that businessmen in general have. Some of the most prominent men in the financial world have interested themselves in the last three years in Wilmington property. Not only have they bought vacant property, but they are actively engaged in developing. One of these investments is by a prominent man from Michigan, who built a beautiful theatre on which the West Coast Theatre Corporation closed a twenty-five-year lease.

There are fifty-two kinds of manufacturing concerns in Wilmington. The principal industries are oil refining, shipping of oil, fish canneries and lumber.

A splendid recommendation for Wilmington is that the Pacific fleet of the United States Navy has this as its headquarters. To see the fleet of dreadnaughts coming in almost daily from their practice at sea gives added assurance that the coast in this vicinity will always receive the protection that is necessary.

In summing up the value of this port of Wilmington in conjunction with the City of Los Angeles, this place bids fair to surpass any shipping center on the Pacific Coast and to give some of its Eastern rivals serious thought. Also, for these reasons: the harbor is on a firm financial foundation with the City of Los Angeles backing it 100 percent, and every person in Los Angeles believes explicitly that Wilmington furnishes the solution for the industrial and commercial future.

This harbor serves a back-country of 350,000 square miles; in other words, it is the nearest adjacent port, and rail rates are more advantageous to shipping through this center. Belt line railways and highways surrounding the entire harbor are under construction. They, together with the thorough modern docks that are being built, make shipping the easiest and most satisfactory of any port anywhere.

Therefore, together with the wonderful assets of the harbor and the faith and backing that this community has, Wilmington will attract even the most skeptical, for the ground is laid and operations are under way to take care of what will be, in the next few years, the second largest city in the world.

If you contemplate a trip to the City of Los Angeles, do not leave without taking a cruise through the harbor district and acquainting yourself with the wonderful developments. The people of Wilmington are glad to occupy the spot-light, and are always ready to extend to the visitors their utmost courtesy.

April 23 several members of the Parlor visited Santa Ana, and the officers initiated a class of candidates for that Parlor. It was also represented at the Long Beach function of April 2 by a good-sized delegation. The Parlor will probably meet weekly in new quarters in the near future. At the Santa Rosa Grand Parlor Sepulveda will be represented by a big delegation who will make an intensive campaign to have San Pedro selected as the 1927 meeting place.

U. S. C. SUMMER SESSION

WITH THE SIGNING OF SOME OF the biggest men in their fields as visiting professors for the Summer Session of 1926, the University of Southern California, Los Angeles, is expecting an enrollment which will shatter the high mark made last year. Opening June 14 and continuing until August 6, the eight weeks' session will grant eight units of credit. The six weeks' course opens June 28 and continues to August 6, granting six units. Four units of credit may be secured by attending the post session, August 9 to 31.

In order to serve the many teachers that it has in the past, the schedule will contain as many education courses as can possibly be included, according to L. B. Rogers, dean of the Summer Session. Other departments which will carry a number of interesting and varied subjects will be English, history, music, physical education, psychology, sociology and economics, while agriculture, architecture, art, biblical literature, biology, chemistry, comparative literature, French, geography, geology, German, home economics, Italian, Latin, mathematics, penmanship, philosophy, physics, political science, public speaking, religious education and Spanish will all be represented with a number of good courses.

This year the faculty will not only be augmented by the visiting professors, but a number of Southern California's best men will remain. Dr. Wann, exchange professor to New York University, with Dr. Watt, will return to take several classes, while Austin, Beers, Bogardus, Carus, Case, Clark, Cooke, Conn, Cunningham, Dixon, Early, Gaw, Gilliland, Hunt, Immel, La Porte, Marston, Mount, Raubenheimer, Riddle, Rogers, Sedgwick, Stabler, Stormzand, Struble, R. T. Thompson, Tilroe, Touton, Waugh, Weatherby and Willett will continue at this time.

Among the visiting professors, Herbert Adams Gibbons, James Alton James, R. F. Piper, Richard Burton, Charles A. Ellwood, Herbert J. T. Coleman and Guy Montrose Whipple are some of the most distinguished. Gilmore Brown of the Pasadena Community Players, Carolyn Alden Aichin, lecturer in music at U. C. S. B., and John B. Corcoran, C. L. Glenn, Genevieve Kelso, Vierling Kersey and Robert H. Lane of the Los Angeles City school system, as well as Dr. C. L. Lowman of the Los Angeles Orthopaedic Hospital, are some of the educators in nearby institutions who will also teach at this time.

Herbert Adams Gibbons, head of the history and political science department of Robert College, Constantinople, from 1910 to 1913, and European correspondent in international affairs for "Century," "Christian Science Monitor" and several other publications from 1908 to 1922, as well as having written his now well-known books, "New Map of Europe," "Europe Since 1918" and the "New Map of Asia," is well known both as a lecturer and an author. He also was the Spencer Trask lecturer at Princeton for one year, from which institution he received his doctorate. He also holds a Litt. D. degree from Pennsylvania, given him in 1922. Dr. Gibbons, besides conducting a history seminar, will also have courses dealing with the Near East and Italy since Mazzini.

Dr. James, who comes to the same department from Northwestern, where he is dean of the graduate school, besides having written a number of pamphlets and books, among which are "Our Government" and "Government in State and Nation," is noted for his scholarly attitude, especially upon problems dealing more directly with the United States. He will give courses in American history and governmental formation.

Dr. Richard Burton, head of the English department in the University of Minnesota, has visited at Southern California in a previous session. Besides being the author of fiction, poetry and books of a more scholarly nature, is a frequent contributor to such magazines as "Bookman." Dr. Burton will offer courses in American poetry and contemporary writers.

Dr. Charles A. Ellwood, president of the American Sociological Society in 1924, head of the department at University of Missouri since 1900, a professor at the Summer Session of 1923, writer of many books and pamphlets, a member of a number of the world's leading sociological societies and an acknowledged au-

HEAR, YE NATIVES!

Going to the Santa Rosa Grand Parlor and want a nice tire cover, adorned with the emblem of the Order of Native Sons and the name of your particular Parlor?

Just drop in at the California Tire and Rim Company, Grand avenue and Fifteenth street, ask for F. W. Dillin, a member of Los Angeles Parlor No. 45, and be accommodated.

SHERIFF TELLS STATE'S HISTORY.

Sheriff William I. Traeger, Past Grand President N.S.G.W., spoke on early California history before the Norwalk Forum Club April 13, and for a half-hour held the closest attention of his auditors.

He told how near California came to being a Russian province; how one of the sweetest love stories of early California that has been immortalized in prose and poetry originated; how the Franciscan fathers came to California from Mexico and began settling the country by the building of missions and the conversion of the Indians; where the state's name originated, and how California "triggered around" being a territory.

Having every important date associated with the state's history at his tongue's end, Sheriff Traeger convinced his hearers that he knows California's history intimately, and the manner in which he related it captivated his audience.

CONTROLLER OF THE "JAY-WALKER."

One Native Son who makes his presence felt probably more than any other—and, for that matter, any adopted son—is Ralph T. Dorsey. No one can walk down Broadway, or on many of the outlying streets, without coming in contact with him. Not in person, but through the proxy of the multitude of traffic signals that stand with outstretched arms at the street intersections, for it is he who practically pulls the strings that make the arms stretch out.

Dorsey has done what no other traffic expert, however clever, before managed to do. He has made the "jay-walker" law a reality, a living fact instead of a toothless legislative enactment. And he did it because he had the brains to study and apply "mob psychology." He found that hurrying businessmen and shoppingwomen would wait on a corner a certain number of split seconds and no more. Therefore, he timed his signals accordingly and "got away" with the "jay-walker" law. And he is the only traffic controller of any city who has been able to "put it over."

Dorsey is a member of Vaquero Parlor No. 262 N.S.G.W., to which so many city and county employees belong. His parents, residents of Los Angeles, came to this city in 1887 and he was born here February 18, 1891. Deeply interested in electricity, he made that his life work and became a member of the staff of the city electrician. He soon saw the advantage of specialization and specialized on traffic control. Today he is "traffic controller" of Los Angeles, and almost every lasting feature for traffic control in this city has been introduced by him, especially as such control depends on the traffic signals.

Ralph Dorsey is the son of Thomas J. Dorsey, well known as a member of the police department back in the late '80s and early '90s when a mere handful of men was all that were required to keep order in the sleepy old Spanish pueblo. He also is a nephew of Rev. Patrick W. Dorsey, who came to Los Angeles in June 1881 in response to a call from a Baptist congregation. Rev. Dorsey preached his first sermon in a hall just north of First, on the east side of Spring. In 1885 he and his growing congregation built a church at Broadway and Sixth, which then was "way out of town," and were roundly denounced for going so far from the center of things.

Rev. Dorsey was the first man to assist General Phil Sheridan, when that warrior was the victim of a runaway that collided with a hack in which he was riding on Hill street in 1883. He helped General Sheridan and his wife to secure another conveyance, which took them to a doctor's office, where it was found that the general had a boken shoulderblade, but that his wife was not injured. That is something of Ralph Dorsey's ancestry, but his posterity will be even more proud of him, for he is rapidly lifting himself by his own bootstraps into the seats of the mighty.

LARGE CLASS INITIATED.

Los Angeles Parlor No. 45 N.S.G.W. initiated a large class of candidates April 15, and then adjourned to an uptown cafe, where a "feed" was served. President Andrew Stodel directed the talkfest, which brought responses from numerous sources, among others Harry F. O'Day, Henry H. Gripp, William O. Gilkey, Henry Brodek, Grand Trustee John T. Newell. During the month delegations from the Parlor visited all the Los Angeles County Parlors.

April 22, Los Angeles entertained all the California South delegates to the Santa Rosa Grand Parlor. The program, in charge of the Newell-for-Grand-Trustee campaign committee, Sidney B. Witkowski chairman, was the best presented by the Parlor for a long time, including several good vaudeville numbers and short, snappy talks. As a concluding feature a ravioli supper was served.

May 20 the Parlor will initiate another class of candidates, and on the 27th will stage another "big" night, complimentary to the delegates returned from Santa Rosa.

PIONEERS' MEMORIAL DEDICATED.

At the Santa Rosa Grand Parlor in May the delegation of sixteen from Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W. will endeavor to have the Grand Parlor designate two noted California Pioneers for places in the National Capital's hall of fame set aside for the state. Progress is being made in the Parlor's project for a new home, of its own. To date the stock subscriptions total $8,700, and it is hoped they will be so plentiful and liberal that building operations on the Venice boulevard property may be commenced at an early date.

With President Burrel D. Neighbors presiding, Ramona dedicated April 24 the Circle theater at Carthay Center, erected by J. Harvey McCarthy, a member of the Parlor, as a memorial to the California Pioneers. Frank G. Tyrrell was the principal speaker. The theater's interior is beautifully decorated with paintings depicting the state's early history, the drop-curtain subject being the Donner party. A special feature is a library containing many rare and valuable California history books.

Each member at the Parlor's May 14 meeting will have a chance for another Orpheum ticket, good for the 21st. May 28 there will be nomination of officers and initiation. Officers will be elected June 4, when the new by-laws will be presented for consideration.

SOUTHERN BRANCH SITE.

One of the largest gifts announced at the recent chater day exercises of the University of California at Berkeley was that of the site for the University of California, Southern Branch, at Westwood, in Los Angeles. This site, the gift of municipalities and individuals of California South, consists of more than 380 acres of land splendidly located for the development of the university's activities.

A movement now is on foot to add 200 acres more to the site, to care for work that may be undertaken in agricultural instruction. Buildings for this new site, it is hoped, may be erected with the $3,000,000 provided in the $8,500,000 bond issue the voters of the state are to decide on in November.

ANNUAL PICNIC.

The banquet in celebration of the thirtieth institution anniversary of Corona Parlor No. 196 N.S.G.W. drew out a big crowd April 12. Henry G. Bodkin was the toastmaster, and the speakers included Judge Robert M. Clarke, Past Grand President Herman C. Lichtenberger, Charter Member William T. Craig, Judge Bertin Weyl, Ed. B. Lovie, Gene Murphy, Arthur Schmidt, Ernest Orfila, Peter Muller, William G. Newell, A. Goldenson, Leo Ward, Joseph P. Sproul, C. C. Smither, John Concannon, R. T. Dorsey, C. R. Lewis, John Bodkin. On the Parlor's behalf President John W. Topham presented emblematic past president's rings to Harry Jorder and William Kennedy.

The remaining charter members of Corona are Louis Breer, A. C. Brode, D. J. Brownstein, A. Brownstein, W. T. Craig, A. Ducommon, Dr. D. W. Edelman, L. Isaacs, M. Isaacs, L. S. Nordlinger, Meyer Lissner, E. H. Roth. In charge of the anniversary banquet was the following committee: H. G. Bodkin, W. M. Kennedy, J. P. Sproul, E. H. Crawford, J. W. Topham.

During April Corona initiated several candidates and there is every indication that before the Santa Rosa Grand Parlor meeting it will have a membership entitling it to be represented there by four delegates. The Parlor is making fine progress, and authority from the Grand Parlor to change the name to Hollywood is anxiously awaited:

May 23, Corona will feature its annual picnic and barbecue, at Glen Oaks, through the courtesy of W. G. Riley and Walter P. Story. All Natives and their families are welcome. The admission fee for adults will be one dollar; children under 12, free. There will be a baseball game between teams from Los Angeles and Corona Parlors, races and other sports. To get to Glen Oaks drive to Glendale, out Chevy Chase boulevard to Glen Oaks boulevard, and follow the latter to the picnic grounds. The outing is in charge of a committee composed of Floyd Riley, John W. Topham, Charles Riley, Harry Jorder, Joseph P. Sproul, Robert Bodkin, William M. Kennedy, Edgar Black, Fred B. Lovie.

SILVER ANNIVERSARY.

Los Angeles Parlor No. 124 N.D.G.W. celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of its institution April 21. It is one of a chain of 14 Parlors throughout California whose specific purpose is the preservation and restoration of the historic landmarks and the perpetuation of the memory of the Pioneers.

The event was celebrated with the traditional birthday cake having 25 lighted candles, and one of the features was the attendance of some of the original corps of officers: Charter President Fannie Prather, Charter Second Vice-president Margery Alexander, Charter Marshal Louise D. Robinson. A guest of the evening was Florence E. Carre, who donated the Bible used in the Parlor's ceremonies. Los Angeles is the home-Parlor of Past Grand President Grace S. Stoermer.

D.D.G.P. Marvel Thomas was in charge of the delightful and entertaining program, Miss Grace J. Norton was chairman of the evening's festivities, and the meeting was presided over by Katheryn Ronan, who had the privilege of initi

WHY CAN LONG BEACH CONTINUE TO GROW?

A. A. Miller

(PUBLICITY DEPARTMENT, LONG BEACH CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.)

BECAUSE IT HAS ONE OF THE MOST complete combinations of attractive home life and financial development of any city in America, and those forces are fast making it into an ideal metropolis by the sea.

The leading causes that will act as motive forces to justify and compel the continued healthful growth of Long Beach may be headlined as follows: "Most Perfect All-the-Year Home City in America." "Is in Position to Manufacture Very Successfully." "Has the Powerful Commercial Development Existing." "Is Joint Heir to Varied and Stupendous Resources." "Can Develop Commerce with All World Markets."

Within an hour, the big City of Los Angeles can be reached by machine or cars, and within two hours the mountain heights may be scaled and views of a hundred miles enjoyed. The range of varied entertainment practicable from Long Beach as a focus and as the seat is scarcely surpassed in the world!

CAN ALSO DO BIG BUSINESS.

Long Beach is a great show town, in the sense of being an ideal one for human comfort and entertainment. But it does business, too. It has an extensive beginning for manufacturing, and is on a good harbor, which is the foundation for land and sea commerce.

This city is peculiarly fortunate in having a big production of petroleum right at its gates.

MOST PERFECT HOME CITY.

It is admitted that such a claim is sweeping. It may seem presumptuous at first thought, even to good friends of Long Beach. But it is meant literally.

Its ocean beach is not excelled in attractive beauty by any other sea strand in the United States. Not another one is so nearly stormless. It is an all-the-year beach, does not have to quit, winter or summer. It is unequaled in convenience, is right at the city's side. It is long, clean and safe, even for small children. It is an everlasting source of interest and entertainment for people of all ages. Let any traveler think of a beach that so completely possesses all those qualities in North America.

More than that: It is by a city where all the comforts of modern home-life can be had within a few rods or blocks of the ocean shore.

This fact gives it an abundance of fuel for industries, shipping and domestic purposes. It is the economic assurance for all of Southern California, and is the basic reason why Los Angeles has made such vigorous strides in growth.

Petroleum literally revolutionized Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and other Eastern states in days gone by, and is doing the same now for Oklahoma and Texas. It will keep Long Beach going forward in manufacturing and domestic supply until the other splendid resource that is to lay the foundation in Southern California for everlasting development and prosperity is ready for extensive use—waterpower.

ENOUGH FOR AGES TO COME.

There is enough hydro-electric energy in the great Colorado River and streams of the mountains of California to operate 15,000 miles of railroads and provide power, heat and light for at least 10,000,000 people.

Already plans are in action to develop several million horsepower from those streams, in addition to approximately 1,000,000 horsepower already in active use in California. Not many years hence the waterpowers of this southwest country will be worth billions of dollars.

That mighty reservoir of power will enable this state and other adjacent states to grow into complete industrial-economic co-ordinations even when the supply of coal and petroleum may become too costly or scarce to permit practicable manufacturing operations, in a future that is anticipated in the years to come.

ALREADY FULL OF BUSINESS.

Long Beach is not a mere assembly of shore, swings, slides and bath-houses, although it has all those attractions in abundance. It is now a business center of large and growing importance. It manufactures, ships by land and sea. Its transportation facilities include vessels, steam and electric railroads and trucks. It is connected with all places of importance by fine, modern roads.

Its banks carry around $60,000,000 or more of deposits and these evidences of active business are growing larger with the same energy that characterizes all of the movements of Long Beach. All retail lines are represented by modern stores, and the wholesale establishments are gaining a good foothold also. Long Beach is a prosperous-looking, very modern city, that impresses one with its many superior merits by just coming within its confines.

It takes pride in its schools, its churches, its library. One very large cause of its extraordinary success has been, and will be, the fact that its moral character has always been kept clean. Good people like to live here because the atmosphere is wholesome, always. Long Beach is a complete home city.

CAN CONTINUE TO EXPAND.

This city can continue to develop because it has the underlying supports to justify such advancement. It is a model of home comfort and interest. It has a natural factory zone by the sea. It has petroleum. It will have mighty waterpower. Its farm productions now amount to almost half a billion dollars a year at farm prices. It receives millions of dollars yearly from hundreds of thousands of visitors.

STATES SOCIETIES GUESTS OF NATIVE SONS AND DAUGHTERS.

The Long Beach Native Sons and Native Daughters entertained the Long Beach Federation of State Societies April 21 at a delightful affair which was largely attended. Flags from nearly every state in the union were displayed. Supper, prepared under the supervision of Mrs. Clara Fay and Edgar Crowell, was served by Native Daughters captained by Vivian Burk.

President J. A. Max Schlemmer of the Native Sons was master of ceremonies at the banquet-board, and the high-school orchestra furnished several selections. The speakers included Joseph Cash, president of the federation; Clyde Doyle, Judge Rex B. Goodcell, Albert V. Mayrhofer; Squire Du Ree, who delivered a toast to the N.S.G.W., and Mrs. Levi Bond, who toasted the N.D.G.W.

President Bertha Hitt of the Native Daughters presided over the entertainment which followed the supper, the program including: Welcome address, Judge Percy Hight; vocal solo, Mrs. M. J. Swepston; powder-puff dance, Maxine Pitts; whistling solo, Grace Brittain; reading, Marguerite Lovett; Spanish dance, May Crogur; selection, N.S.G.W. quartet; song and dance, Jean McKelvey.

At the Santa Rosa Grand Parlor, Long Beach's delegates will present three local ideas for statewide use: a unique road sign, a booklet descriptive of the State (Bear) Flag for distribution among young folks' organizations, and an attractive greeting-card to be sent to each male child upon his advent into California.

THIMBLE CLUB MEETS.

The thimble club of Long Beach Parlor No. 154 N.D.G.W. had an all-day meeting March 18 at the home of Mrs. Kate McFadyen, who was in Elsinore. Among the guests were President Charlotte Bennett, Secretary Carrie Lenhouse and Catherine Ross of Rudecinda Parlor (San Pedro). In addition to sewing, all present wrote postcards to Mrs. McFadyen and also to D.D.G.P. Marvel Thomas, who was sojourning at Wheeler Springs.

WHAT'S THE USE?

"Editor Grizzly Bear: I stated in one of my former letters that I would write every month on my favorite displeasure, the Jap. Now I think, what's the use? Here the other day the famous 'potato king' died, worth about $6,000,000, and the 'band plays on.' We also note a bread trust was busted; it only amounted to $2,000,000.

"That's nothing, when you remember that we paid as high as $10 for a little sack of onions from Jap potato king, and nobody even thought of busting that trust, for fear we might offend Japan! But, if some insignificant person had a $1,000,000 trust of any kind—oh, what's the use? They won't even listen to Colonel Mitchell about the Jap aircraft. So, what's the use?

"Sincerely and fraternally,

"FRANK I. BUTLER.

SANTA ROSA HAS ELABORATE PROGRAM FOR ENTERTAINMENT OF N. S. G. W. GRAND PARLOR

Mark Lee

(CHAIRMAN PUBLICITY COMMITTEE, SANTA ROSA PARLOR N.S.G.W.)

"Pack up your troubles in your old kit bag and smile, smile, smile;
What's the use of worrying, it never was worth while,
So pack up your troubles in your old kit bag and

THESE WORDS ARE RUNNING through the writer's head as this article is being dictated, for the campaign has just been completed and the funds necessary to properly entertain the delegates and visitors to the Forty-ninth Grand Parlor session of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, are safely deposited in the bank. The response from the businessmen for funds proved conclusively the statement of the delegates who presented the invitation a year ago that the entire community of Santa Rosa would be behind the local Santa Rosa Parlor No. 28 and that all were looking forward to the pleasure of entertaining the delegates of this distinctive, outstanding Order of the Golden State.

The local committee has gone through the usual procedure in the preparation of routine details to insure the success of the business sessions and the comfort and convenience of the delegates and then has devoted its time to the question of proper entertainment. When we think of the good times which are in store for all of you who come to Santa Rosa during the week of May 10-14,—those of you who have attended previous Grand Parlor sessions and those who have not,—we are reminded of the story of the darkey who had listened patiently to the long-winded discourse of his friend who, as valet of a wealthy American, had traveled throughout the old country. The traveling friend described, in great detail, the height of the buildings of New York City, the size of the trans-Atlantic liner, the denseness of the fog of London, the wickedness of Paris, the canals of Venice, the feeding of the pigeons in Rome, etc. Finally, the home-town darkey broke in with this question, "Say boy, has you ever had delirium tremins?" To this question his friend in astonishment said, "No." The home-town darkey then said, "'Boy, then you ain't been nowheres and you ain't seen nothin'." That is the position in which those Native Sons will find themselves who do not take advantage of the opportunity of attending the Grand Parlor session which is to be held in Santa Rosa, the county-seat of "Imperial" Sonoma County.

ALVA H. BARNEY,

Grand Secretary John T. Regan is making arrangements for a special train to carry the delegates from San Francisco to Santa Rosa, arriving in the convention city at about 5:30 p. m. Sunday, May 9. This train will be met by the reception committee from Santa Rosa Parlor, which will be on the job to meet each train after that until the first session begins on Monday morning. The delegates arriving by train will be conducted to the registration headquarters at the Occidental Hotel. Those who plan to drive their own machines should report there upon arrival in the city.

After registering at headquarters, the delegates will be escorted by Boy Scouts of America to the rooms to which they have been assigned for the duration of their stay in Santa Rosa. Some will be assigned to rooms in hotels, others to apartment-houses, a few to rooming-houses and a few fortunate ones are to be privileged to enjoy the hospitality accorded by some of the citizens of Santa Rosa making rooms in their private homes available for the use, comfort and convenience of Native Sons during their stay in the City of Roses.

THOMAS VIRGIL BUTTS, Director Entertainment Committee.

Through the Ministerial Federation, arrangements are being made for special services to be held in the churches on Sunday evening. There are eighteen churches in Santa Rosa, each of which is housed in its own building, so the visitor should have no difficulty in finding a place of worship of the denomination which he prefers. The officers of the Grand Parlor have not as yet completed the program for the business sessions, so this cannot be outlined in this article. However, the local committee does know the hours which will be occupied by the business sessions and has made arrangements to occupy fully the time of the delegates between sessions. On Monday morning registration will continue until the opening of the business session, which will last until the later part of the afternoon.

RECEPTION MONDAY EVENING.

A true expression of the hospitality of the community will be voiced to the visitors on Monday evening at the reception, which is to take place on the plaza in front of the Sonoma County Court House. The delegates and their guests will be welcomed by City Manager Charles O. Dunbar, who has twice been president of the Santa Rosa Parlor. He will be followed by Senator Herbert Slater, who has so well represented Santa Rosa in the State Legislature for several years. Justice Emmet Seawell of the California Supreme Court, a past president of the local Parlor, will be the last speaker from Santa Rosa and will voice the pleasure which the people of the City of Roses have in being privileged to entertain the Grand Parlor. Responses will be made by Grand President Fletcher A. Cutler, Past Grand President William I. Traeger of Los Angeles and Past Grand President Daniel A. Ryan of San Francisco. The reception will be brought to a close by a dance in Native Sons' Hall.

SUMMER RESORTS TO BE VISITED.

On Tuesday, all hands are to be taken on an automobile trip through the heart of the agricultural and resort section of Sonoma County. Leaving Santa Rosa about 8:30 in the morning, the caravan will head south over the Redwood Highway to Penngrove, where it will swing east to the Old Adobe, built in 1834 as the home of General M. G. Vallejo, the last Mexican governor of California. Here a half-hour stop will be made to permit of the inspection of the building.

Going from the historic place immediately into the bustling industrial life of the present day, the caravan will proceed into Petaluma, "The World's Egg Basket," in the vicinity of which thirty million dozen eggs are produced annually. In this progressive community, fifteen miles south of Santa Rosa, the visitors will be escorted through the largest egg-packing plant in the West. Here they will see eggs brought in from the ranch, graded, washed, sanded, packed and loaded ready for shipment to all parts of the United States through the activity, energy and keen business management of that co-operative association, the Poultry Producers of Central California.

Following the inspection of the egg-packing plant, the caravan will be routed out through the poultry farm section of the Petaluma district, until the Redwood Highway is reached a few miles north of the city. The caravan will continue northward to Cotati, where it will swing west over the Gravenstein Highway, which passes through the apple-producing section of Sonoma County, to Sebastopol in the "Gold Ridge District," and on through the berry-producing section of the county and westward into the Russian River resort section.

Years of increasing patronage have compelled residents in this section to expand entertainment capacities until homes have grown into resorts. Favorite groves have opened to the public as camp grounds. The hills have been invaded by recreation seekers who have hidden cottages in the dense foliage. Hundreds have increased to thousands, until now, no one knows or even cares how many people lurk about the hills and river. It is estimated that the population in this section of Sonoma County in the summertime is about equal to the census population of the entire county.

At the time this trip is taken, the woods and open hills will be fairly carpeted with innumerable varieties of wild flowers. At Monte Rio a basket lunch is to be served by the resortmen. Petaluma will co-operate by furnishing the eggs for this lunch, and Sebastopol by furnishing apple pies. This will be a spread long to be remembered!

TO VISIT BOHEMIAN GROVE.

Another feature that will probably never be

LELAND S. LEWIS,
Secretary Entertainment Committee.

forgotten by those who take this trip, will be the visit to the Bohemian Grove of large virgin redwoods. This grove for years has been used by the Bohemian Club of San Francisco to hold its annual "high jinks." The grove is probably the most exclusive spot in California. No woman is permitted to step inside the imposing gate during the festive month of the annual "jinks." An outsider is permitted, only on selective invitation. In the grove is an enormous outdoor theatre with a stage that has accommodated 200 performers in chorus. The theatre is completely surrounded with huge redwoods, the branches of which form a ceiling so thick that the sunshine never penetrates the shaded aisles below, but more often the lights filter through the crowns

SANTA ROSA PROGRAM

of the trees, sending down slanting shafts of radiance to glorify the scene.

After the bountiful lunch has been digested and the members of the party have been satiated with the beauties of the glorious redwoods in this virgin forest produced by Mother Nature, there will be time for a refreshing swim in the cool, clear, warm waters of the Russian River.

As the afternoon wears away, the caravan will leave Monte Rio and proceed up the river five miles to Guerneville. On this trip the road follows the river bank and, at times, overhanging cliffs above and the clear quiet river below draw even the driver's eye with a force as impelling as the sirens of old. The drive is not dangerous, but "caution" will be a well-headed slogan. The hills of this section have been stripped of their virgin growth of timber, but now the second growth is much heavier than the first, though in spots the sun shines through just enough to blend the cool shade into a delightful warmth.

Proceeding through Guerneville, the heart of the river resort section, the caravan will wind through the fertile valley up over Pocket Canyon hill, through Forestville, across the Laguna and into Santa Rosa, which will be reached in ample time for the Past Grand Presidents to prepare for their banquet, Tuesday evening.

WOMENFOLKS TO PETRIFIED FOREST.

The delegates will be in a business session all day Wednesday, but it is on this day that the womenfolks are to be privileged to enjoy one of the true marvels of this county, the Petrified Forest.

Under the tutelage of J. "Hoke" Smith, the genial, gray-haired, youthful Sonoma County Assessor and active member of the Santa Rosa Parlor, they are to be transported by automobile over the fourteen-mile road to the Petrified Forest, where they are to be the guest of the gracious proprietress, Mrs. Ollie Bockee. The petrified trees at this place are the largest that have ever been found. The largest which has been excavated is twelve feet in diameter and has been uncovered for a length of 126 feet. Another natural phenomenon to be seen on this trip is the bridge tree.

The grand ball is to be held on Wednesday evening in a hall which will accommodate fifteen hundred dancing couples. "Nuf sed!"

TO SEE "VALLEY OF MOON."

Thursday has been set aside for a trip through the most historic part of Sonoma County. Arrangements have been made for an automobile caravan to trek on this day through the "Valley of the Moon." Proceeding easterly across Rincon Valley past the Santa Rosa Golf and Country Club to Warfield, a side trip of one mile will be taken to Glen Ellen, where the famous Jack London ranch is located. It was here, at Wake-Robin Lodge on beautiful Sonoma Creek, that he wrote many of his stories. Returning to the highway and continuing down the valley, a stop will be made at the ranch which was the home of General "Fighting" Joe Hooker. Here the landmarks committee of the Grand Parlor, Joseph R. Knowland chairman, will erect a permanent marker. Following this ceremony the trip will be continued through the hot springs resort section of the county including Agua Caliente, Fetters, Boyes, etc., to Sonoma.

At Sonoma, the following points of interest will be inspected: The Mission San Francisco de Solano, California's most northern mission, established in 1823, and its museum; the landmarks committee will erect a permanent marker here, also. The barracks of 1846. The Bear Flag monument, which marks the spot where the Bear Flag was raised in 1846. The last home of General Mariano Guadalupe Vallejo, at which a permanent marker will also be placed by the landmarks committee. "The Blue Wing," early-day rendezvous in which Joaquin Murrietta and his cohorts made merry in the days of gold. The home of General Percifer Smith.

BARBECUE AND BANQUET.

After inspecting these historic points, the caravan will return to the Joe Hooker ranch, where a barbecue lunch will be served—and you know what that means! Following the barbecue, there will be races and sports of various kinds enjoyed until the later part of the afternoon, when the return trip will be made to Santa Rosa.

The banquet for the members of the Grand Parlor will be served Thursday evening. While the men are enjoying this the womenfolks will be guests at a theatre party.

The election of officers of the Grand Parlor will be held on Friday morning and the installation of officers in the afternoon, following which the Forty-ninth Grand Parlor will adjourn and another milestone in the history of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West will have been passed.

The City of Santa Rosa had planned to revive the Rose Festival, which had been held for twenty-nine years prior to 1918, and all arrangements had been made to start the activities and festivities in connection with this event immediately following the adjourning of the Grand Parlor on Friday, but owing to the untimely death of Santa Rosa's most-famed citizen, Luther Burbank, world-renowned horticulturist and plant creator, the celebration has been called off out of respect to his memory.

Native Sons and Native Daughters, Santa Rosa awaits your comnig!

THE WORKERS

Arrangements for the entertainment and accommodation of the Forty-ninth Grand Parlor N.S.G.W. are in competent hands—a committee from Santa Rosa Parlor No. 28. This committee has been at work for a long time, and every detail of the arrangements will have been perfected when the delegates begin to arrive, Sunday, May 9.

Officers of this committee are: Sonoma County Tax Collector Thomas Virgil Butts, director; Frank Berger, assistant director; Leland S. Lewis, secretary; J. Ralph Williams, treasurer. Sub-committees, in charge of the numerous details, are composed of the following:

Finance—Frank P. Doyle (chairman), William H. Pool, John C. Smith.

Accommodations—Geo. W. Matthews (chairman), Lucien E. Fulwider, William E. Cook.

Program, Badges and Headquarters—Frank Berger (chairman), H. W. Jacobs, Karl Stolting.

Convention Hall—John Hawkes (chairman), Don McIntosh, Harry L. Hall.

Ladies' Entertainment—J. C. Hoke Smith (chairman), Marvin T. Vaughn.

Entertainment—Charles O. Dunbar.

Publicity—Mark Lee (chairman), Carl A. Patterson, Clement L. Miner.

Banquets and Luncheons—Louis Rossi (chairman), Thomas M. Robinson, Enrico Muzzio.

Auto Transportation—James Ramage (chairman), Thomas J. Hutchinson, Frank McNamara, John H. Williams, B. W. Farnsworth.

Decorations—Frank W. Luttrell (chairman), James Mailer.

County Parlors' Co-operating Committee—Herbert Sweed, Eugene Mangin, Petaluma; Irving Shepherd, Glen Ellen; L. Bosch, Sonoma; Hubert Scudder, William Borba, Sebastopol.

SOUVENIR BADGE.

As a souvenir of their visit to Santa Rosa for the Forty-ninth Grand Parlor, members thereof will be presented by Santa Rosa Parlor No. 2 with a handsome badge.

The design embraces the Sonoma County Court House, the American and the State (Bear) Flags embossed in colors, and the California poppy.

TRANSPORTATION.

To get to Santa Rosa for the Grand Parlor purchase a fifteen-day summer-rate ticket to San Francisco. There buy a "Native Son Convention" round-trip ticket over the Northwestern Pacific.

The Northwestern will run a special train. To "make it," take the ferry leaving that station in San Francisco at 3:15 p. m. Sunday, May 1.

The rates are available for all members of the Order and their relatives.

FORTY-NINTH N. S. GRAND PARLOR

(CLARENCE M. HUNT.)

MONDAY, MAY 10, IN THE CITY OF Santa Rosa, Sonoma County, the Forty-ninth Grand Parlor of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West will convene. Monday, Wednesday and Friday will be devoted to consideration of the affairs of the Order, the intervening days being devoted to enjoying the hospitality that will be extended by the people of Sonoma County generally.

Grand President Fletcher A. Cutler, affiliated with Humboldt Parlor No. 14 (Eureka, Humboldt County), but a resident of Burlingame, San Mateo County, will preside over the deliberations. With the closing of the session he will, by virtue of having retired from the Grand Presidency, become the Junior Past Grand President.

The report of Grand Secretary John T. Regan will show that April 19 the Order had a total membership of 27,660, the largest in its history, and a gain since January 1 of 247. The membership gain for the calendar year 1925 was 420, bringing the total membership to 27,413 December 31.

Since the last (San Bernardino) Grand Parlor two Subordinate Parlors have been instituted —Glendale No. 264 at Glendale, Los Angeles County, and Santa Ana No. 265 at Santa Ana, Orange County. Several others are in process of formation.

For the calendar year 1925 the total income of the Subordinate Parlors was $476,418.03, and their disbursements $439,488.98. Sick benefits of $120,471.59 were paid 1,922 members by benefit-paying Parlors; several Parlors do not pay benefits.

December 31, 1925, the total assets of all the Subordinate Parlors were $1,160,231.63, including $295,811.55 cash. Parlors of 450 members and over, together with their assets, include:

A SUGGESTION.

In the way of legislation, it will be proposed that the constitution be so amended as to provide that the Historiographer shall be appointed by the Grand President for a period of five years, and shall be allowed $50 per month for compensation, expenses and purchase of materials. The much-discussed office of Grand Director is likely to be the subject for considerable proposed legislation, and there will no doubt be he writer believes that the time has come the Order to change its course from a secret- al organization to one working along club s. In fifty years, the ritual-course has not en the Order very far; and the progress that been made has come from the doing of those igs which are associated with club-work, not ecret-ritual organization: preserving land- ks, marking historic sites, gathering and pre- ing history data, finding homes for homeless dren, etc.

t was never intended, so the writer believes, : the Order of Native Sons should be either et or ritual in nature, but that its energies uld be confined to civic endeavors. Hun- ds, yes thousands, of native-born men, among m many of California's most influential citi- s, will gladly and readily associate them- es with a non-ritual Order of Native Sons of Golden West, but will not affiliate with the er as at present operated.

Ve have the foundation for doing big things, upon that foundation must, if the Order is attain its rightful goal and to accomplish igs which it was destined to accomplish, be lded a club structure. The writer trusts that Santa Rosa Grand Parlor will legislate along line, feeling assured that, if it does, no thly power can prevent the Order from be- ing the greatest power—for good—in Cali- nia.

eral of the Grand Parlor offices are afloat, but it is doubtful if they materialize. Without opposition, the following will, unless the unexpected happens, be elected or re-elected:

Grand President—Grand First Vice-president Hilliard E. Welch (Lodi 18) of Lodi, San Joaquin County.

Grand First Vice-president—Grand Second Vice-president Charles A. Thompson (Santa Clara 100) of Santa Clara City.

Grand Second Vice-president—James A. Wilson (Rincon 72) of San Francisco.

Grand Secretary—John T. Regan (South San Francisco 157) of San Francisco, incumbent.

Grand Treasurer—John E. McDougald (California 1) of San Francisco, incumbent.

Others may be elected without opposition, too, but that is not such a certainty. As to the remaining elective offices, diligent search on the part of The Grizzly Bear has found these candidates:

Grand Third Vice-president—Grand Trustee Richard M. Hamb (Piedmont 120) of Oakland; Grand Trustee Charles L. Dodge (Carquinez 205) of Crockett, Contra Costa County.

Grand Marshal—Grand Inside Sentinel J. Hartley Russell (Stanford 76) of San Francisco.

Grand Inside Sentinel—Grand Outside Sentinel George A. Dethlefsen (Watsonville 65) of Watsonville, Santa Cruz County.

Grand Outside Sentinel—A. W. Garcelon (Arcata 20) of Arcata, Humboldt County.

Grand Trustees (seven to be chosen)—Dr. Frank I. Gonzalez (Pacific 10) of San Francisco, incumbent; I. H. Reuter (Yosemite 24) of Merced City; John T. Skelton (Sunset 26) of Sacramento City, incumbent; Justice Emmet Seawell (Santa Rosa 28) of Santa Rosa, Sonoma County; John T. Newell (Los Angeles 45) of Los Angeles City, incumbent; Alfred H. McKnew (San Francisco 49) of San Francisco, incumbent; Seth Millington (Colusa 69) of Colusa City; Eugene H. O'Donnell (Dolores 208) of San Francisco; Southard M. Modry (Bret Harte 260) of San Francisco. That's but nine; there should be double that number of contestants for honors in this branch of the service. What's the matter with the "faithfuls" from the Mother Lode section and that great stretch of Native Sonized country north of Sacramento City, etc.?

The Grand Organist and Historiographer, to complete the list of grand officers, are appointed by the Grand President.

For next year's Grand Parlor, "bids" will be extended by, so it is rumored, Humboldt Parlor No. 14 in behalf of Eureka, Humboldt County,

SAN DIEGO'S GREAT PLAYGROUND AND INTERESTING ZOO

W. S. Carson

(SAN DIEGO-CALIFORNIA CLUB.)

ONE OF THE MOST POPULAR SECtions of Balboa Park, San Diego's great 1,400-acre playground around which the city is built, is the gardens of the Zoological Society. Established only five years ago, it is already one of the ranking institutions of its kind in the United States and before long is expected to be the leading zoo in America. Each year notable additions are made to the collections of animals. The grounds embrace an area of about 120 acres of mesa and canyon just north of the central group of buildings which housed a part of the exposition held in San Diego in 1915-16. Because of the character of the land, the quarters for the various kinds of specimens may be located to the best advantage. Along the floor of the canyons are a series of pools in which the aquatic animals and birds have their quarters; on the mesas are the compounds in which the birds and reptiles quartered there, and most of them thrive and increase under the ideal climatic conditions and environment under which they live in captivity.

The setting for the zoo is most picturesque. elephants, camels, deer and similar animals are housed, while the grottoes in which the lions, tigers and other ferocious animals live are built into the walls of the canyons.

a unique. In that at first glance there appears e nothing to prevent the inmates from roam- r at large if they see fit. Anyone making his l visit to the zoo gets quite a thrill when h gazes down into an open grotto and sees e a huge lion, either pacing along a ledge o aking his ease in the sunlight. No bars are in ront of the animal or above him, while at t rear is the cavern in which he retires at ght. Closer inspection proves that while the l across the front of the grotto is only a few t in height, there is a moat several feet in dth between the ledge which forms the front ch of Mr. Leo's quarters and the wall. This t is too wide to be spanned by a leap, so the n is just as far removed from liberty as ough he was confronted by the stoutest of iron rs.

Because of the mild climate of San Diego at l seasons of the year, animals are brought to zoo from tropical countries and consequent- particularly susceptible to low temperatures, ve out of doors. The same is true of birds ch have their homes either in the big flying , or in one of the smaller ones.

Balboa Park is easily reached by either auto streetcar and the entrance to the zoo is only hort walk from the streetcar line. Because he extent of the grounds and the number of ibits, not less than a half-day is required to all the exhibits, while to those who are par- larly interested in wild life even two or three s are not enough to make the visit complete. ne of the strangest animals to be found in entire collection is seen soon after the vis- passes through the turnstiles. This is the hant seal, so named because it has most of earmarks of a seal, but also has a suggestion t trunk, similar to the probosis of the ele- nt. This animal was captured on an island

LOVELY MAY

Lovely May, lovely May,
Decks the world with blossoms gay,
"Come ye all, come ye all,"
Thus the flowers call.
Sparkles now the sunny dale,
Fragrant is the flowery vale;
Song of bird, song of bird,
In the grove is heard.

Lightly pass, lightly pass,
Thro' the nodding meadow grass;
Woodlands bright, woodlands bright,
Wake from winter's night.
Where the silver brooklet flows,
Rippling softly as it goes,
Will we rest, will we rest,
In green mossy nest.

he coast of Mexico and is said to be the only of its kind in captivity. It is a mere babe ears, although it already weighs more than n and is not expected to reach its maturity a number of years. Like its cousin, the fur , it lives on fish and its main object in life ns to be to sun itself while sprawled on the s or sand. For variety's sake it occassion- takes a dip in the lagoon and it insists upon g fed, rather than picking up fish which may ossed into the lagoon by the keeper.

egardless of the Darwinian theory, the pri- e section of the zoo is the most popular place seldom is a crowd lacking around the cages re the monkeys, apes and baboons have their rters. These crowds are not confined to the nger generation, either, as grownfolks seem et just as much of a kick out of the antics he monkeys as the kids do. Thirty cages, rectangle, all of steel wire mesh, are the es of the smaller monkeys, while the larger eties have quarters in another cage a short ance away.

ne of the most impressive features of the is the giant flying cage, said to be the larg- of its kind, in which a great variety of birds e their home. Under the roof of netting fully matured trees, while through the length he cage runs a stream of water which, near center, widens out into a pool for the wading s. A wide variety of birds live together , more or less harmoniously, and many of a are so tame they will eat out of the hand visitor.

On a mesa across one of the canyons from the main portion of the exhibits are the big pens in which the herbivorous animals live. Among the most notable of these are the kangaroo family, the elephants on which the kids are privileged to ride, and Mr. and Mrs. Al Bahr with their offspring, Little Al, the camels.

Last, but not least, are the snakes, of which there are several hundred. These are the only specimens which are really under roof. Diabalo, a giant Indian python twenty-three feet long, gets the most floorspace, while the other varieties are confined in smaller, wire-mesh quarters. A small lagoon in the center of the reptile house affords a home for the big colony of water snakes.

If one wishes to see all the animals, birds and reptiles confined in the zoo, a walk of several miles will have to be made, but the exercise does not tire one, because of the frequent stops along the way to study the exhibits.

BIG DOINGS, MAY 1 AND 2.

The representatives from San Diego Parlor No. 108 N.S.G.W. to the Santa Rosa Grand Parlor will request the co-operation of the whole Order in raising the required funds to begin immediate erection of the proposed Cabrillo monument at Point Loma. Last year, at San Bernardino, the Grand Parlor itself pledged $10,000 to the monument fund.

The membership drive that has been under way during April by Deputy Grand President Albert V. Mayrhofer will terminate Saturday, May 1, with the initiation of a large class of candidates. A banquet will follow the initiatory ceremonies and a program of entertainment will be presented.

The following day, the Parlor will have its annual barbecue at El Monte Park. The program will include musical selections, dancing, games and other forms of amusement. The general public will be admitted to the barbecue.

San Diego has extended invitations to all the California South Parlors to participate in the May 1 and 2 events, and an immense outpouring is anticipated and hoped for. A good time is assured.

ENJOYABLE EVENING.

An enjoyable evening was spent by San Diego Parlor No. 208 N.D.G.W. when the following program was presented: Selections, Catherine Sauter, Rena Case, Gloria Williams, Katherine Heilbron; reading, Edith DeVoe; musical numbers by the talented daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Silva. Refreshments were served. In charge was the following committee: Edith DeVoe (chairman), Zona Heilbron, Virginia Bryant.

At the Sacramento Grand Parlor in June, San Diego will present Dr. Louise C. Heilbron, a member now residing in Sacramento, for the office of Grand Vice-president.

NATIVE SONS' NUMBERS INCREASED

ONE HUNDRED AND SEVENTY-NINE native-born Californians became affiliated March 30 with the San Francisco Parlors of Native Sons of the Golden West at a joint class initiation. The candidates were divided as folloys: California 1, nine; Pacific 10, three; Golden Gate 29, four; Rincon 72, eight; Stanford 76, three; Bay City 104, two; Niantic 105, eight; Hesperian 137, two; Alcalde 154, two; South San Francisco 157, seven; Sequoia 160, one; Precita 187, four; Olympus 189, two; Presidio 194, one; Marshall 202, eight; Dolores 208, four; Twin Peaks 214, seventy-two; El Capitan 222, one; Guadalupe 231, fourteen; Castro 232, sixteen; Balboa 234, one; James Lick 242, two; Bret Harte 260, three; El Carmelo 256, two.

The initiation was arranged for by a joint committee from all the Parlors with these officers: Joseph Rose (Marshall 202), chairman; Edward Minehan (Guadalupe 231), vice-chairman; Harry Schroeder (Twin Peaks 214), secretary; George J. Nilan (South San Francisco 157), treasurer.

After the initiatory ceremonies Chairman Rose introduced Grand President Cutler, who made a wonderful address, expounding the principals of the Order, and thanked the committee for honoring him with the class. He then presented prizes to the winning Parlors, as follows: first, for the largest number of candidates, Twin Peaks 214; second, the largest percentage of candidates, Niantic 105. For the next four prizes the Parlors were grouped in classes nearly equal in membership and the following were the winners: first, Castro 232; second, Guadalupe 231; third, Marshall 202; fourth, Bret Harte 260.

Newbauer, Grand Organist Henry G. W. Dinkelspiel, H. L. Gunzberger, Max E. Licht. The Parlor celebrated its thirty-ninth institution anniversary April 24.

BACHELORS' RANKS THINNING.

The night of delegates' election in Olympus Parlor No. 189 N.S.G.W. was a big event. Past President Richard Cullen was master of ceremonies, with Past President William Neeson as his assistant. George Schonfeld and Lester Castillo looked after the entertainment, and Frank Fahey and his good of the order committee put on a feed. President Dan Sheehan spoke on the restoration of Santa Barbara Mission.

Robert Hall, second vice-president of the Parlor, recently deserted the bachelors and wedded Miss Margaret Ruth Lucas, a popular El Dorado schoolteacher. The ceremony was performed at Palo Alto, where the couple will reside following their return from a honeymoon in Hawaii. Only a few more bachelors left in Olympus.

MINSTREL SHOW.

La Estrella No. 89 N.D.G.W. acted as hostess to Castro Parlor No. 178 N.D.G.W. March 22. A minstrel show, presented by the Castroites, and heartily enjoyed by everyone, proved that that Parlor has within its ranks many talented members. After the show a Dutch supper was served. La Estrella is arranging for its annual anniversary banquet May 12.

MANY COMPLIMENTS.

El Vespero Parlor No. 118 N.D.G.W. received an official visit March 23 from Grand President Sue J. Irwin, who praised the officers for their perfect rendition of the ritual and the Parlor for its membership personnel. Other visitors were Grand Trustee Sallie Rutherford-Thaler, Grand Outside Sentinel Evelyn I. Carlson, D.D.G.P. Lillian Splain. Mrs. Clara A. Brady was chairman of the evening. Seven candidates were initiated. A surprise of the evening was the presentation of a hand-painted china cake

The lodge-room was a bower of smilax, interspersed with spring flowers, while the banquet table was resplendent in green and gold. The evening was greatly enjoyed, and the Parlor received many compliments. April 27 El Vespero had a whist party, May 25 will be a social night and June 3 the twenty-sixth institution anniversary will be celebrated.

BASKETBALL TEAM ORGANIZED.

Twin Peaks Parlor No. 185 N.D.G.W., known about San Francisco as "the Parlor that does things," has organized the first and only N.D. basketball team in the city, and there is much enthusiasm. In its first game with experienced players the team lost by but one point.

The Parlor's drillteam is being reorganized and will be ready for the coming Admission Day celebration. Thirty candidates are already in line from Twin Peaks for the joint initiation. Plans for Mother's Day observance and the annual dance are in the hands of competent committees. "Something doing every minute," is the Twin Peaks slogan.

OLD-TIME PARTY.

Mission Parlor No. 227 N.D.G.W. staged an old-time party March 23, when the members appeared in costume of the 1900 vintage—long trailing skirts, large puff sleeves, plumed hats, etc. Among those who had "stunning" costumes were: Minnie Davis, who carried off first honors, Emily Ramsden, Elsie and Gertrude McDowell, Vester Peters, Edna Rackerby, Mae Coleman, Clara Geisner, Myrtle Graham, Ada Hicks, Mamie Cuneo, Catherine Davis, Inge Meyer, Anna Saxon, Mae Barry, Constance Dunn, Grace Walker.

TO WELCOME "MISSION BEARS."

The various Parlors of Native Sons located in that section of San Francisco known as the Mission are sponsoring a celebration at Recreation Park, May 29, in honor of the home-coming of the "Mission Bears" of the Pacific Coast Baseball League. It will be known as Native Son day, and a large outpouring is anticipated.

Wm. H. McCarthy, president of the team, is a charter member of James Lick Parlor No. 242 N.S.G.W., which was organized in the Mission district eighteen years ago and is still meeting there.

SANTA BARBARA MISSION CALIFORNIA'S RESPONSIBILITY

Laura Bride Powers

SANTA BARBARA MISSION IS CALLING to the Native Sons and the Native Daughters to help in her hour of stress. And knowing what is in their heart, as well as in the constitutions of their patriotic Orders, she knows they will heed her call. And in the Grand Parlor of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West to meet in Santa Rosa in May, the matter will come up as one of the most insistent and immediately important pieces of work to which California's patriotic organizations are obligated, spiritually and materially.

The missions are numbered among the nation's historic heirlooms, whoever are their custodians. They belong to California, to America, and to the world—the heritage of a unique civilization that is possessed only by California. Let us remember that.

And as for Reina del Mar Parlor No. 126 N.D.G.W., born in the shadow of Santa Barbara Mission, she expresses her gratitude to Grand President Fletcher A. Cutler of the Native Sons for his patriotic work in the campaign to save Santa Barbara Mission. and for his own sympathetic and clear-thinking attitude toward California's responsibility.

a less liberal age than ours, today the whole trend of constructive work for the Indians in the United States follows exactly the policies and educational procedure—industrial and elemental manual training and elemental education—that grew up around the missions under the padres.

But to get back to Santa Barbara, "Queen of the Missions," as Santa Barbarans love to term it—though San Luis Rey, we must admit, has good claim to the title—the superb old structure between the mountains and the sea stands today the most pathetic and appealing inanimate thing in California.

If one retains even a spark of sentiment, in these unregenerate days of rush and push, he cannot stand by the roadside and contemplate Santa Barbara's fallen towers — their bells wounded and broken—without a gulp in his throat. If you can, look out—your emotional centers need overhauling! The spark plug's dead.

What will Santa Barbara do for her own old mission? Santa Barbara, with all the tasks of rebuilding after the quake, and the resultant losses—which, by the way, are not talked about protecting arms—the solicitude of a tree for a thing of spiritual beauty. What, then, of Mission Santa Barbara, custodian of the priceless archives of early California and much of the art and tradition of Spanish America?

That Grand President Fletcher A. Cutler of the Native Sons has appointed committees in every community in the state to take over as the personal work of the Order the gathering of funds for the restoration of Santa Barbara Mission, proves that the Native Sons mean what they say when they proclaim their responsibility in preserving landmarks and conserving history to the world—a world that, unknowing, asks "What do these Native Sons and Native Daughters do, besides talking of 'their California'?"

SAN FRANCISCO WILL STAGE FESTIVAL TO RAISE FUNDS

A Franciscan festival will be staged in the Exposition Auditorium, San Francisco, May 1 to 15, inclusive, under the direction of a committee of five hundred representative citizens of San Francisco. County Clerk Harry I. Mulcrevy affiliated with Olympus Parlor No. 189 N.S.G.W. is executive chairman of the committee of arrangements.

The festival will serve a three-fold purpose. Commemoration of the seven hundredth anniversary of the death of Saint Francis, patron Saint of San Francisco; the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the Mis

Center—ONE OF THE GREAT BELLS THAT HUNG IN THE TOWERS OF SANTA BARBARA MISSION BEFORE STRUCK DOWN IN THE JUNE DISASTER; ONE OF TH MOST BEAUTIFUL IN DESIGN, IT SEEMS TO HAVE ESCAPED UNHARMED; WITH ITS WOUNDED COMRADES, IT RANG OUT THE STORY TO CALIFORNIA FRO A TEMPORARY TOWER THAT THE OLD MISSION RESTORATION CAMPAIGN HAD FORMALLY BEGUN, SUNDAY, APRIL 18.
At right—DR. WILLIAM H. ELLISON, WIDELY-KNOWN AUTHORITY ON CALIFORNIA HISTORY, HEAD OF THE HISTORY DEPARTMENT OF THE SANTA BARBAR TEACHERS' COLLEGE, ADDRESSING A LARGE ASSEMBLAGE FROM THE CORRIDOR OF SANTA BARBARA MISSION ON "THE HISTORICAL VALUE OF TH ARCHIVES STORED IN SANTA BARBARA MISSION," APRIL 18, UNDER THE AUSPICES OF THE OLD MISSION RESTORATION COMMITTEE OF SANTA BARBARA THE OCCASION WAS THE "OPEN HOUSE" OF THE FRANCISCANS, THE FORMAL OPENING OF THE CAMPAIGN TO RAISE SANTA BARBARA'S QUOTA OF TH STATEWIDE FUND.

True, the southwest holds in its heart many superbly beautiful old missions—some in a fine state of preservation. But none of the missions in America, outside of the California chain, radiate the same romance and power to enthrall. They were the only missions where a communal life was established in the wilderness; where the missions became the brooding-mother of the neophyte Indians, gathered together in little villages in the shadow of the sanctuaries, where the dusky savages could be guided and guarded by the Franciscans every hour in the childhood of their civilization.

And thus it came to pass, unlike the other missions, that communities grew up around the California missions, with their schools (for boys, incidentally,—feminism hadn't made its start yet—) factories, industrial shops, agriculture, irrigation, cattleraising, horticulture, and many primitive forms of art.

And let us not forget, lest we might, in the pure joy of living under the azure skies of California, that the missions—our missions—were the first experiment, in what is now America, to do these things as a communal enterprise.

And it is interesting to reflect that, after many condemnatory philippics by bigot-historians of —will do, and is doing, her duty to the last ounce of her vitality. But there is a limit, as you know, to human endurance and human accomplishment. Santa Barbarans are more fortunate than many Californians in having an object lesson before their eyes as to what happens when an old mission is neglected when once disintegration has begun.

There's the pathetic—and accusing—sight of La Purissima, once a lovely spot in a lovely valley,—now a pile of ruins scorned even by the neighboring cattle as a place of shelter. Lovely Purissima, with its stunning square columns carrying its long, cool, inviting corridors, all gone, save ten or eleven scarred columns ready to fall. And in the crumbling walls of church and monastery that rise and fall in broken lines, squirrels and owls make their abode. O, for the sins of men!

Is this to what the "conscientious objector" to the restoration of Santa Barbara would reduce the "Queen of the Missions?" And remember, it is not many years ago that La Purissima could have been saved, if anybody had cared.

Yes, we Californians should blush the blush of shame when we stand by those fallen piers over which a great pepper tree has stretched its sion Dolores, in San Francisco, and to raise funds with which to restore the Santa Barbara Mission, "Queen of the Missions" in California which was destroyed in the earthquake that visited Santa Barbara last year.

It is claimed this will be the most elaborate and unique festival ever held in San Francisco. In the auditorium will be reproduced in miniature the twenty-one missions established by the Franciscan fathers along El Camino Real. There will be an entertainment, with a complete change of program every night during the festival. In the smaller halls of the auditorium there will be dancing every night.

Among the organizations that have pledged their support to the festival are: Native Sons of the Golden West, Native Daughters of the Golden West, South of Market Boys, South of Market Girls, Knights of Columbus, Catholic Daughters of America, Elks, Eagles, Moose, Y. M. I. and Y. L. I., Red Men and Degree of Pocahontas, A. O. H. and Ladies' Auxiliary, state and local building trades, labor councils and practically all of the unions affiliated with those councils, Third Order of Saint Francis, El Camino Club, Agnetian Club, Alhambras and many others.

CALIFORNIA HAPPENINGS OF FIFTY YEARS AGO

Thomas R. Jones

(COMPILED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR.)

THE ANTI-CHINESE AGITATION spreading all over California with renewed vigor, resulted in mass meetings being held during May 1876 in nearly every city and town, and a harvest of resolutions was gathered.

At Antioch, Contra Costa County, May 1, due to the statement made by a prominent physician that Chinese vices were corrupting some of the youths of the town, a committee of fifty or more citizens notified the Chinese to leave before sunset. Some did, but enough remained, in defiance of the ultimatum, for the citizens to take action, which they did that evening by burning the Chinatown and not a Chinese remained there the next day.

In San Francisco, nightly mass meetings were held south of Market street and a boycott put on Chinese laundries reduced the number fifty percent.

United States Senator A. A. Sargent delivered a speech in the Federal Senate May 1 and opened the campaign in Congress. The Eastern press did not take the same view of the question as did California, and at once a strong pro-Chinese party appeared in the East. A congressional committee appeared in San Francisco and proceeded to take testimony regarding the effect of Chinese immigration on labor and industries.

The picnic season was on in full force, with favorable weather conditions, during the month.

The California Democrats held a state convention May 24 in San Francisco to select delegates to the June national convention in St. Louis. The delegates selected were: Wm. Dunphy, Geo. H. Rodgers, J. C. Hayes, Frank Baldwin, Harmon Day, Geo. Cornwall, J. Moultrie, T. D. Mott, J. P. Hoge, J. S. Hager, Clay W. Taylor, Jas. I. English.

GOLD DISCOVERY CREATES FURORE.

The Centennial Exposition opened its doors in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, May 10, and thousands of Californians were making preparations to go East and visit it.

A heavy rainstorm prevailed in the valley sections of the state May 19. Nevada County was given a phenomenal snowstorm and six inches of the beautiful fell in Nevada City.

A gold-bearing quartz ledge was reported found by Victor Ressoyre, an experienced quartz miner, on Bernal Heights near San Francisco. It was forty-five feet wide and was traced for two miles. The quartz assayed $405 a ton. The reported discovery created quite a furore for a time and a large number of locations were filed.

The Fryer reduction works were opened at Grass Valley, Nevada County, May 4 to exhibit the Fryer process for saving gold from ore. A large gathering of mining men from different parts of California and Nevada were present. The process was pronounced a success, with a roasting and intricate amalgamating system that saved ninety-five percent of the assay value of the ore treated.

James T. Stewart, a Los Angeles inventor, announced a new system of heating water for household use. He inserted a coil of pipe in the stove firebox and, connecting the coil with a pipe, conveyed the hot water to where it was wanted for use in the kitchen. It was pronounced a cheap and effective system.

Silver half-dollars were quoted in the San Francisco money market at 95 cents selling and 97½ cents buying, May 1.

Decoration Day, May 30, under the auspices of the Grand Army of the Republic, was a holiday observed solely in a parade to the cemeteries and flower decorations of the graves of deceased soldiers in all the cities of the state.

BOYS RESORT TO HORSE CLIPPERS.

Mrs. Sarah J. Folsom obtained a judgment May 15 against Alvin Adams of the defunct firm of Adams & Co., San Francisco. She deposited with it $11,000 two days before it failed, in 1855. The judgment was for principal and interest, amounting to $120,000.

The bunco artists in San Francisco began representing themselves as gas and water rate collectors, and reaped a financial harvest from the resident section of that city.

Smallpox broke out in San Francisco and was believed to be epidemic in the Chinese section, where eighteen cases had been found and many more were believed to be concealed. There was much alarm over the situation.

It was found that the pepper-tree blossoms in Los Angeles were giving the honey produced by the bees in that vicinity an unpleasant taste, and sagebrush blossom honey went to a premium.

H. J. Crow in Verdugo, seven miles from Los Angeles, had planted an orchard of 200 acres.

A trot for a $1,200 purse came off in San Francisco May 26. It was won by "Prince Allen," who took the last three heats.

A new horse clipping machine was put into service in a livery stable in Los Angeles. It got into the hands of a gang of urchins loitering there, and before operations were stopped thirty-seven of them had their hair clipped and twenty-seven more were awaiting action.

At an auction in Los Angeles, horses sold at an average price of $4.50.

A fire in San Jose May 2 destroyed Faulkner's carriage factory, the largest in the state, causing a $25,000 loss.

SENSATIONAL SUICIDES.

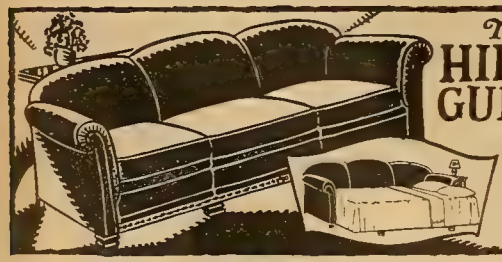
May 26 Farwell's chandlery, on the corner of California and Davis streets, San Francisco, burned, also, Holbrook, Merrill & Co.'s hardware store, causing a $300,000 loss.

Two men engaged in an altercation in San Francisco May 16 and one was struck on the head with a pistol. The weapon was discharged and the bullet struck a 14-year-old lad named Willie Perkins, standing nearby, killing him instantly.

May 24 W. T. Sherman, Eugene Smith, Chas. H. Bolan and Fred Higgins, employes of the California Watch Co., started from Berkeley in a sailboat for an excursion on San Francisco Bay. A squall upset the boat in the middle of the bay. They drifted for five hours during which time all, after clinging for a time to the boat, succumbed and drowned, except Sherman who finally drifted ashore and was saved.

Suicides continued numerous this month. One of the most sensational was that of a young man named Louis Bascom, at San Jose. He called upon a young woman 15 years of age and asked her if she loved him. On receiving a negative reply, he drew a revolver, placed it against his ear and sent a bullet into his brain.



Another sensational suicide was that of Judge B. F. Ferris, a prominent banker and citizen of Oakland. May 20 he took passage on a steamboat at San Francisco for Sacramento, and when near that city tied his legs together with a handkerchief, drank the contents of a phial of laudanum and jumped to his death in the river.

A child was born in San Francisco with a head resembling that of an ox. Being injudiciously shown to the mother, she died from shock. The child died a day later.

THE POPPY.
(J. T. DILLON.)

A sermon clear the poppy holds
Within its dainty, golden folds.
Till break of day the poppy dreams,
But brightens up at dawn's first beams;
A crown of dew falls to the earth,
A sunny smile is given birth—
A golden rule on golden page,
As plain to you as mellowed age.
Don't frown, but keep a smiling face,
And all the world will smile apace;
Its cheerful course is never run
Until the setting of the sun.
Be like the poppy all the while—
Ready to cheer with kindly smile;
Pour out some sunshine by the way,
By smiling every blessed day.

YELLOW PERIL AND SUGAR BARONS

THE WEST COAST OF THE UNITED States is again threatened by the yellow peril, this time from Hawaii. To make the menace clear, a bit of history is necessary.

Ninety-four years ago a little group of White missionaries, with their wives, sailed from New Bedford, Massachusetts, to the Hawaiian Islands, then the abode of 260,000 kindly, care-free natives.

Today only 27,000 natives remain. Practically the only land to which they have access is homestead land set apart by the United States Government. The remainder of the land, comprising an immense proportion of the total, has been consolidated into great estates, the holdings chiefly of inter-related descendants of those early missionaries .

Three firms—Alexander & Baldwin, Castle & Cooke and Brewer & Co.—control 94 percent of the sugar industry of the islands; own or control the banks and trust companies, the Planters' Association, the means of communication among the islands; the steamship company which handles 90 percent of the freight of the islands, the labor supply, the press—in fact, Hawaii's economic life.

This consolidation of land ownership, industry and power in White hands was not intentionally malign; it came naturally. White thrift, in face of native indolence, simply swept the field.

But the condition has produced an acute problem. White control of Hawaiian plantation industry has always sought cheap labor. It first tried to yoke the natives. When that failed it brought in Chinese coolies. When this supply was banned by the Chinese Exclusion Act, the plantation managers turned to Japan.

Boatload after boatload of Japanese coolies were imported and worked on the sugar plantations at low wages. They were joined by "picture brides" and multiplied with characteristic rapidity. The Japanese in Hawaii today far outnumber all other races. Within a few years the descendants of the early Japanese coolie imports will constitute the majority of Hawaii's registered voters and have the islands at their mercy.

With this growth in numbers has come an equal growth in ambition and self-assertion. Twenty thousand of them, eligible to citizenship by having been born under the flag, are now demanding all the rights of that citizenship, including the right to an improved economic status and to the ownership of land.

The sugar lords, in alarm, are seeking a way of escape. They have always dominated Hawaiian politics. Their attorneys have been consulted on the appointment of judges. They have made and unmade governors.

So now, Governor Farrington of Hawaii is in Washington urging that these 20,000 Japanese be given the right of immediate entry to the American mainland as unrestricted citizens.

Which, of course, would mean the nullifying of our West Coast's land laws, the dotting of California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Arizona and other Western states with new Oriental centers of irritation and the laying of groundwork for another huge race problem.

Governor Farrington lauds the industry and virtue of these 20,000 Orientals he is so eager to get rid of; he says they make good citizens.

Very well, then; let the great plantations of Hawaii be opened to settlement by them. Let the sugar magnates give this good citizenship the opportunity to prove its goodness where the sugar magnates first imported and exploited it. Having reaped the profits of the original exploitation, they should not be allowed to thrust the problem of the disturbing progeny on innocent communities.

The West Coast of the United States is a White man's country. It must remain a White man's country if the integrity of the republic is to endure.—Editorial, San Francisco Examiner, April 17, 1926.

CALIFORNIA'S NATIVE SONS.

The "Register" desires to express its pleasure over the organization in Santa Ana of a strong Parlor of the Native Sons of the Golden West. With loyalty to state and nation as its watchword and betterment of government as its aim, this organization has proven an asset of great value in California.

The Native Sons and the Native Daughters organizations are particularly welcome in Orange County. There is much to be done in this cour in the preservation of landmarks and in getti together into written form the stories of t making of this county and its communiti Their co-operation with the Historical Society Orange County, of course, is assured.

But the work of the sons and daughters of t Golden State is by no means confined to revie ing the past. Far from it. Their eyes are ward the future. They set high standards government as their ideal, and, united, move f ward. The organizations are not in any w politically partisan, but they are intensely int ested in the welfare of their native state. cause of this interest, they make it a point study and to learn, to keep in touch with trend of events that either aid or hinder worthy advancement of this great state.—E torial, "Santa Ana Register."

God caught a flash from a leaping flame
And tossed it into your heart,
While of molten gold from the sun's bright
Of your petals He made a part.
He dipped your stem in an em'rald lake,
Then deep in the cool of a dell
He found the grace of an elf at play,
So He gave you that as well.
By roadways wide He tossed you free
To cheer the wand'rer's sight,
He placed you out in the meadows free
For the little child's delight.
He made of you a shining gem,
A rare and beauteous flower,
You would grace a monarch's diadem,
You are California's Flower.

MILK GOAT GAINING POPULARITY.

Milk goats appear to be gaining the popula that is their due, in California. Whether T genburg, Saanen or Nubian, the well-bred g is an economical milk producer, and for small family can well solve the problem of n supply in many instances. If a well-bred g is selected and well fed, abundant milk is sured.

True, the goat must have the care and att tion it deserves, and feeding with rubbish is a part of such care. The old superstition t goats give strong milk is too ridiculous to n much comment. The milk of a goat may flavored from its feed, but the same is true cow, or the milk may take a flavor from a d barn, as does that of a cow. Moreover, in bre ing season, the buck must be kept away from does, but if this is done and ordinary care gi the milk goat, the product will be as sweet palatable as that of the cow.

¶ The Order of the Native Sons of the Golden West is founded upon the same broad patriotic principles that have been the inspiration of similar organizations in older States of the Union. Each State has its history. Into that history is interwoven a narrative of deeds performed by a mighty race of men who frontiered and pioneered the pathway for the countless thousands to follow. They transplanted the spirit, the life, the institutions of the Colonists, and wherever a State was erected there were established the ideals of the Fathers of the Republic.

¶ Therefore, the membership of our Order is limited to those born within the State, because we believe that pride of nativity is inherent in the breast of every person and moves that person to a consecrated loyalty to his native land. We do not maintain that birthplace alone confers any special privilege; rather do we teach that this casts upon the citizen an increased obligation to become interested in all material matters affecting its development and progress. National strength and national greatness have been commensurate with State strength and State greatness.

¶ California was the thirty-first State to be admitted into the Union. She contributed a citizenship and a golden treasure at an opportune time in the affairs of the nation. The many events connected with its settlement and organization as a State played a prominent part in shaping the destiny of the American people, and geographically she occupies a strategic position in the world-wide problems of the present and the future.

¶ We have taken an active interest in the conservation of our natural resources; the preservation of our scenic wonders and making them accessible to all; the retention of the State and its soil for the White race; all legislation, Federal and State, affecting the State and its interests.

¶ In our Fellowship endowment at the University of California we have expended over fifty thousand dollars in the preparation and preservation of the history of California and the Pacific Coast, and it has become the incentive for the Student Body of that institution and of the high-schools throughout the State to learn and teach that history. In this work we have laid the foundation for a text-book to be used in the public schools.

¶ We visit places where important events transpired and we have identified and marked the same with tablet and monument. Responding to the patriotic objects of our Order, we observe each recurring anniversary day of the Admission of California into the Union by public ceremonies in the various cities of the State. We actively participate in public dedicatory ceremonies of grammar-school and high-school buildings, on which occasions the students and citizens are addressed by officials of our Order on patriotic subjects.

¶ We maintain a "Homeless Children" Bureau and have placed in the childless homes over twenty-six hundred homeless boys and girls, insuring their development into a splendid citizenship amid elevating environments. In this activity we have expended over two hundred thousand dollars, contributed generously and voluntarily by the membership of the Order.

¶ It thus appears that the work of our organization appeals to every citizen of the State, irrespective of place of birth. It matters not where we were born in this land of ours; we are all citizens of a common country, we pledge our allegiance to one flag, and we are best evidencing our love of country and our loyalty to that flag by deservedly wearing the badge of public service wherever we exist and have our home.

¶ We welcome to our Membership the sons of California, and we promise nothing in return, save that compensation which comes to the citizen who conscientiously endeavors to perform his part in the cause of a greater and better civilization.

LIFE AND DEVELOPMENT

ORDER NATIVE DAUGHTERS GOLDEN WEST COMPARABLE TO MAJESTIC REDWOOD

Sue J. Irwin

(GRAND PRESIDENT, NATIVE DAUGHTERS GOLDEN WEST.)

SINCE IT IS FROM MOTHER NATURE'S Wonder Book that the greatest and truest lessons of life are learned, it is quite fitting that from the Redwood tree, California's tallest and straightest tree, "rooted in Earth and Heaven," we should accept the parable from which we take our theme that of the growth of an organization distinctively Californian, and whose life and development are comparable to the life and development of the majestic Redwood tree. This is the parable of the Redwood tree as set forth by Lyon L. Loofbourow.

"He was centuries old in Abraham's day. His life was half lived when the Star of Bethlehem led the Wise Men to the infant Savior, yet, he stands in our California still, speaking to those who have ears to hear. These are the things he told me—the secrets that have made him the wisest of God's living things."

First, "To be contented with small beginnings, for his seed is as tiny as the mustard's."

Many years ago, the Order of the Native Daughters of the Golden West was organized in the little mountain town of Jackson, Amador County, an organization with noble ideals that served as stimuli within the seed that was to grow as the Redwood tree, gigantic in size and strength and stretching forth its branches to cover the wide spaces of the state.

That the splendid deeds of the Pioneer Fathers and Mothers, their contributions to the early life and development of our state and their influence upon the lives of the children of California, might ever be fresh in the minds and hearts of her people, and that California might ever remain the type of state the Pioneer Father and Mother planned her to be, the Daughters of California banded together with lofty aims and definite objectives. Just a small organization at first, "content with small beginnings."

"To be patient with slow developments, for it grows but a few inches each year."

To grow and produce fruit, the necessary qualities for life are hidden within the seed, and within that seed, planted at Jackson, were the sturdy qualities of the Pioneer, those characteristics that always bespeak success.

How important it is that we learn the value of slow, steady growth, the growth that means permanent development and lasting influence.

Like the Redwood, the Order of the Native Daughters of the Golden West has grown slowly, but all the while steadily. In contrast to the mushroom which springs into being in one night and as suddenly goes out of existence again, this organization, as the Redwood, has taken years to attain its present growth.

"To stand straight, for only the low trees can afford to lean or stoop," an outstanding characteristic of the Redwood tree.

Always, the Order of the Native Daughters of the Golden West has stood staunchly and firmly for the development of the highest type of womanhood. It has stressed high ideals, willing service to others, interest in community and civic projects, and a development always of noble character in the individual.

In service to California and her people, this organization has grown above the trivial things of life and has learned to live in the sunshine that comes from true service.

Years ago the members decided that the homeless children of California should become their children,—

"Small service is true service while it lasts.
Of humblest friends, bright creatures; scorn not one.
The daisy, by the shadow that it casts,
Protects the lingering dewdrop from the sun."

Conjointly with the Native Sons, the Order of the Native Daughters of the Golden West, working through the Central Committee on Homeless Children, has succeeded in carrying through a great piece of work, which has brought to us most favorable commendation from people in all walks of life, and an undying sense of gratitude from the foster parents whose hearts have been made glad; while to the children has been given the most wonderful thing in all the world —a home with true mother love.

More recently, scholarships have been established whereby children of California may be assisted to higher education and greater accomplishment.

The Order takes advantage of every opportunity to advocate and promote the study of California's history and the restoration and preservation of her landmarks. For what is a greater heritage for our children than that of the glorious and romantic past, with its heroes, the explorers, the mission fathers, the traders, the miners and the pathfinders? The study of the lives of these men affords inspiration for youth, to carry it through the adventurous age of childhood to manhood or womanhood firmly built upon the principles of character embodied in the Pioneers.

For the younger members of the Order who have broken home ties for the first time and have journied from the smaller towns to the great city seeking fame and fortune, a Home has been established in San Francisco. With comfortable and cheerful surroundings, the girls are made happy during their first experience away from the family fireside. A splendid California woman sympathetically mothers the "Home Family" and accepts their problems as her own.

MISS SUE J. IRWIN OF BERKELEY
GRAND PRESIDENT N.D.G.W.

Older members of the organization, whose families have become scattered, may also happily share the advantages thus provided.

The Native Daughters of the Golden West by just such deeds of love and kindness are approaching the ideal:

"To grow so tall as to live always in the sunshine, for it is the underbrush that hides God and the sun."

As the Redwood tree has stood in our California, seemingly from all time, inspiring her children to high ideals and sincere purposes, it is appropriate that we should dedicate a grove of these trees to the Pioneer Fathers and Mothers of California. The fortitude, perseverance and farsightedness of the Pioneer are responsible for the type of manhood and womanhood in California today.

"Have the elder races halted?
Do they droop and end their lesson, wearied over there beyond the seas?
We take up the task eternal, and the burden and the lesson,
Pioneers! O Pioneers!

We detachments steady throwing,
Down the edges through the passes up the mountains steep Conquering, holding, daring, venturing, as we go the unknown ways
Pioneers! O Pioneers!"

Inconsequential things of life are soon smothered out, like the underbrush at the base of the Redwood. But the lessons of unselfish devotion to a worthwhile cause and true service to humanity have lifted the Native Daughters above trivial things of life into the sunshine of God's love.

"To outlive every hindrance, for while fire, storms and lightning kill other trees, he survives."

Growth and development ever bring new interests and new activities. With the passing of some of the pioneer mountain towns, the Native Daughters, too, have gone out from the "ghost towns" of a former day. But unprecedented growth along lines of agriculture, commerce and educational life in California has opened new fields where splendid new branches grow forth to strengthen and support the mighty trunk that carries on this work of love and responsibility.

It has not always been an easy road we realize this as we look back over the trail; but setbacks are normal to the growth and development of every organization, and ever stimulate to renewed effort and greater accomplishment. Because of the splendid principles upon which it is established, the Order of the Native Daughters of the Golden West has lived and progressed while other organizations have fallen by the wayside.

"And never to stop growing."

Perhaps most important of all is this final word that the Redwood speaks to those who would learn from it the lessons of life. We can never afford to stop growing.

California, first as a part of the mighty empire of Spain, then as a country desired by various nations of the world, and now as the mecca of many races and creeds, has never stopped growing.

Because of the advantages provided by such Pioneers as Susan B. Mills, Jane Stanford and Phoebe A. Hearst, who unselfishly builded for the advancement of the children of California to the highest possible standards, the Native Daughters of the Golden West, today, larger and stronger than ever, as an organization stands ready, prepared and willing to accept the responsibilities that have come to California Womanhood with the growth and development of the state, and—MAY WE NEVER STOP GROWING!

HISTORIC MODOC MONUMENT TO BE UNVEILED JUNE 13.

Alturas (Modoc County)—The date for unveiling the Modoc War battlefield monument in the Modoc County Lava Beds has been definitely set for Sunday, June 13.

Saturday, June 12, auto parties will leave Alturas for the Lava Beds to explore the famous ice caves and other wonders. After camping overnight at the caves the party will proceed Sunday morning to the site of Canby's cross and the new monument. Here it will be met by those who leave Alturas and Klamath Falls Sunday morning.

The dedicatory ceremonies will take place at the noon hour, after which all will partake of a picnic lunch.

Recreation Record—California maintains 529 public playgrounds and last year spent $1,694,887 for recreational activities. It ranks fourth among the states of the nation in the number of playgrounds and the amount invested in public recreation.

SACRAMENTO, CALIFORNIA'S CAPITAL CITY

CONTINUATION ITS ENERGY BURST ASSURED

E. C. Porter

(SECRETARY-MANAGER, SACRAMENTO CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.)

WITH THE EYES OF THE NATION turned on California because of the wonderful opportunities she offers for a complete life, filled with profitable activity and healthful recreation, Sacramento, her Capital City, shares a large part of the attention.

This is because Sacramento's wonderful growth in recent years has attracted wide comment. The story of a Western city which, in a period of twenty-five years, has grown from a village of 30,000 people such as it was in 1900, to a thriving metropolis of 102,000 as it is now, is one which has interested people throughout the United States.

The development of Sacramento is interwoven with the progress of the twenty-one northern counties of California. The Sacramento Chamber of Commerce, in its work as the sales promotion agency of this part of the state, is engaged in bringing to the attention of the nation the great opportunities which lie ahead for Northern California counties.

In this promotion work, the chamber has established a Southern California office in Los Angeles, which is in charge of Fred Shaffer, who is well known in chamber of commerce work throughout the state. Plans are being made to establish reciprocal relations with chambers of commerce in the north and at Salt Lake and Denver.

AGRICULTURAL WEALTH.

To those whose eyes are turned toward this part of the state, attention is drawn to the fact that the large wealth that lies here awaiting the settler is in agricultural pursuits.

Although there has been a very large increase in the acreage planted in the products of this section, figures show that the territory has not been developed to one-half of its capacity in number of acres.

The twenty-one counties have an area of 6,814,300 acres which is suitable for agriculture. Only 2,500,000 acres are under cultivation. This means that there still is 60 percent of the territory available for agriculture and waiting to be used by settlers.

LIVESTOCK RAISING.

The opportunity is particularly open in livestock raising and in dairies. California now is importing 50 percent of its dairy products. This means that there is a chance for the number of dairy cattle in California to be doubled and this state still take care of the products. This also is true in the raising of hogs. California imports 90 percent of the pork consumed.

In a recent talk before a farm lands conference, G. H. Hecke, director of the State Department of Agriculture, pointed out that great opportunities lie ahead for the settler who has a knowledge of livestock raising. The increasing value of the agricultural products in the Sacramento area is shown by the following figures:

| Year | Total Value |
|---|---|
| 1899 | $ 26,456,492 |
| 1909 | 44,256,316 |
| 1919 | 149,031,340 |
| 1921 | 94,349,600 |
| 1923 | 109,630,600 |
| 1924 | 115,500,000 |

This shows that, with the exception of the two abnormal years of 1919 and 1921, there has been a steady increase in the value of agricultural products of this section.

A COMPARISON.

Sacramento is the geographical and economic center of these northern counties and the city's growth is a reflection of the progress of the entire territory.

Twenty-five years ago the total assessed property valuation was less than $17,000,000, including properties of public-service corporations. The city was bounded by the Sacramento River, the B-street levee, Thirty-first street and the Y-street levee. There were less than 5,000 pupils in the city schools. Large, undeveloped tracts of land, many of which were covered during parts of the year with floodwaters, surrounded the city.

The close of the first quarter of the twentieth century found Sacramento a city of more than 102,000 people, with a total assessed valuation of more than $100,000,000, exclusive of properties of public-service corporations; with city limits extending several miles east and south beyond the old city limits; with large and prosperous suburbs on the city's outskirts; with more than 20,000 students in the schools and with a wealth of fertile, reclaimed land, developed for intensive agriculture, lying at the city's gates.

SCENE IN McKINLEY PARK,
ONE OF SACRAMENTO'S RECREATION PLACES.

The regularity with which the progress has come, has made it difficult to get a complete idea of the astounding growth. The expansion did not come as a "boom"; its march was clocklike, steady and certain.

Step by step Sacramento has assumed the proportions of a metropolitan city, growing and expanding, attracting new people, new industry and new commerce, until it stands today as one of the principal cities of the West and one of the leaders among the cities of the nation in building, business and industrial progress.

BUILDING PERMITS.

Proof of the importance of Sacramento in this respect is seen in the figures of the building permits for last year, which totaled $11,351,277.20.

That this progress is continuing, is evidence by the fact that for the first three months this year the permits totaled $1,784,068.50 fo work of ordinary nature and over a period i which building was slackened by weather co ditions.

One of the most interesting barometers progress to read in connection with Sacramento expansion is the one presented by real estate.

While the increase in the value of farm lan through reclamation and through road constru tion has been astounding, the record is matche by increases within the present city limits.

Property values have increased within th quarter-century beyond the wildest dreams a man who might have tried to picture progre from 1900 to 1926.

AN EXAMPLE.

One of the outstanding examples of this i crease is the story of a lot at Twelfth and streets. In 1906 Twelfth and J streets was co sidered a long distance from the business di trict. When the sale of a lot there at the pri of $16,000 was announced in 1906, it was co sidered by many that the purchaser was payin a great deal too much.

Seventeen years later, or three years ago, th same lot was sold for $175,000. Multiply $16 000 by ten, and the figure is still $15,000 sho of $175,000.

The same story has been repeated throughou the city. It is not only true of business pro erty, but holds for residence sites.

Less than twenty years ago East Sacrament was a vegetable garden. A section that no includes some of the city's largest and most e pensive homes, covering 120 acres, sold for $40 000 in 1905. The value of this land now ru into the millions, on top of which is to b taken the value of more than 300 homes.

FACTS ON INDUSTRY.

Sacramento has made remarkable strides i dustrially. The twenty-six leading industri of Sacramento, as listed in the survey con pleted in 1925, are as follows, with value products, number of establishments, averag number of employes and annual average pa rolls, in order, reading from left to right:

BUILDING CONSTRUCTION.

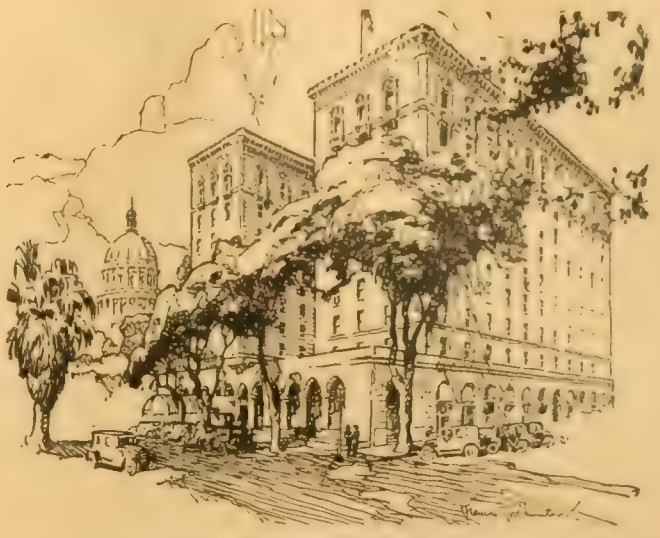
For the three-year period ending in 192 Sacramento stood second among cities of th United States in building construction, on th percapita basis of computation. During th same period of time, Sacramento's industri growth was five times greater than that of th State of California as a whole.

These facts alone are sufficient to illustrat that California's Capital City has taken on burst of energy, continuation of which is a sured.

The canning industry, importance of which stressed elsewhere in this edition, is running close race with railroad shop production as th leading manufacturing enterprise of Sacrament The main shops of the Southern Pacific an Western Pacific railroads are located in Sacra mento. The shops of the Pennsylvania Railroa Company at Altoona, Pennsylvania, are the onl single-unit shops in the United States large than the Southern Pacific.



In the two plants in Sacramento 3,396 person are employed, with a payroll of $4,868,500 eac year. The total value of products from thes establishments is approximately $9,000,000 year—locomotives, boxcars and repair work.

But the importance of this industry extend beyond the shops proper, for Sacramento hold osition of great value as a railroad and distributing center. Engineers, firemen, conductors and other employes connected with the Sacramento division run the annual payroll figure more than $10,000,000. The railroad companies have complete facilities for handling the immense fruit shipments. At Roseville, Placer county, the Southern Pacific has auxiliary shops as well as icing stations.

Sacramento's advantages as a jobbing and distributing center have been recognized from the very beginning of the city. There are now more than fifty wholesale houses and branch plants covering a vast territory which includes Southern Oregon, Nevada, Sacramento Valley and parts of the San Joaquin Valley.

The reason for Sacramento's big building program of the past few years is therefore made plain: Increased agricultural production, greater volume of production in the valley's leading industries—fruit canning and railroad shop work—and greater distribution facilities.

LARGE STRUCTURES.

This building activity has brought into being the following notable structures: California Packing Corporation's $3,000,000 cannery; Hotel Senator, ranked with the leading hotels of the nation, cost $2,000,000; Southern Pacific railway station and terminal, total cost of which involved approximately $3,000,000; home office building of California State Life Insurance Company, $1,000,000; new building by Sacramento Lodge of Elks, $1,500,000; Senator theatre, $1,000,000; high-school building, $1,540,000; junior college, $500,000; produce terminal, $300,000; Municipal Auditorium, now under construction, $75,000; churches, $500,000; municipal wharves, $250,000.

In addition there have been hundreds of smaller structures and thousands of homes—all of which ran the total for the last three years to nearly $40,000,000. The American Can Company, one of the nation's largest manufacturing institutes, is constructing a plant in Sacramento which will represent an investment of $1,500,000. This plant will make cans to supply the large canning plants in this city.

PARKS AND PLAYGROUNDS.

Sacramento has looked well into the future comfort of her citizens in the matter of parks and playgrounds. There are at present four open spaces, or plazas, each comprising a city black, in the thicker settled residence portions, where the crowded city dweller may enjoy the restful shade of beautiful trees and green turf.

Then there are the larger open spaces—McKinley Park, located on Thirty-first street between E and H, comprising about forty acres, and Southside Park, on T street between Sixth and Eighth, containing thirty-two acres.

William Land Park, at the southern extremity of the city, is one of the newer parks; it covers an area of 236 acres, and is a much appreciated acquisition to the city's breathing spaces. It is equipped with a nine-hole golf course, with plans for making it an eighteen-hole course later.

There is probably no city in the entire country of the size of Sacramento better equipped with facilities for guarding the health and comfort of the growing child. Six playfields have been set apart for their games and sports; six playgrounds under the direction of the city playground department are provided with all kinds of apparatus for children's activities; five municipally owned clubhouses are open to the public and may be reserved without cost, upon application to the city recreation department, for community gatherings of any kind.

Sacramento maintains a municipal symphony orchestra, under a competent director.

PLAYGROUND OF THE WORLD

Anna I. Dempsey

(WRITTEN ESPECIALLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR.)

Come and dwell within our valleys, come and gambol
on our shore,
Come and loiter on the edges of a hundred streams
or more,
Come and view our mighty canyons and our lofty mountains hurled
By the hand of Him who made for us the playground of the world.

Feel the awe of towering redwoods as they raise their stately lines,
Catch the kisses of the zephyrs as they sigh
amongst the pines,
See the beauty of the heaven when the sun sinks
low to rest,
Sense the wonder of this playground, sense the glory of the West.

On the summit of Sierra, quivering aspens whisper low,
Their secrets to the pine trees on the shores of Lake Tahoe;
Pure as any dream of heaven is its white and gleaming sand,—
It is said it was created for the Angels'
Fairyland.

In the heart of the Sierras, guarded by her minarets,
Hidden by her spired sequoias, fair Yosemite calmy sets;
Words of ours cannot describe her—come and see what God unfurled,
When He gave the wonder valley to the playground
of the world.

Northward lies the dome of Shasta, child of snow and ice and cold,
White against the blue of heaven—God's stepping stone, 'tis told.
Hamilton and fair Mount Wilson: 'neath their spires
the grey mists roll, Bathed deep in liquid sunshine tower the windows of the soul.

To the eastward looms Mount Whitney, sturdy, rugged, staunch and bold,
Southward rests the famous Arrow, clear, mysterious and old.
San Jacinto, "Thunder Mountain," just another wonder hurled
By the hand of Him who made for us the playground
of the world.

When you've dwelt within our valleys, when you've gamboled on our shore,
When you've loitered on the edges of a hundred streams
or more,
When you've seen the golden sunset tapestry the mighty west,
You will feel that you have wandered to the land God loved the best.

When you've caught the winds of heaven from our balmy ocean's brine,
When you've bent a knee in reverence at our redwoods'
sacred shrine,
When you've traveled El Camino, where the holy padres trod,
You will know that you have followed in the footprints of our God.

ART TREASURES.

One of the most priceless possessions to found in any city in the country is the art lection at the E. B. Crocker Art Gallery in S ramento.

During the years 1870-1873, Judge E. B.
Mrs. E. Crocker, while traveling in Eur gathered most of the seven hundred painti and a great number of drawings, etchings, which form the collection now contained in gallery. As this collection was made during Franco-Prussian war, and as the question price seemed to be of little concern in obtain desired art works, the Crockers were enab to secure many works, both paintings and dr ings, that it would have been next to impos to purchase at any other time. During th years the art gallery building was erected made ready to receive the collection, which administrator. The city accepted the trust

In honor of the donor of the gallery the p ple, shortly after the making of the deed, g her a reception in the great pavilion, which floral beauty, unanimity of participation splendor of ceremony, has never been surpas in the state. People and societies from all o the state participated and contributed to all this, with paintings by California arti

The original gift included 160 feet on later and shortly prior to her death, Mrs. Croc gave an additional strip on the east marked the west line of the residence property next the gallery, on which, a few years ago, was c structed an addition to the original building.

The gallery contains the largest and m valuable collection of paintings and drawi in the West. Besides many canvases by w known painters, among them several Calif
nians, namely Thomas Hill, William Ke
Charles C. Nahl and a group of twenty portr of men prominently identified with the ea history of the state by William Shaw, the lection contains the works of several of the masters, among them Van Dyke, Murillo, Fr

ters whose works are priceless. There are a drawings and sketches in great number by s men as Hogarth, Halbein, Boucher, Michel drawings are now kept in lockers, for want of France, who was recently sent to this co try by his government to visit and study m seums and art galleries, said we have the fin collection of such drawings to be found in United States.

Among the many art critics who have visi looking over the collection, remarked with sigh, "I wish I could have a month here, I fi everything that any hotel in New York, Paris or London has and more.

"The Southern Pacific has just built a gigantic new railroad station. Skyscrapers are rising in every direction. The river had once indicated possibilities of a flood, two of the chief streets in the lower part of the city were immediately raised fourteen feet into the air. And now with 'by-passes' and other controls, the river is governed, and once-flooded fields are rich farms.

There is energy here, and after you have been received by the citizens you realize it. They finish showing you the State Capitol at 1 o'clock in the morning. And all are gathered together again at 8 o'clock the same morning for breakfast with grapefruit, sausages, scrambled eggs, chops, buckwheat cakes, cornbread and speeches.

"No lack of energy here, nor of progress."

RESORT WONDERLAND.

Sacramento is the center of California's wonderland of resorts. From this city radiate steam and electric railroads and wide, safe, smooth highways reaching into every nook and corner of the valley, foothill and mountain places of recreation. This section is a veritable world's playground.

In a rectangular division of the state, extending 125 miles to the Pacific Ocean on the west from Sacramento and 100 miles to the east to the Nevada line, and 300 miles to the north from the city and 200 miles to the southward, can be found everything the most exacting tourist or scenic lover could desire.

God's greatest canvases are to be found within this wonderland. Here are to be found the "forest primeval," if one seeks untreaded spots for an outing, as wild today as when the pyramids were building and accessible only by trails, or can live in Fifth-avenue style in a mountain resort where, on a still night, the howl of the coyote or the scream of a lynx may still be heard.

One of the greatest of the wonders is Lake Tahoe, that turquoise-blue body of water situated in the high Sierras at an altitude of 6,225 feet. It is about 105 miles from Sacramento and is a six-hour ride by auto stage, during which the summit of the Sierras is crossed. The lake is twenty-two miles long by about ten miles wide, and its water is so clear that fish can be glimpsed in their natural colors at a depth of fifty or more feet. The main stage route is by way of Placerville, El Dorado County, reaching the south end of the lake.

Every tourist should also take the other route, by way of Auburn and Colfax, in Placer County, and Truckee, in Nevada County, to the north end of the lake, and then drive around the lake, for on that route is that mountain gem, Donner Lake, named after the ill-fated Donner expedition, most members of which perished there. Surrounding Lake Tahoe are numerous other mountain lakes and streams, and the shores and canyons are lined with delightful resorts.

HISTORIC BACKGROUND.

Once again, Sacramento possesses a distinction unique among cities—its ineffacable "days of '49" historic background. It was also the cradle of White settlement in the great interior valleys of California, for Captain John A. Sutter founded the city in 1839 and his adobe fort, restored, stands near the center of the city, ever linking past and present. Historic buildings also preserve the romance of the "days of gold," but it is out along the original pioneer trail, through El Dorado, Amador, Calaveras, Tuolumne and Mariposa Counties, that the old days written of by Bret Harte and Mark Twain can be re-lived.

This trail is along the great Mother Lode of California, 200 miles long and producer of more than a billion in gold. It is planned to change the present series of highways connecting the historic mining towns into a great modern highway, to be known as the Mother Lode Highway and to be the mecca of tourists from all parts of the world. Today, in modern auto stages, one travels over the Pioneer Trail to Plymouth, where a big operating mine can be seen, to Drytown, which is today as it was in the '50s, then through Amador City, Sutter Creek, Jackson—where the Kennedy mine has the deepest vertical shaft of any American gold mine — old Mokelumne Hill, San Andreas—made famous by Bret Harte—Angels Camp, Melones, Jamestown, Sonora, Columbia and Mariposa.

Columbia, Tuolumne County, but a shadow of its former self when 25,000 lived there, with only a few hundred today, is another town that has retained its pioneer atmosphere. In this section is Mark Twain's old cabin.

THE BIG TREES.

Branching off from the main Mother Lode highway are two features no tourist should miss. One is the famous Calaveras Grove of sequoia gigantia, the "oldest living thing" on eart which is about 105 miles from Sacramento. A auto stage can be driven through the trunk one tree, so enormous is it, while horsemen hav ridden through the hollowed trunk of anoth fallen giant.

Two caves, one near Murphys, Calavera County, and known as Mercer's, and the oth near Vallecita, the "Meaning Cave," form th other attraction not to be overlooked. Lim stone formations are exquisite in form and col in the Mercer cavern. This section of the hi toric mining country can be reached by au stage to Stockton, and then by stage up th lode or else by rail.

Turning off the Sonora road, one is on one the popular routes to the Yosemite Valley, sp of indescribable beauty and grandeur. Space too limited to go into details on the Yosemit Entire volumes have failed to adequately d scribe its wonders.

Suffice to say that no tourist to California ca say he has seen the state without visiting th valley, a masterpiece of God's handicraft. can be reached by another stage route, conti uing down the San Joaquin Valley, from Stoc ton to Merced, and then going in via the Mar posa Grove of big trees and Wawona.

LASSEN AND SHASTA.

To the north of Sacramento lie two of Cal fornia's most famous and highest peaks—Mou Shasta, with its eternal, pristine white crow and Mount Lassen, the only active volcano the United States. Mount Shasta and Shas Springs, natural soda water bubbling out the ground, can be reached by both train an auto stage, via Redding and Dunsmuir, but on stages will carry one to the geological ma surrounding Mount Lassen, either from Chic or Red Bluff. There will be found all of th geological formations of the earth in the mak ing. The Lassen Volcanic National Park is sai to be more weird than any other spot in th nation. Old mining towns near Redding, Shas County, offer much to the tourist.

Another country beloved by the fisherman an hunter is that of the Feather River, with many beautiful mountain lakes, best reached b train out of Sacramento; some parts are al accessible to automobiles. The orange and oliv groves, the timber plants and the gold dredge around Oroville, Butte County, at the entranc of the Feather River Canyon, are also interes ing.

To the west of Sacramento, in Napa, Lak and Sonoma Counties, are scores of famous mi eral spring resorts, most of which are on au stage or interurban electric lines. It is impo sible to single these out for mention. A seri of entrancing lakes feature Lake County. The comes the justly beloved Russian River countr and its many delightful villas and resorts. Co tinuing, the tourist will find himself in the Stin son Beach country on the Pacific Ocean.

THE FAMED REDWOODS.

Then, swerving to the north, comes the fame Redwood Highway, through the groves of ma jestic redwoods. Numerous interesting resor are to be found along this highway in upp Sonoma, Mendocino and Humboldt Countie Quaint remains of early Russian settlements ar to be found along the nothern coast, parti ularly at Fort Ross.

In this article it has been barely possible t merely skim over the highlights of the gre resort wonderland to which Sacramento is th gateway, and which is served by a network modern auto stage lines. Unfortunately, man scenic spots have been left out and numerou quaint and historical places not mentioned. Bu enough has been said to show that it is truly playground for the entire world, that a love of nature will be content with the beautiful of ferings placed before him by the Master Craft man, and that the tourist will have every da so full that he can afford to linger here.

STATE CAPITOL, STATE LIBRARY AND SUTTER'S FORT

George G. Radcliff

(CHAIRMAN STATE BOARD OF CONTROL.)

"THE STATE CAPITOL OF CALIFORnia, that is to endure for generations, should be a structure that the future will be proud of, and surrounded by grounds that should extend into the dimensions of an ample park. Such grounds can now be had at a comparatively nominal sum, and the peculiar salubrity of our climate would in a few years surround the edifice with a beauty and luxuriousness that no other capitol in the country could boast."

Thus, in 1863, said Governor Leland Stanford, that marvelous man of great vision who so firmly believed in the wonderful possibilities of California that to it he willed his wealth of millions, that the children of California might receive at their very doors the highest type of education the world affords; a man who saw and worked for a future such as few men in those days ever dared dream of, but which we of today have seen come true—come true far in excess of even their fondest anticipations. For today we have that Capitol, we have those grounds, and we have those parks such as no other capitol in the United States can equal.

How many realize that at Sacramento, long before the place was ever known by that name, were held at Sutter's Fort the most momentous, the most important discussions as to the acquisition of California by the United States; that Sutter's Fort was practically the very heart of the embryonic state; that from this old abode building the pulsebeats radiated throughout the wilderness of these great valleys, the mountains and the seashores, to solidify and co-ordinate the minds and ambitions of the few Americans then here, that they might eventually consummate the annexation of California to the United States.

How priceless today would be the knowledge of what actually occurred in that old abode fort, during that formative period! How intensely interesting would be a transcript of those discussions, of those secret talks behind closed doors, with Indian sentinels standing guard!

Fate plays a mysterious hand. It first built a solid, feasible foundation for a new state in those meetings at the old fort, with Captain Sutter as its central figure. Then, through Marshall, the American River at Coloma, a few flecks of gold, a meeting of Sutter and Marshall in the little adobe office of the captain at the fort, a tipsy, babbling teamster, an obscure item in a miniature four-paged paper, Fate provided California with the greatest sudden influx of American voters known in the history of the whole world. In the face of these facts, can anyone deny that Sacramento is the logical place for California's capitol?

It is true that, as an infant, the state capital was a very wayward child, with a wanderlust beyond compare. It had to sow its wild oats, it had to smell the tang of salt water, but in time, as all prodigals do, it returned home, to settle down, and with all its ripened experience to become one of the greatest assets for progress, far beyond the fondest hopes of its progenitors.

Today we see the fruits of those days of early experiences in the most stately Capitol building in the United States. Roman-Corinthian it is in style, built of granite from the nearby foothills at Rocklin, paneled with California onyx of marvelous beauty, furnished in the most artistic taste with rich, but not ostentatious, furniture, with a spacious rotunda embellished with beautiful murals by one of California's most noted artist, each depicting some historical scene symbolic of this California's progress.

The building was commenced September 24, 1860, the cornerstone laid May 15, 1861; it was first occupied November 26, 1869, while the first Legislature met there on December 6, 1869. Up to this time the building alone had cost two million, six hundred thousand dollars. During 1906-08 $372,925 was spent to complete the attic and basement, and in modernizing the building, thus adding seventy more usable rooms.

Among the rare paintings in the building are many of former governors, of famous Californians, including one of General Bidwell, recently brought down from his mansion at Chico. A full-length portrait of Captain Sutter hangs on the wall at the north end of the main-floor corridor. In the upper rotunda are many historical battle-flags connected with the history of this state. In the lower rotunda is an exceptionally interesting display made by the State Library of early California relics.

The grounds surrounding the Capitol building are probably the most spacious of any state-house, covering some thirty-three acres. Here are planted trees and shrubs from all parts of the world, all fully labeled for the instruction of visitors. It is a most luxuriant park, one of the most beautiful in the world. Everything grows in profusion. This year fourteen century plants are in bloom along one avenue alone. Three strawberry bushes, ranging from twelve to twenty-five feet in height, will bear a very large crop of the sweetest strawberries produced in America. These three bushes, when in bearing, are the marvel of all visitors. Here also is a cranberry tree, nearly forty feet high. Juniper trees, fragrant with the odor of juniper berries, line one of the walks. The most beautiful Lebanon cedar trees border the main walk in front of the building. Memorial Grove, dedicated to the heroes of the Civil War, is planted with trees from most of the famous battlefields of that time.

The marvelous progress of California as a state long since caused such a serious condition of overcrowding in the Capitol building that additional office room was imperative, necessitating housing many departments in various rented quarters.

In 1913 the Legislature proposed a bond issue of $3,000,000 to construct a library and courts building, and an office building, now better known as the Capitol Extension Buildings. This bond issue was approved by the people at the November election in 1914. The citizens of Sacramento contributed the site, costing $700,000. It is the two blocks directly in front of the Capitol. The transfer of title was not until October 1917. At the time our participation in the war made it necessary to defer actual construction. A nation-wide competition was held to secure the best plans possible. Out of sixty-four plans submitted by the best-known architects of America, the jury unanimously chose those of a California firm.

Peace brought with it high prices and high wages for the skilled mechanic. The bonds called for but four percent. Investors looked at them with contempt; they had no market. To sell them at all the Legislature in 1921 appropriated $400,000 as a bonus to attract buyers. In November of 1921 the bonds were sold. Ground was broken in March 1922; the cornerstone of the office building was laid in October 1923; and that of the library and courts building in March 1924. The increase of building material and wages since the time of the original bond issue of 1914 has been so great that some $1,300,000 additional will be needed to finish and equip these two buildings. A projected bond issue to cover this additional expense will come up before the next Legislature for action.

Exteriorly, both buildings are practically completed today and the grounds are now being put into shape through a special appropriation from the state which is to be returned when the bonds of the projected issue have been sold. The Lincoln Highway will run directly through between the two buildings, and will separate in the center to pass around a large circular fountain. New sidewalks will be constructed all around the two blocks, flanked by very large palm trees transplanted there just recently. All portions not otherwise used, will be put in lawns.

THE STATE LIBRARY.

Only when the new State Library building is finished and occupied will the general public be able to adequately realize just what their State Library really is. In its present quarters, it is crowded far beyond capacity, so much so that it has of necessity placed tons upon tons of books in storage, including a rich collection of fine prints, and much of the material of the California department bearing upon the history of California. So great has this marvelous collection of early California material grown, that though ample room was supposedly allowed for it in the new building, the new quarters will be crowded with some of the most priceless documents in existence.

Entrance to the new library building is through a beautiful memorial vestibule, flanked along the sides by huge Doric columns, topped with indirect lighting urns of bronze. Passing through the heavy, leather-paneled doors, one enters the assembly-room, which will be used for small gatherings, lectures and as a reception hall when necessary. On the first floor are grouped various administrative and other offices. On the second floor are the study-rooms, the locker-rooms and a modern lunch-room for members of the library staff. Across the whole front of the third floor extends the main reading-room of the library. At the opposite end of the building, also extending across the entire width, is the room that will house the greatest collection of California historical documents in existence.

In this California-room will go the rare Sutter letters, maps and relics; the hundreds of photographs of California Pioneers; over 5,000 manuscripts, early mission and commercial documents; old account books; diaries recording the early life of the Pioneers in California; early ballots, political dodgers, and Central Pacific railway items. Here also will go some of the 8,000 bound volumes of California newspapers, including complete files of the first newspaper published in this state, the first published in San Francisco, the first published in Sacramento, as well as great numbers of the very early county papers.

Here will be displayed the only complete file of the first magazine published in the state. Here also will be kept a complete file of the 'Overland Monthly," "Hutchins'," "The Hesperian" and other California magazines. Practically all magazines of any importance ever published here will be included. Several thousand pictures portraying important events, old wood cuts and lithographs of early mining life and scenes, early views of the important towns of the gold-rush period, oil and water color paintings relative to California scenery and historical places, together with reproductions of many of the works of California artists will be accessible in this room to any person interested.

The collection of rare early books relating to this state covers the early voyages, explorations, missions, the goldrush period, the building of the great continental railroad, and practically all phases of California history. No other state in the union possesses such a wonderful newspaper index as does this department, with over 2,000,000 references to California events and people. It is kept up to date and daily proves its worth to students of history, to members of the press looking up past events, to people looking up the history of members of their families who came here in the early days, and to the professional man looking up legal notices and vital statistics. People from all over the world have made use of this great time-saving facility of the State Library.

Another great asset are the files of the great registers from 1867 to date. After the great fire in San Francisco thousands of naturalization papers were restored by means of these registers. In addition, are hundreds of old theatre programs, announcements, book plates, books of fiction by California authors, city and town directories, and a very nearly complete file of biographical cards of California Pioneers, authors, musicians, artists and state officials. The west end of the room has been designated as the pioneer-room. In the California department will be exhibited a remarkable collection of rare relics of this state.

One of the most unique and handsome rooms in this building is the public cataloguing and charging room just across the hall from the main reading-room. Recessed in its walls are exhibition spaces for the display of rare books and documents. The reference-room will be on the east side of the charging-room. The fourth floor will be given over to the current periodicals, prints, music-room and cataloguing-room. On the fifth floor will be the supreme court-room, judicial chambers and an art gallery across the north end.

The office building is a model of efficiency in its design, the rooms are large, well lighted and ventilated, severely plain in interior finish, no money being wasted in useless ornament. In fact, the ornamental features of both buildings are almost confined to the splendid statuary in the front pediments, designed and sculptured by Edward Field Sanford Jr. of New York.

SUTTER'S FORT.

One of the most-prized possessions of California is Sutter's Fort. It is one of the most historic spots in California, and the Native Sons hibits was much better than hoped; that t quantity of worthless material was most ple ingly small; and that the fort possesses so exceptionally rare and priceless relics. T Board of Control is now going ahead with t work of preservation of the exhibits, processi them so that they will be as proof as possil against further deterioration and yet retain th appearance of age. In every way we are goi to strive to keep that elusive romantic atm phere of those days, that the Eastern visitor m carry away with him some idea of the spirit a indomitable courage of our Pioneer forefathe We shall go as fas as our funds will allow in t rehabilitation of the various living-rooms of t old fort, of the old stores that were there 1849, of the Kyburz living quarters, the old c penter shop of Marshall, the old distillery, a the immigrants' headquarters.

In the central building will be housed t relics of the past; special cases are to be ma for these, and every care taken for their p tection. When the complete report is made will contain full details of all the work th should be done to make it the most unique h torical museum in the world. To accompli this work of rehabilitation will require t hearty co-operation of all Native Sons and Nati Daughters in assisting in getting together t necessary furnishings for the rooms. The ar cles needed will not be announced until full search has been made as to what will be histo may well be proud of the great work they did when they bought it, restored it and gave it to their native state. For many years it has been one of the most interesting sights of the Capital. It contained a miscellaneous collection of relics displayed in very poor cases. Through a bill passed by the last Legislature and signed by Governor Friend W. Richardson, the sum of $10,000 was appropriated for the purpose of the reorganization of the collections at the fort and installing proper display facilities for the priceless relics there.

In carrying out that plan the Board of Control appointed Harry C. Peterson,—for many years curator of the Museum of Fine Arts at Stanford University, and for several years head of the field historical research work for the State Library,—as curator of the Sutter's Fort Historical Museum, and instructed him to make a preliminary survey of conditions at the fort and report them to the board.

The basis of this survey was, "that the exhibits of the new museum be restricted exclusively to the events leading up to the establishing of the fort by Captain Sutter; of his personal contacts with the various activities of California, and those events leading up to its acquisition by the United States; and particularly covering the gold discovery, better known as 'the days of forty-nine'. That the period to be especially emphasized be that from 1839 to 1869 . . . . That as far as possible the buildings, interior and exterior, be handled in such manner as will best retain and impart that romantic atmosphere of the days of forty-nine . . . . That a complete administrative system be evolved for the future conduct of its museum activities; that a complete system of recording all exhibits, both gifts and loans, be worked out, as well as a method of safeguarding the exhibits."

It was on this basis that the survey was made. From it was learned that the condition of the ex-cally correct to use. Sutter's Fort was restore to California through the united efforts of t Native Sons; now let us restore and rehabilita the living-rooms there through our further inte est in that historic landmark.

PAST GRAND PRESIDENT EMA GETT, CHAIRMAN GENERAL COMMITTEE.

Headquarters will be maintained at Hotel Senator, where the members of the Grand Parlor will register upon arrival in Sacramento.

The Grand Parlor banquet will be held in the Florentine and Roman rooms of Hotel Senator at 6:30 Monday evening. At 8:30 there will be a public reception in the hotel lobby. Past Grand President Ema Gett will preside. Mayor A. C. Goddard will extend the "Heart of California's" welcome to the Grand Parlor, and Grand President Sue J. Irwin will respond. Following a solo by Mrs. W. S. Hinds, E. C. Porter, secretary-manager of the Sacramento Chamber of Commerce, will deliver a brief address. Throughout the evening a four-piece string orchestra of young women will offer selections.

Tuesday, at 9:30 a. m., the Grand Parlor members will be taken on an auto tour down the Sacramento River to Rio Vista, Solano County, returning to Courtland, Sacramento County, for luncheon, under beautiful oak trees at the school grounds, at 1 p. m. At 9 p. m. the grand ball will be held in Hotel Senator. All Sacramento County Native Sons have been invited to this function.

Wednesday, at sunset, flag exercises will be held at historic Sutter's Fort. Sadie Brainard will have charge of the program, which will include: Patriotic selection, American Legion band; address to the American Flag, Grand President Sue J. Irwin; lowering of the flag, members of the California National Guard; blowing the colors, Trumpeter Semeri; selection, band; song, "The Star-Spangled Banner," Mrs. Mispah Nathan, with Mrs. Edward Pease at the piano. Following the program, there will be an open-air concert on the fort grounds.

Thursday evening the newly-elected Grand Parlor officers will be installed.

Monday afternoon, Liberty Parlor (Elk Grove) will provide an entertainment program at the Grand Parlor session, Fern Parlor (Folsom) will provide one for Wednesday afternoon, and the Sacramento City Parlors (Califia, La Bandera, Sutter, Coloma) will do the honors Thursday afternoon.

HISTORY RECALLED AT SUTTER FORT TREE PLANTING CEREMONIES.

The Native Daughters of Sacramento have always taken a keen interest in Sutter's Fort, which was purchased and deeded to the State of California by the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West. In 1904, the Native Sons of the Capital City erected a flagpole on the fort grounds, and ever since the Native Daughters have provided a flag which is flown from the staff every day of the year.

February 20, 1904, the Native Daughters had a memorial tree planting on the fort grounds. Past Grand President Ema Gett presided at the ceremonies, and among the speakers were Miss Stella Finkeldey of Santa Cruz, then Grand President of the Order, and Judge Hubert R. McNoble of Stockton, at that time Grand President of the Native Sons. Mrs. Gett's opening remarks, which follow, on that occasion, more than twenty-one years ago, sounded the yellow-peril warning. Had it been heeded then, California would not today be so infested by the hordes of Japan:

"Standing in the shade of this old landmark of the days before 'los gringo' came, I see coming through the air birds of paradise, each with a branch of heavenly loveliness to place with us as mute reminders of the hospitality and unselfish generousness of its first earthly inhabitant.

"The rush to the New El Dorado, whose Argonauts builded on this Occidental step of our World Republic a golden empire, by nature blessed with golden fruit and grain, and brought into being sturdy sons and active, loyal daughters, unconsciously in the greed for golden wealth took from its own General Sutter's means of existence; and while we, with every sense of enjoyment, are now paying a long-neglected debt of gratitude, we should not be unmindful of the fact that to our city, General John A. Sutter gave twelve public squares, the waterfront, all the streets and alleys, and the first public cemetery, to be ours forever for the public.

"Some of these munificent gifts have gone the glimmering way that public benefactions to municipalities usually follow, and were I a theorist I would venture the thought that the heart which answered to the direction of the soul that was once the owner of this sacred spot, historic by reason of his kindness, was wounded beyond death at the use that has been made of the gifts of his bounty.

"We know republics are ungrateful, and it is not our mission to catecise those who have preceded us in the development of the material resources of our state; but with the knell of the conflict in the Orient, it behooves us, as sons and daughters of California, to see that this fair land of ours is not permitted to be infested with an emigration from the Far East, which it is impossible to assimilate with our civilization on this historic ground.

"Today we desire to plant trees to commemorate the virtues of John A. Sutter, his good wife and his son, and to dedicate trees to the memory of James W. Marshall who, a few miles from here, in the millrace of Sutter's grist mill, fo the precious nugget that quickened the inc tries and commerce of the world; to John Fremont, the pathfinder; to William Tecum Sherman, who assayed the precious metal; Ezekial Merritt and William B. Ide, wh prominence in the California revolution is served in our ceremonies; to Sloat, Stock Halleck, Kearney and Montgomery, for t loyalty to country and their intrepid daring diplomacy; to Gwin and McDougall, our United States Senators, for their unique par our nation's history, of being the senators of only state admitted to our sisterhood that sented with their credentials, as senators, state's new constitution; to Peter H. Burn our first Governor; to General A. M. W [founder of the Order of Native Sons of Golden West], our first mayor; to Dr. John Morse, the saint of Pioneers, for his unsel part during the cholera; to Colonel Ed. Ba the hero of Ball's Bluff; to the Sacramento ciety of Pioneers, builders of a commonwea the equal of which no sun ever shown upon, which we, your sons and daughters, hope few survivors may live long to enjoy; to each the Parlors of the Sons and Daughters of Golden West here assembled; and lastly, a would be inappropriate to plant a tree a tribute to any particular Grand President either the Native Sons or Daughters, the d pleasant in its performance, devolves on me plant a tree to the memory of a statesm scholar, true son of California, the late E Stephen M. White, whose unfeigned piety eminent character have caused us to select as the most eminent native of California fo to honor."

FORTIETH NATIVE DAUGHTER GRAND PARLOR SACRAMENTO

(CLARENCE M. HUNT.)

MONDAY, JUNE 21, THE FORTIETH Grand Parlor of the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West will convene in the City of Sacramento for a four-day session. Miss Sue J. Irwin (Berkeley 150) of Berkeley, Grand President, will preside. The new Elks' Building, Eleventh and J streets, will be the Grand Parlor meeting-place.

This will be the third Grand Parlor session held in the Capital City. The Sixth Grand Parlor met there in June 1892, the late Past Grand President Clara K. Wittenmyer presiding. A quarter-century ago, June 1901, the Fifteenth Grand Parlor met there. At that time Past Grand President Ema Gett, a resident of Sacramento, was the Grand President, and had the honor of presiding in her home-city.

Unless something now unforseen prevents, Past Grand President Carrie Roesch-Durham who, as Grand President, presided at the Fourth Grand Parlor—Santa Rosa, June 1890—will attend in Sacramento her fortieth consecutive session.

During the closing Grand Parlor year, under the supervision of Grand President Irwin the Order has made satisfactory strides ahead. Several new Subordinate Parlors have been instituted, and more are in prospect for institution at an early date. The membership has been substantially increased, and the funds of both the Grand Parlor and the Subordinate Parlors are in a healthy state.

During the past month a considerably-increased interest has been manifest in the matter of grand officers to be selected at the Sacramento Grand Parlor. The Grizzly Bear has been alert in hunting out candidates for the several offices, and presents herewith the information obtained:

The Order's several projects have been given new impetus, and the reports of grand officers and committees at Sacramento will show that all are in splendid condition. During the past year, a Grand Parlor committee headed by Past Grand President Anna L. Monroe has had in charge the proposed purchase, by the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West, of a grove of redwoods in Humboldt County, to be dedicated as a living memorial to the Pioneers of California, and a report as to the progress made in this laudable undertaking is anxiously awaited.

Automatically, Grand President Sue J. Irwin (Berkeley 150) of Berkeley will become the Junior Past Grand President.

For Grand President, there is no reason to even suspicion that Grand Vice-president Pearl Lamb (El Pescadero 82) of Tracy will be opposed.

For Grand Vice-president there are three candidates—and a fourth will probably come into the race: Mae Himes-Noonan (Portola 172) of San Francisco; Florence Danforth-Boyle (Gold of Ophir 190) of Oroville; Grand Marshal Dr. Louise C. Heilbron (San Diego 208) of Sacramento.

For Grand Secretary, Alice H. Dougherty (Angelita 32) of San Francisco, incumbent.

For Grand Treasurer, Susie K. Christ (Yosemite 83) of San Francisco, incumbent.

For Grand Marshal, there are two candidates—and don't be surprised if there is a third: Josephine C. Barboni (Vendome 100) of Visalia; Grand Trustee Esther R. Sullivan (Marysville 162) of Marysville.

For Grand Inside Sentinel, Grand Outside Sentinel Evelyn I. Carlson (Dolores 169) of San Francisco.

For Grand Outside Sentinel, Anna Mixon Armstrong (Woodland 90) of Woodland.

For Grand Organist, Irma Laird (Alturas 159) of Alturas.

Apparently, the query in The Grizzly Bear for May, "What's the trouble?", aroused some interest in the Grand Trusteeships. When the May issue went to press there was one announced candidate, now there are eleven, and there probably will be more before election-day. To date, the announced candidates for the seven places on the Board of Grand Trustees are:

Annie C. Thuesen (Alta 3) of San Francisco; Mary A. Quinn (Marguerite 12) of Placerville, incumbent; May F. Givens (Mariposa 63) of Cathay; Nathalie Clark (Aleli 102) of Salinas; Sallie Rutherford-Thaler (Aloha 106) of Oakland, incumbent; Grand Inside Sentinel Lillian Tilden (Sutter 111) of Sacramento; Marvel Thomas (Los Angeles 124) of Los Angeles; Mae L. Edwards (Castro 178) of San Francisco; Josephine T. Johnson (El Carmelo 181) of Daly City, incumbent; Lillian Beguhl (Fresno 187) of San Francisco, incumbent; Vida Vollers (Marinita 198) of San Rafael, incumbent.

Two invitations for the Forty-first (1927) Grand Parlor will be extended: By Marinita 198, in behalf of San Rafael, Marin County, and by Morada 199, in behalf of Modesto, Stanislaus County.

GRAND PARLOR COMPOSITION.

The Sacramento Grand Parlor will be composed of permanent members, grand officers and Subordinate Parlor delegates, as follows:

Founder of the Order—Lilly O. Reichling-Dyer.

Past Grand Secretaries—Georgia Watson-Cotter-Ryan, Laura J. Frakes.

SOAK 'EM

THE JAP SITUATION RIGHT NOW IS this. Demand will be made of the next Congress that the quota be applied to Japan, and the demand will be made by the powerful Federation of Churches of Christ in America, manipulated by r. Sydney L. Gulick. The federation, through arious allied organizations, is now, and has been nce the passage of the federal law denying aps entrance into this country, working toward at end and has had considerable encouragement.

The Japs won a victory in April, when the ederal Department of Labor made it possible or the 125,000 Japs born in Hawaii to come to e mainland. California, of course, will be the ecca for most of them to swell the numbers f Japan's "peaceful invasion" army already ell entrenched here, thanks to the inactivity f the authorities of California in enforcing the lien Land Law.

Strenuous efforts will be made by the combined yellow-Jap and white-Jap forces to have he 1927 California Legislature so amend the tate's Alien Land Law as to permit of the Japs ontinuing in undisturbed possession of the undreds of acres of land they now claim title o, although most of it was obtained in defiance of the law and can be escheated—if we ver get red-blooded American officials who will nforce the law.

As a matter of fact, petitions along this line ere in circulation a few months back, but suddenly the circulators were withdrawn from the eld. Why they were called off, only the Japs f both complexions know. Perhaps they devised in their brains—exceptionally fertile when t comes to producing ways and means to beat he law—some better way to carry on in behalf f the worshiped mikado. Or, more likely, nowing that the law-enforcers are backboneess, concluded not to worry. What they want, nd have, is the land; how they procure it, conerns them not in the least.

State senators and assemblymen and also sevral district attorneys are to be elected this fall. The White citizens who desire that California hould not become a dependency of Japan had etter look well into the records—giving no eed to the promises—of candidates for those ffices. If they do not, the coming Legislature ill positively be pro-Jap and the Alien Land aw will be amended to pacify the Japs.

And, too, if they do not, more pro-Jap district attorneys will be elected and there will ontinue to be no enforcement of the law. On is record as regards the California Alien Land aw, the district attorney of not a single county n the state where Japs claim title to land, agriultural or otherwise,—and that includes practically every county of the state—should be retained in office, for no attempt whatever has been made to recover the land "purchased" by ellow-Jap dollars from traitorous white-Jap landowners. If one such district attorney seeks re-election, for the good of California soak him with the ballot!

This would have the desired effect on the holdovers, and would result in recovering from the Japs the soil which belongs to the White race. And unless that soil is recovered, California will soon become yellow through and through. The history of the world proves that it cannot be otherwise—the race which must dominate is the race which possesses the soil. Recover the soil, and the Jap evil will be remedied for all time.

July 4 will be the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of American independence. The glorious Fourth-of-July should be celebrated in every hamlet, town and city. Spread the gospel of patriotism—love of country, respect for its constitution and obedience to its every law—everywhere!

---

"The Commonwealth," the official journal of the Commonwealth Club of California, whose headquarters are in San Francisco, had this query: "Should our 1927 Legislature make every auto owner carry accident liability?" It certainly should!

A large number of so-called auto owners are not now liable for a dollar's damages, for they have nothing to levy upon. Such a law, too, would materially thin out the ranks of the reckless drivers. The man who has nothing is naturally reckless, and would find it difficult to get insurance. The man who is financially responsible is more cautious, and as a rule carries insurance.

True, if every auto owner be compelled to carry accident liability there will be a decided decrease in the sale of cars on the installment plan, and a law along that line will be strenuously opposed by the Shylock "automotive finance corporations." But which is best for the common good: to protect the business of the Shylocks, or to conserve human life?

That the Japs intend to force "racial equality" on the nations of the world, through the League of Nations, is again evidenced in a published account of the league's preliminary economic conference at Geneva late in April. Sugimura, the Jap delegate, declared it to be imperative that there should be no discrimination by any country—implying, of course, that the United States should not bar Japs and other aliens ineligible to citizenship.

The league has taken no action along this line yet, but wait until the United States becomes part and parcel of the league, via the "World Court," and then this country will be forced to accept the "racial equality" principle.

Arrangements for the due observance of the one hundredth anniversary of the arrival of the first American citizen in California are being made in Los Angeles by the Historical Society of Southern California. Jedediah Strong Smith was the man, and he arrived at San Gabriel Mission in November of 1826.

This anniversary, important in the history of California, should be generally observed in the state, for while American Citizen Smith came in over the southern trail, he traversed the San Joaquin and the Sacramento Valleys, and went out over the Sierra Nevadas.

State Superintendent of Public Instruction Will C. Wood has appealed to all school superintendents and principals in California to cooperate in the celebration of this anniversary. The Native Sons and the Native Daughters of the Golden West should, by all means, co-operate, too.

The United States Supreme Court has rendered an opinion to the effect that it is not unconstitutional for White citizens to agree among themselves to keep Negroes out of their (the Whites') residential districts.

If it is not contrary to the Federal Constitution to exclude Negroes, citizens by authority of that constitution, from restricted districts, certainly it would not be unconstitutional to exclude Japs and others denied citizenship by that same constitution.

The decision may or may not be good law, but it certainly is good commonsense. White citizens who do not want their property nearconfiscated by having a Jap plant himself in their midst will do well to form restricted districts and agree among themselves that they will not sell, rent or lease to a Jap.

"Many rattlesnakes are reported in mountains," says a newspaper. It is not necessary, however, to go to the mountains to find snakes. There are hordes of them in human form—in the cities, large and small.

---

A San Francisco attorney has launched a movement for a November referendum on California's "little prohibition" law, the Wright act. Why worry about modifying a law which is not enforced, except occasionally, in the cases of foreigners who know how to use liquor and, unlike the American consumers, do not make booze-hogs of themselves?

---

The Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, through its Grand Parlor historic landmarks committee, is marking historic spots throughout California—a good work.

But, the lettering on the markers is misleading. The plates should read, "Placed by the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West," and not, as they now read, "Placed by the Landmarks Committee," etc.

The Order, and not the committee, pays for the plates, and therefore the Order, and not the committee, should be given due credit. It would be just as proper for the history committee of the Grand Parlor to take unto itself credit for the history fellowships, and entitle them, "History Committee Traveling Fellows," as for the landmarks committee to label the markers as it does now, and for a long time has, mislabeled them.

One by one, as they present themselves at the polls for re-nomination, those United States Senators who voted to put the United States into the League of Nations through the trapdoor "World Court," are being knocked out.

THE HAPPIEST HEART

(JOHN VANCE CHENEY.)

Who drives the horses of the sun
Shall lord it but a day;
Better the lowly deed were done,
And kept the humble way.

The rust will find the sword of fame,
The dust will hide the crown;
Ay, none shall nail so high his name
Time will not tear it down.

The happiest heart that ever beat
Was in some quiet breast
That found the common daylight sweet,

MODOC NATIVE DAUGHTERS TO LAUNCH HEALTH CAMPAIGN.

Alturas (Modoc County)—In order to combat the evil of Oriental intestinal amoeba, which is bringing great suffering and misery to hundreds of Californiana through use of uncooked vegetables and fruits which, under the most unsanitary conditions, are cultivated and marketed by Oriental people, Alturas Parlor No. 159 N.D.G.W. is preparing to launch a statewide campaign to have enacted legislation which will make it compulsory that all such foodstuffs be labeled as productions of Orientals. Thus will purchasers of such knowingly take the risk entailed.

COMMENCEMENT DAY IN PASADENA

FIFTY THOUSAND PERSONS SIT IN A huge outdoor amphitheatre. Before them is spread out a beautiful garden. It is a garden of Colonial days, filled with great spreading trees, with vine-clad arbors, trellises, benches, fountains, glistening pools and old-fashioned flowers. There are literally showers of flowers—lilacs, sweet william, pansies, daffodils, jonquils, crimson peonies, hollyhock—flowers of long ago, emphasizing the lovely pastel shades, shades of perennial larkspur, purple and mauve, old rose and pink, blue and white.

Around this beautiful garden runs a Colonial fence—nine hundred feet of it—decorated in richest morning-glory hues. In the center is a rockery, sheltering ferns and gayest flowers. Winding through the garden are broad, flower-bordered paths, leading to a stage at one end. From an open space in front of the stage emanates music—music of Colonial days, played by the famous Long Beach Municipal band, under the direction of Herbert L. Clarke, world's greatest cornetist.

Slowly the shadows in the garden lengthen. The sun settles closer to the distant hills. Five o'clock approaches. Suddenly a trumpet call rings out from the stage. It is promptly answered by a similar call from the other end of the garden. Fifty thousand necks are craned and a hundred thousand eyes sweep the length and breadth of the garden. The annual commencement day pageant of Pasadena high-school is about to begin.

Here they come! George Washington, striding along, surrounded by his generals. Betsy Ross and her attendants. Lovely Colonial lads and lassies in costumes of silk and velvet. Forty-four little girls in white, with panniers and bodices of dainty pastel shades. Twelve tiny lads and twelve wee lassies in softest tones of pink and blue and gold. Twenty-four older boys and girls dancing a stately minuet at one end of the garden, while twenty-four babies at the other end of the garden imitate them. The band plays old-time Colonial airs. Betsy Ross approaches General Washington and presents to him the first flag that the United States of America ever had.

Quickly the music changes. No longer are the airs softly plaintive. Instead, they are filled with life and gladness, with sunshine and joy. Through the western gateway comes Miss California, tall and regal, garbed in shimmering gold, her arms filled with choicest roses of many hues. Surrounding her are her maids of honor, bearing great golden cornucopias—horns of plenty, if you please, filled with luscious California fruit. Into the scene of stately dignity has come California sunshine. Forty-four lovely California girls, their scarfs of gold and silver gleaming in the sunlight, dance gaily. California babies romp and play.

Again the music changes. It is no longer plaintive, no longer gay. It is now the kind of music that sets patriotic hearts to throbbing and loyal eyes to sparkling. For Old Glory is coming! Borne by Miss America, loveliest of them all, it is carried down the length of the garden to the stage. Hundreds upon hundreds of beautiful girls dance into the garden. Down four aisles they come, all dressed in white, some with head-bands and deep collars of blue with silver stars, some with huge picture hats of glowing red and carrying great baskets of red and white carnations.

As Miss America moves through the garden, Betsy Ross and Miss California fall in behind. To the very top of the stage they go, and there they place their flags, Old Glory waving proudly above the Colonial flag and the California Bear.

Down in the garden, the hundreds of others take their places along the two paths which lead to the stage, lining the paths solidly on both sides. Triumphantly the strains of Meyerbeer's "Coronation March" ring out. Triumphantly the seniors enter and march down the paths, through two great Colonial archways, to the stage—the goal toward which they have been looking for four long years. As they near the stage, they begin singing Gounod's "Praise Ye The Father," and in the crowded stands throats become a little tight and eyes a trifle blurred.

The seniors take their places on the stage. There are more than five hundred boys and girls in this graduating class, and a large stage, with tiers of seats running upward and backward, is required to accommodate them. At the top of the stage, Miss America sits on her throne, with Betsy Ross on one side and Miss California on the other. The entire stage is a mass of flowers.

When the seniors are in their seats, Miss California arises and sings a song of triumph and rejoicing. All heads then are bowed, while the invocation is pronounced, and the response is sung by the seniors:

"Father, hear the prayer we offer;
Not for ease that prayer shall be,
But for grace that we may ever
Live our lives courageously."

The ensuing program is brief. Every word of it, and every note of the music, is carried through huge amplifiers to the most distant of the fifty thousand persons in the stands. Through a microphone it is carried to a high-powered radio station and thence broadcast to all the world, being picked up and re-broadcast from another big station in the East.

The president of the class, a boy, extends greetings to the vast audience. The valedictorian, a girl, gives brief expression to the ideals for which the class stands. Incidentally, this girl not only completed every course she took in high-school wtih a grade of 1, the highest grade awarded, but she also is a star athlete, holder of the world's record for women in the 220-yard dash.

principal of the school introduces the class, the superintendent of schools responds, and the president of the board of education advances to the front of the stage. The seniors rise; those on the ends of the rows go quickly to the front of the stage, receive from members of the board of education bundles of diplomas, distribute the diplomas—and in less than five minutes each of the 550 graduates has received his or her diploma.

There is a pledge to the flag and an exultant song of rejoicing. Then comes the distribution of flowers. Flowers in bouquets and flowers in baskets. Forty-four lovely Colonial maids, an equal number of golden-gowned California girls, and a similar number of Miss America's attendants—each making trip after trip to bury the seniors under a veritable avalanche of blossoms.

The distribution is completed. The band crashes into a patriotic air. Little children troop into the garden, each waving a small flag of red, white and blue. The girls of the junior class dance gaily among the arbors and fountains and glistening pools, each carrying a large silk flag; the flower girls now bear flags instead of flowers; on the stage the seniors arise and each of them releases the folds of a flag to the breeze.

Flags everywhere. And now, through the southern gates, come fifty American Legion men, each carrying a huge, silken, golden-fringed flag. Into the garden they march. The band crashes into the strains of "The Stars and Stripes Forever," followed by "The Star-Spangled Banner," with fifty thousand throats singing the refrain.

And the 1926 commencement day pageant of the Pasadena high-school is over. It has lasted just one hour and fifteen minutes. Starting at five o'clock in the afternoon, it is completed before dark.

Of course, the scene just described has not actually occurred as yet. It will happen on the afternoon of Friday, June 18, in the Pasadena Rose Bowl.

The holding of commencement exercises in the form of an outdoor pageant was begun by Pasadena high-school in 1921. That was before the Rose Bowl was built. In June of that year, Tournament Park was converted into an old English garden, and Miss Ida E. Hawes, supervisor of attendance at the school, undertook the task of staging an outdoor commencement pageant. A few more than 5,000 persons packed into the park to witness the affair, and pronounced it beautiful.

In 1922, the bleachers were removed from the park, and 7,500 persons saw the commencement held in a pastoral setting, with the seniors' attendants garbed in shepherdess costumes.

In 1923, the Rose Bowl had been completed, and the pageant was held there, with the stage erected in the center of the stadium, facing the west seats. The motif that year was old Grecian. The pageant was larger and more resplendent than in the preceding years. In the garden were pools and fountains. Orange trees bore real oranges. The Pasadena Elks' band was engaged to play for the program. And the crowd taxed the capacity of the seats on the west side of the field.

In 1924, the stage was erected at the south end of the field, making it visible from all of the 50,000 seats in the stands. A Dutch motif was adopted. A windmill reared its head in the garden. There were winding canals, tulip gardens and old Dutch bridges. Mme. Schumann-Heink sang. Those who saw the 1924 commencement are still talking about it.

Last year marked the close of the fiftieth school year in Pasadena, and the pageant depicted the happenings of these fifty years. In the garden was a replica of the first Pasadena public-school. Near by Spanish children danced and played. There was a Spanish orchestra, as well as a band. On the stage sat the teacher of that first Pasadena public-school.

It is wholly appropriate that the motif for the pageant this year will be patriotic. It is just one hundred and fifty years since Betsy Ross made the first American Flag, and eighty years since the Bear Flag of California first floated beneath the Stars and Stripes. For beauty of setting, inspiration of the program, and the thrill that only Old Glory can bring, this year's pageant is expected to surpass all its predecessors.

The staging of the pageant is a huge task. One program is barely completed before plans for the following year are under way. Miss Hawes, who conceived and staged the first pageant, has planned and prepared each succeeding pageant. How she manages to evolve ideas so original, and carry out the elaborate programs with speed and precision, remains a mystery to those who witness the program each year. There never is a hitch or a delay. Everything goes off as though it had been rehearsed for months. Yet only three rehearsals are held. Miss Hawes says that her secret is in striving to keep the pageants "simple, yet inspiring." And they certainly are inspiring.

The fame of the Pasadena high-school commencement pageants has spread. Writing of them in the "American Educational Digest," Dr. J. W. Searson, distinguished New York educator, said that they were "the most distinctive commencements in America." Each year the attendance at the pageant grows. Last year, more than 40,000 persons witnessed the beautiful program, and it is confidently expected that this year's attendance will tax the capacity of the huge Rose Bowl.

TAXPAYERS FLIM-FLAMMED.

The Los Angeles County Auditor recently informed the public that the much-talked-about new Hall of Justice cost $6,324,580.44, and not $8,000,000 as the taxpayers had been led to believe.

The building itself, says the auditor, cost $5,167,260.12, the furnishings and equipment $1,054,237.80, the site $400,649.59, and engineering $208,475.59. These figures total $6,830,623.10, from which a reserve fund of $506,042.66 is deducted, leaving $6,324,580.44, the total cost to date.

Of the total Hall of Justice construction funds, $4,580,074.13 came out of the general fund—tax money—and the balance from the bonds voted by the taxpayer. Had they (the taxpayers) know what the Hall of Justice was to actually cost, would they have sanctioned the bond issue? They simply had "it slipped to them," and they pay the slipping bill!—C.M.H.

U. S. C. SUMMER LAW SCHOOL.

Announcement is made by Dr. Frank M. Porter, dean of the school of law of the University of Southern California, of the nineteenth annual summer quarter of the law school at U.S.C., opening in June, which, for the conveneince of students who wish to take partial summer work and have time for a vacation period, is divided into two terms of six weeks each, with the number of periods per week doubled.

BIRTHDAY CELEBRATED.

Petaluma (Sonoma County)—Petaluma Parlor No. 222 N.D.G.W. celebrated its fourth institution anniversary with a largely attended dinner. The tables were beautifully decorated with sweetpeas and honeysuckle vines.

Guests of honor were Miss Edna Miller and Miss Bertha Keechler, soon to become brides. Visitors included Past Grand President Emma Gruber-Foley, Miss Irene Tomasi, "mother" of the Parlor, and Mrs. Anna Gruber-Loser. Following the supper a class of candidates were initiated.

THE AUTO INDUSTRY

PRODUCTION OF PASSENGER AUTOS in the United States increased from 461,500 in 1913 to 3,678,328 in 1925, and auto trucks from 23,500 to 475,029, according to the May news letter of the National City Bank of New York. Commenting on the industry, the letter says:

The growth of the automobile industry since 1913 indicates that up to 1923 the industry was expanding rapidly, but that since that year the amount of cars produced and sold annually has shown little increase, the total output for 1925 being only about 100,000 cars above that for 1923 [3,563,785]. Moreover, it is interesting to note that of this small increase in production over 1923, the whole of it was due to an increase in export sales, as the number of cars produced for domestic consumption [3,434,028] was actually smaller in 1925 than in 1923.

When it is considered further that 1925 was a year of great prosperity, and therefore favorable to high automobile sales, and the industry had the benefit of the growing popularity of the closed car, radical changes in design such as the introduction of balloon tires and four-wheel brakes, and the advantage of a great expansion in the use of installment credit, the failure to appreciably increase volume over previous years seems to suggest that automobile production may have reached that stage in the development of every youthful industry where the high rate of expansion of the earlier years can no longer be expected.

Certainly it appears true that with the industry equipped to produce five to five and one-half million passenger cars annually, the business is becoming more highly competitive, and increases in the volume of one company are more likely to be at the expense of that of another company. Some evidence of this has already been noted, particularly this spring, when a number of the companies have done extremely well, partly, however, through the expedient of cutting into another's field.

This does not imply any pessimism as to the outlook for the industry in general. The automobile, on the whole, has passed the stage of being merely a luxury. It has become a necessity which has worked itself inextricably into our business and social system, and there is no question as to the future of those companies which are able to supply the kind of a car the public wants.

Always the automobile manufacturer has the advantage of the fact that his product is more or less of a specialty, in that one make is not always readily substituted for another as in the case of staple articles, so that over-production for the industry as a whole may not mean over-production for the individual company. Moreover, improvements in the quality of the product are taking place so rapidly that cars rapidly become obsolete and demand for new output is stimulated. Despite the present high level of development, it is certain that the automobile is still nowhere near finality of design or technical efficiency.

FEMALE AUTO DRIVERS NOT MORE DEADLY THAN THE MALE.

The female of the species who drives an automobile in California is not more deadly than the male, despite Kipling's findings. Will H. Marsh, chief of the State Division of Motor Vehicles, points to his records to prove that women drivers have fewer serious accidents and are more careful than men. Neither is the urge for speed so prevalent among women, notwithstanding all that has been said and written about jazzmania and the tendencies of the present generation to live at a fast pace.

"Women are naturally more cautious," says the motor-vehicle chief. "They make up for their lack of knowledge about motors by taking fewer chances, and if they don't always give the correct hand signal, at least they give some sort of signal, which is more than hundreds of men do. They are more careful at crossings, and have more respect for dangerous curves. In short, they display more horse-sense, on the average, than men."

An index to California's continued prosperity appeared in figures released by Will H. Marsh, chief of the State Division of Motor Vehicles, showing that $6,558,273.15 was collected in registration fees during the first three months of this year.

Registrations of motor vehicles and trailers for the period totaled 1,388,932, divided as follows: Automobiles, 1,175,238; solid trucks, 36,941; pneumatic trucks, 145,430; motorcycles, 7,588; trailers, 22,735.

Marsh predicts that the registrations for 1926 will exceed those of last year by at least 100,000.

A DEPLORABLE RECORD.

The red trail of the speed-crazed and criminally-careless automobile driver, traced in records of the State Division of Motor Vehicles, was found to have claimed 3,807 killed or maimed victims in California during the first three months of 1926.

Three hundred and sixty-seven drivers gambled with death and lost, for that number were shown to have been killed during the period. Of the total of 367 fatal accidents, eighty-two occurred in San Francisco and Los Angeles.

Ninety percent of the accidents could have been avoided, had proper precautions been taken. One-half of the accidents occurred at intersections.

EMERGENCY GAS SUPPLY.

It is a wise motorist who carries a can of gasoline in his car, even if it is only one gallon. Although it may be possible to secure gasoline in an emergency by sending after it, it may be difficult to find a telephone. Then too, if one does not use this reserve supply, someone less fortunate will welcome it.

SEASON'S BATHING SUITS "SKIN TITE"

SIMPLICITY IS THE ELEGANCE OF TODAY, but to be smart, to be pleasing to your fellowmen and annoying to your fellowwomen, clothes must show in every perfect line that they have been made for you. No two human bodies are precisely alike. Very rarely are two sides of the body identical. Almost every figure is a little higher in one shoulder than the other and a little larger in the right hip than the left. Some are broad and flat, while others are narrow but thick through. Some will have round shoulders, hollow chest and small bust, while others will have narrow shoulders and a prominent bust. All will have different degrees of sloping or square shoulders, and even more pronounced difference will be found at the hip. If your clothes are to fit you with ease of line that will make them smart and distinctive they must be cut in such a way that they can be adapted to your individual figure.

In the leading stores, where yardage is sold, lovely girls model frocks fashioned from fabrics shown. I noticed one very interesting combination. A trig little frock of oyster-white linen was actually tailored, with no trimming and with lines so straight they almost "leaned in." This was topped by a coat in flowered print upon a white ground. The coat was three-quarters length and cut upon straight lines, with a simple turnover collar,—a most becoming, as well as convenient costume for beach or country wear. One instantly wished for such a costume.

The flowery coats and capes for dinner are made of chintz, cretonne and printed ratines in splendid colors and patterns. Other wonderful block-printed linens and cotton prints in prim English patterns are quilted after the fashion of the peasant petticoats.

An ensemble suit of red and yellow print, with its short jacket lined with red batiste and with both the coat and frock quilted in the "new-old" French manner, is one of the new ideas of a summer suit.

Damask and rough silks such as shantung, rajah, tussah and pongee, in all shades and in their natural honey colors and in stripes and prints, are extremely smart for summer sports frocks, coats and suits.

Damask, with its lovely shadowy designs, is delightful for frocks, while tub frocks are particularly delightful in printed cottons with large pouch bags to match. Garden smocks are a riot of roses or tulips. In fact, any flower may be selected.

Black coin spots, the size of a quarter, are scattered liberally over a frock of white georgette, shirred at the hip and shoulders and having flying tie ends at the neck. Dots are one of the successes of the summer. Dots of all sizes, grouped to form designs or borders, or used in all-over patterns, are among the smartest of new prints.

Smocking or shirring is used on georgette and both plain and flowered crepes.

Lace, as a material and as a trimming, has come very much into its own. Dyed shadow lace is used for evening. The beige, blonde and other shades are very elegant for formal afternoon frocks. Large lace jabots appear on many of the new frocks.

The most important silk of the season is taffeta. It is changeable, plain, finely checked, plaided, flowered or bordered. It is used in many ways and for many purposes. For summer, taffeta is extremely chic in bands or frayed ruches on afternoon frocks of transparent georgette or silk voile. Frocks of taffeta, with jabots of georgette, are new.

Straight capes of taffeta are gathered to tie collars for afternoon, but shirred at the shoulders or tucked or on cords for evening.

For bridesmaids' dresses, nothing is lovelier than natty blue or shell-pink taffeta embroidered in two colors.

There is much difference of opinion as to whether an accessory is a necessity or not. For example, the scarf is sometimes used to swathe a sore throat. Bound from chin to shoulder-bone, the scarf, however gay, becomes a mere adjunct. But when cast jauntily beneath the chin, trailing negligently across one shoulder, the scarf becomes a distinct adjunct to the costume.

Many flowers are used at the hip or shoulder for evening dresses. Even the tweed suit may have its flower on the collar. Crystal flowers, to wear on evening gowns, are an innovation.

Grosgrain ribbon is used to trim dresses almost as often as to trim hats.

A stunning color scheme is black and white with touches of vivid blue.

Jade ornaments, both real and simulated, may be had at any of the shops, to apply to the purse or bag. To add atmosphere to many home ornaments, jade cutouts in green, in white, in rose or in lavender are truly enhancing and inexpensive, when not of the actual precious stuff.

High crowns and narrow brims are features of the new felt hats. The brims on some of the new felts flop down in the back.

"Skin-tites!" No term could better define the season's bathing suits, and yet—what of it? They are becoming, easy for swimming, and have reached the vanishing point as to economy. Of course, there are some so critical that they never will be satisfied. When bathing suits are cut full, it is complained that they are dangerous to life. Now, they are declared dangerous to morals, but there is a happy medium. Smart bathing togs will play a prominent part at th exclusive beach clubs and at all resorts.

Every known material will be used for th swimmer. The knitted suit of silk or wool wi be the most popular. Some have the futuristi design hand-painted in black on a solid back ground of one's favorite color.

Fashion has planned the two-piece suit. The trunks are of flannel, in navy, white and plaid effects, and the tops are knitted in plain or jacquard weaves. Caps, of every description, are shown.

Those who care to roam about the beach will have their suits for show-off of silk, printed linen, cretonne or plaid taffeta. Some are made with the basque waist and full skirt shirred over the hips. Narrow ruffles on the trunks of the same material peep out below the hem. Printed silk crepe, printed surf satin and damask are used in the same way.

A new costume is made of flat crepe or faille silk and has a blouse with long sleeves tied at the wrist and a high neck tied under the ear. A handkerchief cap is knotted pirate fashion. It also has trunks of self-colored wool jersey and a to-and-from-the-beach skirt to match the blouse.

All sorts of smart coats are shown to cover up after the bath. The most popular coolie coats will be used again this summer to slip on when one emerges from the sea dripping wet. They are smart and useful. Vivid colors in oriental designs decorate the backs of these wrappy coats. There is nothing like being, in or out of the swim, properly attired.

BOOK REVIEWS

"ACOMA, THE SKY CITY."

By Mrs. William T. Sedgwick; Harvard University Press, Publishers, Cambridge; Price, $4.00.

Acoma, the ancient Indian sky-city, stands much as it did hundreds of years ago—357 feet aloft on the top of a rugged cliff. It is sixty miles west of the Rio Grande, fifty miles east of Zuni and nineteen miles from the nearest railroad point, Laguna, in the State of New Mexico. The Indians still inhabit Acoma, clinging tenaciously to their once impregnable pueblo.

In this book, "Acoma, The Sky City", Mrs. William Sedgwick has given the general reader an opportunity to become acquainted, in an entertaining and interesting manner, with Pueblo-Indian history and civilization.

Beginning with the early history of the Acomas, who were first sighted by the Spaniards under Coronado, down to their present state as wards of the United States, Mrs. Sedgwick gives a complete account. A discussion of the social organizations, religious beliefs, folk tales, ceremonials and rituals, Indian games, and industries of the Acomas forms the bulk of the volume. An excellent appendix, bibliography and index conclude the book. Some remarkable photographs, delightfully interspersed, lend the added charm and vividness.

The untiring patience, courage and fortitude of Mrs. Sedgwick, which the compilation of this book must surely have cost, deserve the highest praise.

"THE GREAT VALLEY."

By Mary Johnston; Little, Brown & Company, Publishers, Boston; Price, $2.00.

John Selkirk of Scotland and his family eagerly watched the shoreline of the strange new country of America from the decks of the good ship "Prudence." It was in the year 1735. Years of privation and hardship ensued, but they held joys and laughter, too. Elizabeth Selkirk, growing more and more like her father, was a young lady now. Conan Burke thought her very lovely.

So, the story winds on through the dim Indian trails of the frontier, the happy drone of the wedded life of Elizabeth Selkirk and Conan Burke,—and its abrupt end. The Indian raid, the agonized days of captivity and death, the still years in the Indian village, and,—at last, the stealthy flight,—these events crowded the life of Elizabeth.

The "Great Valley" is a vivid tale. Its rugged simpliicty of diction is well adapted, bringing out, as it does, the stern life of the early pioneer.

"MADAME JUDAS."

By Margaret Turnbull; J. B. Lippincott Company, Publishers, Philadelphia; Price, $2.00.

A murder, a brilliant attorney, a fair witness and a Madame Judas are the spicy ingredients of this detective novel.

Eve Hamilton was willing to spend all her time, money and energy for the freedom of young Gilbert Eliot. True, "Doctor Charlie" had also been her intimate friend. She wished greatly that his murder be avenged, but the

Landscaping—

Older residents of California are familiar with the fact that Howard & Smith have created many of the most beautiful gardens in the State. With the vast development which has recently taken place in Southern California, however, it may be that some of the newer residents are not aware of the fact that Howard & Smith have a landscape department capable of rendering the very highest service in the treatment of their grounds. ¶ In the development of a property, confidence can only be placed in those having a thorough understanding of landscaping in its entirety. A full comprehension of this subject, from the minutest detail to the placing of the house itself, is essential if beauty and harmony are to be the ultimate result.

If you are contemplating the development of your grounds we will be pleased to have you confer with us.

LARGEST GATHERING IN N. D. HISTORY

THE DISTRICT MEETING OF THE SAN Francisco Parlors of Native Daughters of the Golden West —Minerva 2, Alta 3, Oro Fino 9, Golden State 50, Orinda 56, Fremont 59, Buena Vista 68, Las Lomas 72, Yosemite 83, La Estrella 89, Sans Souci 96, Calaveras 103, Darina 114, El Vespero 118, Genevieve 132, Keith 137, Gabrielle 139, Presidio 148, Guadalupe 153, Golden Gate 158, Dolores 169, Linda Rosa 170, Portola 172, Castro 178, Twin Peaks 185, James Lick 220, Mission 227, Bret Harte 232—held in the auditorium of Native Sons' Building April 30, was the largest gathering in the Order's history, over 1,600 members from all parts of California being in attendance. The auditorium, with its decorations of American and State (Bear) Flags presented a magnificent picture. A welcome was extended by Supervising District Deputy Grand President Mae Himes-Noonan, who had drilled the ritual team—consisting of the district deputies of San Francisco City and El Carmelo Parlor No. 181 (Daly City, San Mateo County) and the presidents and marshals of all the San Francisco Parlors—and under whose supervision the district meeting was planned.

The following were escorted to seats of honor: Grand President Sue J. Irwin, Grand Secretary Alice H. Dougherty, Grand Marshal Louise C. Heilbron, Grand Trustees Sallie Thaler, Josephine Johnson, Vida Vollers, Grand Outside Sentinel Evelyn I. Carlson, Past Grand Presidents Emma Gruber Foley, Dr. Eva R. Rasmussen, May C. Boldemann, Margaret Grote Hill, Addie L. Mosher, Permanent Grand Parlor Member Grace S. Williams, Supervising District Deputy Grand Presidents Mae Himes Noonan, Gertrude Morrison, District Deputy Grand Presidents Agnes Gallagher, Margaret Ramm, Myrtle Ross, Jeannette G. Powell, Agnes M. Curry, Mabel Scally, Marguerite Kaufmann, Millie Rock, Emilie Schulz, Lillian Spillane, Agnes M. Troy, Minnie F. Dobbin, Dorothy Barry, Annie Theusen, Josephine B. Morrisey, Margaret Griffith, Agnes McVerry, Lola Horgan, May R. Barry, May L. Noble, Gertrude Normile, Rena Mathias, Augusta Huxol, May F. Barthold, Gladys Clancy, Corrine A. Rose, Lelia B. Baker, Maud Sutton, Florence McGrath, Maud Cook, Eldora McCarty, Josephine Barboni.

While Grand President Irwin was being conducted to a seat of honor, Agnes and Lillian Troy sang the following, composed by them and sung to the tune of "Remembering":

"A WELCOME TO OUR GRAND PRESIDENT."

"We are here this lovely evening,
To welcome our Grand President.
And we're sure that all the sisters
Will say it is a night well spent.
And we hope that she will remember
This night in years to come,
And know there's a hearty welcome
For her whom we all love.

"And we know that when she leaves us
We will remember her,
And the happy hours we spent here
With our sister whom we honor.
And San Francisco bids you welcome,
Dear Sister Sue J. Irwin,
And joins in this friendly greeting
Which we sing with lots of 'Vim.'
We now welcome you."

Visitors were noted present from all the San Francisco Parlors and, as near as could be ascertained, from the following outside Parlors: Berendos 23 (Red Bluff), El Carmelo 181 (Daly City), Aloha 106 (Oakland), Vendome 100 (San Jose), San Jose 81, Palo Alto 229, Encinal 156 (Alameda), Angelita 32 (Livermore), Piedmont 87 (Oakland), Berkeley 150, Hayward 122, Bear Flag 151 (Berkeley), Brooklyn 157 (Oakland), Argonaut 166 (Oakland), Bahia Vista 167 (Oakland), Fruitvale 177 (Oakland), Bay Side 204 (Oakland), El Cereso 207 (San Leandro), Fresno 187, Berryessa 192 (Willows), Sea Point 196 (Sausalito), Marinita 198 (San Rafael), Fairfax 225, Tamalpa 231 (Mill Valley), Califia 22 (Sacramento), Coloma 212 (Sacramento), San Diego 208, Bonita 10 (Redwood City), Vista del Mar 155 (Halfmoon Bay), Ano Nuevo 180 (Pescadero), Menlo 211 (Menlo Park), Santa Rosa 217.

Those who made up the ritual team, and whose names were drawn from a box at the first district meeting, were: Senior past president, Margaret Ramm; junior past president, Lillian Spillane; past president, Millie Rock; president, Dorothy Barry; first vice-president, Josephine Morrisey; second vice-president, Agnes Gallagher; third vice-president, Gertrude Normile; marshal, May R. Barry; organist, Lillian Troy; recording secretary, Mabel Scally; financial secretary, May L. Noble; treasurer, Myrtle Ross; inside sentinel, Irene Munter; outside sentinel Agnes Curry; trustees, Rena Mathias, Della Denning, Rose Bloch; balloting march, Agnes Troy, Agnes McVerry, Anna Thuesen, Minnie Dobbin, Marguerite Kaufmann, Emilie Schultz, Lola Horgan, and the presidents and marshals of all San Francisco Parlors. During the rendition of the ritual the "Star-Spangled Banner" was rendered most beautifully by Mrs. Sarah Hagen (Genevieve 132).

One hundred and nine candidates were initiated, being presented by the following Parlors: Golden State, five; Orinda, four; Fremont, four; Buena Vista, one; La Estrella, three; El Vespero, one; Genevieve, seventeen; Gabrielle, four; Presidio, three; Guadalupe, seven; Golden Gate, two; Dolores, three; Portola, six; Castro, one; Twin Peaks, twenty-seven; James Lick, six; Mission, nine; El Carmelo, six.

ervising Deputy Noonan presented a gift of sil-r to Grand President Irwin, quoting the fol-wing lines, dedicated to Miss Irwin by Jose-ine Morrisey (Oro Fino 9):

Our leader, our friend, our counselor, too,
Tonight we acknowledge a debt that is due
To our own true Grand President, our dear Sister Sue.
And we give you our love and our pledges anew.

We thank and congratulate you this happy night,
For you bade us go forth, these new sisters invite
To share in our hopes, become part of our fold
May ever the right and truth be our mould

Again and again we give you our love,
And we pray that our Heavenly Father above
May continue to send to our dear Golden West
His sunshine and favors with which we've ever been blest."

While the supervising deputy was being escorted the Grand President, Mrs. Belle Bennett Buena Vista 68) sang "At Dawning." To rs. Noonan the San Francisco Parlors present-l, through May R. Barry, a silver flowerbasket, nd gifts were also presented Organist Lillian roy and President Dorothy Barry.

Grand President Irwin gave an inspiring ad-ress, complimenting the San Francisco Parlors nd the supervising deputy for their wonderful chievement, and also explaining the projects of ie Order and its accomplishments during the ast year. The only other speaker was Mrs. oonan, who explained just how all of the of-cers were chosen and who thanked all of the an Francisco Parlors, El Carmelo Parlor and l of those participating in the ritual work for eir wonderful co-operation and assistance.

DISTRICT LUNCHEON.

A district luncheon will be given by the San rancisco Parlors of the Native Daughters of ie Golden West, in honor of Grand President ue J. Irwin, on Saturday, June 5, at 1 p. m. n active committee consisting of members om all the Parlors has the affair in charge, nder the chairmanship of Mae Himes-Noonan, nd it is anticipated that the luncheon this year ill be the largest ever held, and that members nd their friends from all parts of the state ill be in attendance.

Reservations for the luncheon must be made ot later than June 2. Communicate with Mae imes-Noonan, 846 Twenty-fifth avenue, or Ag-es M. Curry, 380 Seventeenth avenue, chair-an and secretary, respectively. Price $1.50 er plate. A most elaborate program has been arranged and those who attend are assured of a most enjoyable afternoon.

The whist party given May 7 by the luncheon committee proved a splendid success, and the Parlors and members who assisted are thanked for their co-operation.

DOUBLE SHOWER.

An enjoyable evening was spent May 7, when a double surprise shower was given by the sewing club, composed entirely of members of Las Lomas Parlor No. 72 N.D.G.W., to Miss Cecille Hummel and Miss Freda Kugel at the home of Miss Evelyn Wallace. The tables were prettily decorated with ferns and sweetpeas, pink and blue bells, while long streamers hung from the chandeliers. A wonderful repast was served.

The affair was a big surprise to the brides-to-be. Miss Hummel received kitchen utensils for a new home, and Miss Kugel a shower of handkerchiefs, as she contemplates a six months' trip to Europe. Each bride comes from a family of three sisters, and all are members of Las Lomas.

NEW NATIVE DAUGHTER BABY.

The "baby" Native Daughter Parlor, La Dorado No. 236, organized by El Dorado Parlor No. 52 N.S.G.W., was instituted in San Francisco April 29 with fifty-six charter members.

Grand President Sue J. Irwin officiated, and was assisted by Past Grand President May C. Boldemann, Supervising District Deputy Mae Himes-Noonan, Grand Secretary Alice H. Dougherty, Grand Trustee Sallie R. Thaler, D.D.G.P. May Barry, D.D.G.P. May L. Noble.

Officers of the new Parlor, elected and installed, are: Henrietta P. Burke, charter past president; Emma Strobridge Sanders, president; Angela Sartorius Dunsing, first vice-president; Isabella Maze Bowser, second vice-president; Grace Nelson Hellmers, third vice-president; Theresa Rapp O'Brien, recording secretary; Celia Jacona Vucanovich, financial secretary; Bernice Rapp, treasurer; May Theresa Whelton, marshal; Bernice Cantet, inside sentinel; Hilda Young Christensen, outside sentinel; Rita Homer Fritch, organist; Agnes Tully, Edna V. Kessler, Keville T. Doherty, trustees. El Dorado 52 N.S.G.W. witnessed the installation ceremony.

guilty, not the innocent, punished. If it were not for Andrew Dickerson and his reputed skill as a lawyer, Eve would have been badly frightened, the evidence was so completely against Gilbert Eliot.

The untangling of the twisted skeins of mystery and intrigue, plus the added impetus of a love theme, combine to make "Madame Judas" entertainingly readable.

BUSINESS IN HOLLYWOOD SETS FAST PACE

Harry Barratt
(ASSISTANT SECRETARY HOLLYWOOD CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.)

WITHOUT TAKING INTO ACCOUNT any of the building projects for which no permits have been issued, Hollywood in the month of April entered upon a definite building program contemplating the erection of major structures valued at $2,317,500. These figures exceed the record of April 1925 by more than $1,000,000, the latter month's permits amounting to $1,270,415.

Apartment buildings, theatres and commercial structures are contemplated in the program outlined in the permits for April, and minor structures and residences sent the actual total well toward the $3,500,000 mark.

Thus far this year April was the best month for construction projects, with March a close second. March permits reached in value $2,077,750. April ran ahead of any month in 1925, exceeding June of that year, the biggest month, by $220,260.

There is in prospect for the immediate future a building program for the erection of structures valued at $10,660,000, all major in character with none costing less than $100,000 according to plans of the projectors. Mostly these are theatres, but there are some important edifices, such as the Hotel Roosevelt, a $2,500,000 proposal, included in the schedule.

Following are the big buildings in contemplation for erection in Hollywood this year: New York Syndicate class A structure, $1,000,000; Fred Keeler apartment, $1,000,000; French Village Incorporated class A structure, $1,000,000; Hotel Roosevelt, $2,500,000; R. H. Hood commercial structure, $200,000; Hollywood Pool, $100,000; First M. E. Church, $200,000; Harold Greenbaum apartment, $350,000; Strong-Wilson Syndicate class B structure, $1,000,000; Wilkes-DeMille theater, $300,000; Music Box theater, $260,000; Alice Calhoun-Hansen theater, $250,000; Warner Brothers theater, $2,000,000; West Coast theater Wilshire and Maplewood, $250,000; West Coast theater Wilshire at Sycamore, $450,000; Playhouse, $1,000,000. These projected buildings have a total value of $10,660,000.

Commercial business in Hollywood continues to set a fast pace and gains by great bounds, according to the April report of bank clearings issued by R. B. Odell, manager of the Hollywood Clearing House Association. The report showed an increase of approximately $5,000,000 in bank business during April of this year, as against the corresponding month of 1925.

According to the bank statement total clearings in April this year reached $32,955,504.20. In the corresponding month last year the amount was $28,031,876.64, the actual increase for this year being $4,923,627.56. April this year represents the biggest April in the history of the Hollywood Clearing House Association, extending over a period of five years.

Total clearings for the year 1926 to date amount to $124,290,998.08, an increase of $7,631,913.91 over 1925, the next largest year in total to a corresponding date, and an increase of $20,319,474.71 over the first four months of 1924.

HISTORIC LANDMARK DEDICATED

SMARTSVILLE (YUBA COUNTY)—IN the presence of several hundred people, a tablet marking an old California landmark was unveiled April 25. Esther Sullivan, Grand Inside Sentinel N.D.G.W., presided and Fred H. Greely, Past Grand President N.S.G.W., removed the American Flag covering the tablet, with these words: "I unveil this tablet in the name of the Pioneers who are responsible for this landmark." The tablet reads:

"Old Wells Fargo Office and Stewart Bros. Store. 1855. Restored and Dedicated to the Memory of the Pioneer Men and Women of Timbuctoo, May 10, 1925, by Marysville Parlor, No. 162, Native Daughters of the Golden West, and Marysville Parlor, No. 6, Native Sons of the Golden West. Presented by Wells Fargo Bank and Union Trust Company of San Francisco." Speakers of the occasion included Charles E. McLaughlin, Past Grand President N.S.G.W., Superior Judge E. P. McDaniel, G. W. Wickland, John Davis, John H. McQuaid, Charles E. Clinch. In the course of his remarks, Judge McLaughlin lauded the Orders of Native Sons and Native Daughters for commemorating the memory of the California Pioneers. He urged the people of the state to wake up to the great present-day problem confronting California—the survival of the races—saying, in part:

"Blood that cannot assimilate with us cannot own soil in this state. If the Japanese is so anxious to come here and get our land, even to almost fight for it and make it an international question, you should be willing to work for it." He warned that, without human effort, the law intended to head off the Jap invasion would be futile.

"Every young man in California should own a piece of land. Why should you ask others to come here and till the soil your fathers gave you?"

Warning that parents should not permit their children to be taught new ideas in government, he said: "This country suits me; that [American] Flag suits me; if you don't like it, go home; it is not an inch farther from here to the place from which you came than it was from your country to this place." To Dennis Curran of Timbuctoo, who is credited with fathering the movement to restore the old Wells Fargo Building, was given many expressions of appreciation for his work and interest.

(COMPILED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR.)

THE BIG EVENT OF JUNE 1876 IN California was the Jarrett and Palmer special train. With the scenery and troupe to put on a Shakespearean play at the California theater in San Francisco, it made a nonstop run, except at the terminal points of the roads passed over to change engines and crews and for fuel and water, from New York to San Francisco. While a schedule had been figured for it with the aid of railroad officials, an endeavor was made to find out how quick the run could be made. Crowds enthusiastically cheered the train passing the stations enroute and the run was followed hour by hour across the continent. The run from New York to San Francisco was made without a mishap in eighty-three hours, thirty-two minutes and nine seconds, the train arriving at Oakland Pier 9:40 a. m. June 5. The arrival of the troupe in San Francisco was announced by the firing of a salute. Hank Small, the engineman who handled the train over the Central Pacific, received as much notice as did the train itself.

June 12 was considered the hottest day on record to date in San Francisco, the thermometer registering 95 degrees in the shade during the afternoon. The heat in the valleys during the week was intense, and June 16 a man named Campbell, working on a thresher near Visalia, Tulare County, was killed by sunstroke. This was the first case of sunstroke known to have occurred in the San Joaquin Valley.

The Republican national convention in Cincinnati nominated R. B. Hayes, governor of Ohio, for president and William A. Wheeler of New York for vice-president. The nominations were not popular in California, for James G. Blaine was the popular idol here. However, a big ratification meeting was held in San Francisco and a score of spellbinders attempted to infuse enthusiasm.

GRASSHOPPERS APPEAR.

The Democratic national convention in Saint Louis nominated S. J. Tilden, governor of New York, for president and Thomas H. Hendricks of Indiana for vice-president. The nominations were popular in this state, and the ratification gathering in San Francisco gave the Democratic warhorses the opportunity of their political lives to enthuse the thousands in attendance.

Thus was opened this month one of the hardest fought presidential contests in the history of the nation, and one in which the result was the closest.

The smallpox epidemic assumed startling proportions in San Francisco this month. Over 150 cases developed, and in a number of instances whole families were stricken. An effort to thoroughly inspect the Chinese section of the city resulted in finding a number of cases concealed, but not as many as expected.

Eighteen lepers were unearthed in the underground rooms of Chinatown. During the last three days of the month fourteen new cases were reported. Some were also reported from interior towns, showing the epidemic was spreading over the state.

Grasshoppers made their appearance in myriads in parts of Los Angeles County and were destroying vineyards and the green leaves of trees.

In the markets, wheat was selling at $1.72, barley at $1.05 and spuds at 60c a cental.

A spring meeting of the Sacramento Jockey Club was held during the first week of June and there was some excellent racing. The meet ended with a big row over the result of a pacing race that was claimed to have been a pre-arranged affair.

Catherine Harrison, 68 years old, carrying her grandchild in her arms across the street in San Francisco, was struck, run over and killed by a streetcar June 20.

BIG FIRES.

A 12-year-old lad named Hodge was bitte by a rattlesnake near Santa Cruz June 11. H was walking barefooted and stepped upon it The wound was washed with ammonia, copiou draughts of whiskey were given the boy and hi life was saved.

William Doyle, a 14-year-old lad, was throw from his pony in San Francisco June 5 and ha his neck broken.

The stage running between Kingsburg an Grangeville, Fresno County, June 17 was over turned into an irrigating canal. Nally, th driver, and Miss Mary Potter were caught be neath it and drowned.

A three-story building at Brannan and Fift streets, San Francisco, was blown down by high wind June 17 and buried Mrs. Mar O'Grady and her four children in the ruins She was taken out dead and all the childre were seriously injured.

May 21 A. Siemans, staying at Harbin Spring for his health, wandered away and was no found until June 18. He was discovered in th woods near Calistoga, Napa County, where h perished from exhaustion and starvation.

J. R. Tansy, a pioneer Methodist minister wel known all over the state, died at Los Angele June 29, aged 55 years.

A fire in Sacramento June 3 burned the car riage factory of Bernard & Co. at Twelfth an L streets, causing a $30,000 loss.

A boy making roman candles in the firework factory of Church & Co., San Francisco, June 2 used an iron ramrod instead of a wooden on and caused an explosion that set fire to and de stroyed the factory.

The Bay Sugar Refinery in San Francisco, o cupying a seven-story building at the corner o Battery and Union streets, was destroyed by fir June 20. It burned for nearly two days an caused a $400,000 loss.

G. W. Henley had a dispute in May over lan ownership in Sonoma County and shot and kille James Roland. June 10 a vigilance committe of about 200 men appeared at the Santa Ros jail, entered it at 8 p. m., seized Henley, too him out and hung him to a tree on the outskirt of the town.

STAGE ROBBERS BUSY.

Harry Hyde and James M. Sloan, two citizen of Sonora, Tuolumne County, fought a duel o Washington street in that town. They ex changed eighteen shots at each other, resultin in Sloan being fatally wounded.

Francis Miles and Michael Conlin had an al tercation in a blacksmith shop in San Francisc June 13 during which Conlin got hold of a ham mer and, hitting Miles upon the head, kille him.

Stage robbers had a busy week at the end o the month. June 20 the La Porte, Plumas Coun try, stage was stopped by two highwaymen nea Oroville, Butte County, and the express-box taken.

The 21st they attempted to rob the Downie ville, Sierra County, stage near Stanfield Hill but the express messenger, George Hackett opened fire and caused them to flee. He after wards went in pursuit of them and captured their camp. In their effects he found a sack of gold-dust worth $640 and a purse containing $400 in coin which they had obtained from the previous holdup. A few days later Hackett ar rested a notorious character called "Liverpool" as one of the highwaymen.

June 27 the La Porte stage was again held up, about twenty-five miles east of Oroville, by two masked men who took the express-box which this time contained but $25.

June 27 the Coast Line stage was stopped near Soledad, Monterey County, by a number o highwaymen who took the express-box and also robbed the passengers.

June 18, on Trinity Mountain, Siskiyou Coun ty, the sheriff had an encounter with two hold upmen who were robbing stores and stages in that section. A dozen shots were exchanged resulting in one of the outlaws being killed; the other, who escaped wounded, was captured a few days later.

TYPICALLY WESTERN SHOW HOUSE OPENS

A NEW AND EXTRAORDINARY THEater, a photoplay that New York has taken to its heart, an orchestra led by an unrivaled conductor, a startling prologue, an audience made up of the finest representatives of the business, social and film world,—and behold a debut!

Not the debut of a young and beautiful girl, but of a young and beautiful motion-picture home,—built and dedicated to the days when motion pictures were unknown, when men and women were laying the foundation for the fame that would one day include "Screenland" as part of its glory.

Fred Miller, managing director, and J. Harvey McCarthy, builder, may well wear smiles that fail to fade. They have achieved something no one else ever has—the Carthay Circle Theatre, which opened May 18.

And it was an opening that will live in history. As the crowds arrived at the theatre they saw the most unusual exterior. Like a white castle, the theatre stands in the midst of gay flower gardens. From the great high tower that crowns it, thousands of lights flash and send their rays for miles around like a "beacon light to amusement seekers."

Inside the architecture, coloring, lights combine to make a fairyland that even the writer of "Arabian Nights" would feel had surpassed any of his descriptions of what a fairyland should really be. Dwight Gibbs, architect, Inor Peterson, decorator, and Claude Seamon, illuminating expert, are responsible for this enchanting effect.

Cecil B. De Mille's "The Volga Boatman" was screened amidst a fanfare of applause and orally expressed enthusiasm that unmistakably stamps the production a magnificent success and Cecil De Mille's greatest creation to date.

Staged in a setting of inspiring music, the story of "The Volga Boatman" was told in a scintillating series of situations that held rapt attention from the clever foreword to the romantic finale. The automatic smoothness of the action; the lucid delineation of the plot; the perfect characterizations of the dramatis personae; and the splendid acting of every member of the cast, created an atmosphere of such genuine reality that hardly an episode passed without a rousing round of spontaneous applause. The principal players are Elinor Fair, William Boyd, Victor Varconi, Julia Faye, Theodore Kosloff.

Carli Elinor, who has for many years been the favorite director among music lovers of Los Angeles, conducts the concert orchestra. He has arranged a brilliant score for "The Volga Boatman," with the song of the same name as the basic theme.

Jack Laughlin's prologue has an all-Russian cast of fifty people, including Alexandria Akimoff of the royal opera house of Petrograd, the Berkoffs, whilrwind dancers, and Kosloff's dancers. The setting and finale for this prologue are a revelation to even those who have seen the most spectacular presentations in the country.

The Carthay Circle Theatre was conceived and constructed by J. Harvey McCarthy, a member of Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W., as a memorial to the Pioneers of California. Most striking for the beholder will be the glimpses of pioneer history in a series of eleven large canvases, done by Frank Tenney Johnson and Alson Clark, painters of Western subjects.

One, on the curtain, shows the Donner party, which endured endless vicissitudes during their history-making journey across the Sierras into California in 1846. Others are: "Raising of the American Flag at Monterey by Commodore Sloat;" the "Arrival of the Steamer 'Oregon' at San Francisco, Bringing News of the Admission of California to the Union;" "Miners of '49 Prospecting for Gold;" "Immigrant Train Crossing the Sierras;" the "First California Theatre, Built in Sacramento;" "the Passing of the Pony Express."

"REPOSE" TO BE DISPOSED OF.

Los Angeles Parlor No. 45 N.S.G.W. will elect a new corps of officers June 3, and the regular monthly initiation is billed for June 10. A surprise entertainment feature is in store for those who attend the June 24 meeting; better be one of those present. Officers of the Parlor went out to Glendale May 26 and initiated a class of candidates for Glendale Parlor No. 264.

Arrangements have been completed for disposing of the oil painting, "Repose," presented Los Angeles by Charles C. Lloyd. The proceeds are to be used to further the interests of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West. "Charley" deserves, and has, the thanks of the members for his generosity. The Parlor wishes to express its appreciation of the loyal support given Grand Trustee John T. Newell at the Santa Rosa Grand Parlor.

Los Angeles' new officers will take their stations the first part of July. The fiscal year ends June 30. Secretary Richard W. Fryer is most anxious that all dues be paid to that date (June 30) or beyond, so that a good report for the Parlor may be sent the Grand Parlor.

HURRAH—MAJORITY VOTES!

For the first time in many years, a majority of the citizens of Los Angeles City participated in a municipal election—April 30. Sixty per cent of the 337,448 registered voters—202,676 citizens—cast their ballots. Result:

Sunday and all-night dancing in the Venice district of the city was authorized. The policemen's and firemen's salaries were increased. Certain lands at the harbor were granted the Federal Government. The proposal to form a Los Angeles-Long Beach harbor district was approved, as was also the proposed twenty-eight story city hall in the civic center. Bonds of $1,900,000 for viaducts were authorized.

The majority expressed the opinion that Los Angeles should have a union railway passenger terminal, and expressed their choice of location —the "Plaza site." The Wilshire zoning proposals received the only adverse vote.

REWARD COMPETENCY.

William I. Traeger, sheriff of Los Angeles County and Past Grand President N.S.G.W., has formally announced his candidacy for re-election. He bases his plea for favorable consideration at the hands of the voters on the accomplishments of the sheriff's office since he has been in charge, March 9, 1921. In that time the personnel of the office has increased from 135 to 460.

From his earliest days as a peace officer, Sheriff Traeger has made a study of police work from the angle of crime prevention as the most effective means of combatting the criminal, a principle he has put to practice in his organization.

"Bill," having "made good" as sheriff of Los Angeles County, should be re-elected at the August 31 primary—C.M.H.

TO FEAST WAR BOYS.

Los Angeles Parlor No. 124 N.D.G.W. initiated five candidates May 5. Among the numerous visitors were President Charlotte K. Bennett of Rudecinda Parlor (San Pedro) and President Bertha Hitt of Long Beach Parlor. May 26 a bazaar was featured. Grace T. Haven was chairman of the arrangements committee and was assisted by the following, in charge of the various booths: Edith Douglas, H. Adele White, Ruth Ruiz, Jennie Raymond, Flora Holy. Dancing was provided. June 2 the Parlor will elect officers for the July-December term.

June 3, Los Angeles, assisted by Los Angeles, Ramona, Hollywood and Vaquero Parlors of Native Sons, will give a "Hut" dinner to one hundred disabled war veterans at 1035 South Figueroa street. Six of the younger members of 124, attired in Spanish costumes—for it will be a Spanish "feed"—will serve as waitresses, and entertainment will be provided. H. Adele White is chairman of the committee in charge and will be assisted by Grace Norton and others. At the Sacramento Grand Parlor, D.D.G.P. Marvel Thomas, a member of Los Angeles, will be a candidate for Grand Trustee, instead of for Grand Outside Sentinel as originally planned.

ANNIVERSARY TO BE OBSERVED.

Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W. is arranging to observe its thirty-ninth institution anniversary with a "stag" barbecue. The affair will be held at Sepulveda Park, White's Point, just out of San Pedro, June 27. All members of the Order will be welcome.

June 4 election of officers will take place. The good of the order committee is arranging ... together ... for June 25 and promises an addition to a previous ... something to ... our palate." May 26 the officers of Ramona went to Santa Ana, Orange County, and instructed a class of candidates for the "baby" Parlor, Santa Ana 265.

"PAGEANT OF LIBERTY."

As Los Angeles official celebration of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the independence of the United States a "Pageant of Liberty" is to be staged July 5 at the Coliseum. Frank Lloyd is the chief director. All civic and fraternal organizations, including the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, are co-operating.

As outlined, the pageant promises to be the most colorful and impressive celebration of the Fourth of July ever witnessed in the West. High lights in the history of the United States will be outlined. The spectacle will be presented largely by employing floats. There will be veritable armies of men and horses, with such figures in the national history as Washington, Grant, Lee and Abraham Lincoln present.

DANCE, JUNE 21.

The annual outing of Hollywood Parlor No. 196 N.S.G.W. at Glen Oaks May 23 was a decided success, about 300 attending. A Spanish barbecue was served, and there was dancing. In the baseball game the team of Los Angeles Parlor was victorious over that of Hollywood. Everyone voted for another picnic at an early date. Much credit is due the committee of arrangements for the excellent manner in which the affair was handled.

June 21, Hollywood will entertain with a dance at El Patio ballroom. It will be in the nature of a celebration of the change of the Parlor's name from Corona to Hollywood. All Los Angeles County Natives will be invited, and a big response is anticipated. Arrangements are in the hands of this committee: Henry G. Bodkin (chairman), Floyd G. Riley, Albert G. Boschke, Floyd Buxton, William R. Topham. June 7 officers will be nominated, to be followed by a "feed," and on the 14th will come the election. During May, Hollywood initiated several candidates.

PERSONAL MENTION.

James J. Flood (Ramona N.S.) is visiting in Chicago, Illinois.

Joseph R. Seamans (Ramona N.S.) has returned from Texas State.

Miss Emilie Boyer and William Kearns (Ramona N.S.) were wedded May 20.

Isidore B. Dockweiler (Ramona N.S.) was a visitor last month to Santa Cruz City.

John L. Wood (Ramona N.S.) and wife departed last month for an extended tour of Europe.

Richard L. Collins (McCloud N.S.), chairman State Board of Equalization, was among last month's visitors.

William S. Kingsbury (Los Angeles N.S.), surveyor-general of California, was a visitor last month. "Bill" is a candidate for re-election.

Miss Alice Calhoun and Mendel B. Silberberg (Los Angeles N.S.) were wedded May 5 and departed the following day on a wedding tour which will include the Eastern states and Europe.

Among the local Native Son visitors to Santa Rosa last month during the Grand Parlor were: Andrew Stodel, Herbert Leuschner and Earl Lemoine (Los Angeles), Judge Robert M. Clarke, Charles Gassagne and William T. Calderwood (Ramona), Gabriel Ruiz (Vaquero).

Miss Grace S. Stoermer (Past Grand President N.D.) was in Fresno April 24 attending a meeting of the board of directors of the California State Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs. She is chairman of the home economics department of the federation.

SACRAMENTO OPENS OFFICES.

The Sacramento Chamber of Commerce has opened offices in the Mercantile Arcade Building, with Fred Shaffer in charge. The purpose is to advance the interests of Sacramento and twenty-one affiliated northern counties.

"We know that 80 percent of the traffic that enters California comes to Los Angeles," says Shaffer, "and our object is to interest some of those people, as well as Los Angeles capital, in the possibilities of the northern part of the state."

CALIFORNIA CITIES' POPULATION.

The Census Bureau of the Federal Department of Commerce made public May 24 estimates of population for certain cities. The following figures give the 1920 census figures and the estimated population as of July 1 this year of California cities that were listed:

| | 1920. | 1926. |
|---|---|---|
| San Francisco | 506,676 | 567,000 |
| Oakland | 216,261 | 261,000 |
| San Diego | 74,683 | 110,000 |
| Long Beach | 55,593 | 97,700 |
| Sacramento | 65,908 | 73,400 |
| Berkeley | 57,295 | 67,800 |
| Fresno | 45,086 | 60,200 |
| Pasadena | 45,354 | 58,400 |
| Stockton | 40,296 | 48,500 |
| San Jose | 39,642 | 44,200 |

No estimate was made for Los Angeles; 1920 population, 576,673.

GRIZZLY GROWLS

And those who voted against the court, are being re-nominated. Which is a cheering indication that The People are not being influenced by the foreign and at-home League of Nations propagandists, but are doing their own thinking and voting accordingly. More power to the self-thinking voter!

Oregon, one of the Western states already invaded by the Japs, was the latest battleground and Senator Stanfield, a "World-Courter," went down to defeat. The citizens of Oregon know that, if ever this country becomes in any way affiliated with the League of Nations, Japan's "racial equality" proposal will become effective. And that means that the Pacific Coast states will no longer be a fit abiding-place for the White man.

Voters of California will, in August, nominate a United States senator. If they are interested in the welfare of California, if they desire that this state shall remain a White man's paradise, they will use diligence in seeing that no pro-"World-Courter" is nominated, and thus remove the possibility of such an one representing the state in the United States Senate. To nominate for and send to the Senate a pro-"World-Courter" would indicate that California is for the League of Nations and "racial equality," which it decidedly is not.

Mother's Day Observed.

Grass Valley—Mother's Day was jointly observed by Quartz 58 and Manzanita 29, and there was a very large attendance. Each member of the Parlors was privileged to bring his or her mother and the mothers, in turn, were entitled to invite a guest. Each mother was presented with an honorary carnation.

Under the supervision of Mrs. Hulda Gilbert, an entertaining and varied program was presented: Greetings, Past Grand President Alison F. Watt; soprano solo, Miss Florence Bennallack; duet, Miss Bertha Fuller, F. Foster Miles; reading, Miss Helen Lobecker; piano solo, Miss Muriel Hocking; contralto solo, Mrs. T. A. Leary; duet, Chester and Sarah Prisk; soprano solo, Mrs. A. W. Carlson; male quartet, White, W. George, R. George, Carthew; remarks, M. J. Brock.

Following the program, refreshments were served in the banquet-room, decorated with a profusion of flowers. Past Grand President Watt presided here as toastmistress, and there were responses by Ralph Vincent, Ray George, Loyle Freeman, Lester Whitburn, Albert Thomasson, Ray Hall, Herman Fuller, James Oliver, Fred Coombs, Vera Hansen, Alyne McGagin, Annie Conlin.

Accepts Daughters' Invitation.

San Rafael—Mount Tamalpais 64 has accepted an invitation to attend a dinner and dance to be given some time in June by Marinita 198 N.D.G.W., at which time the latter Parlor will celebrate its fourteenth institution anniversary.

In July, Mount Tamalpais will fittingly observe the forty-first anniversary of its institution.

Membership Standing Largest Parlors.

The consolidation of Williams 164 with Colusa 69 was tentatively sanctioned, under certain specified conditions

Grand Secretary Regan reported that the Coloma, El Dorado County, "home" property had been deeded back to Placerville 9 and Georgetown 91.

Sanction was given the change of the name of Corona 196 to Hollywood 196.

Santa Ana 265, being instituted with more than fifty charter members, was voted a credit of $150.

Grand President Cutler was, by motion, unanimously tendered the thanks of the board for the service given the Order during his term of office.

This was the final meeting of the board, which was succeeded by a new board elected at the Santa Rosa Grand Parlor.

Fortieth Anniversary Celebrated.

Calistoga—The celebration of the fortieth institution of Calistoga 86, May 3, was largely attended by members and visitors, among the latter being Grand First Vice-president Hilliard E. Welch, Grand Trustee Charles L. Dodge, Past Grand Presidents Dr. Charles W. Decker, Frank L. Coombs and Bismarck Bruck, and a delegation of twenty-one from Saint Helena 53.

Two candidates were initiated, past presidents of the Parlor exemplifying the ritual. At the ceremonies' conclusion came a banquet, attended by members of Calistoga 145 N.D.G.W., specially invited guests. Charles Butler, the sole surviving charter member of 86, was the toastmaster, and there were responses by Past Grand President Decker, who instituted the Parlor, Grand First Vice-president Welch, Grand Trustee Dodge, Past Grand President Coombs, Nathan Coombs, Past Grand President Bruck, Walter Metzner, Mrs. Charles Adams, the latter extending the Native Daughters' greetings.

Daughters' Anniversary Party Attended.

Sutter Creek—Amador 17 was the guest April 23 of Amapola 80 N.D.G.W. at its thirty-second anniversary party. Following a sumptuous banquet there was a program of musical numbers and recitations, and short addresses were made by Superior Judge C. P. Vicini, Past Grand President Clarence E. Jarvis, D. V. Ramazzoti, Mms. Ball and Vicini, and Miss Georgia Styles. Marigolds, poppies and the Native Daughters' colors were used in the decorations.

HUMAN HISTORY OF THE YOSEMITE

AT THE APRIL 27 MEETING OF THE California Historical Society in San Francisco, Carl P. Russell, park naturalist and curator of the government museum in the Yosemite Valley, spoke on "The Human History of Yosemite Valley," and his address proved to be of more than ordinary interest. His remarks were particularly pertinent at this time, as this present year is the diamond jubilee of the discovery of the valley by White men. The substance of his talk was as follows:

The history of the Yosemite Valley divides itself rather logically into four chapters: the period of discovery; the early period of tourist traffic, which was entirely by horseback; the stagecoach period, and the automobile period. The first two periods only are treated of in the present sketch.

The first knowledge that we have of Yosemite Valley came from an expedition made in 1833 by a group of people known as the Joseph Walker party. Leonard, the clerk of the expedition, supplies us with our information concerning it. This party approached the valley from the east and looked down into it from the height of the towering cliffs. They saw it only from the rim, and did not visit the floor of the canyon. The earliest actual visit was from the region of the mines to the west.

A certain J. D. Savage, whose personal history is of the very fabric of Bret Harte romance, had established a trading-post in the Mariposa hill country somewhat to the westward. This post was raided by a band of hostile Indians, and in consequence a detachment of volunteer military forces known as the Mariposa Battalion set out on a punitive expedition against them. It was this latter organization which, in the truest sense, made the actual discovery of the valley. On the 25th of March 1851 the troopers viewed the great canyon of the Merced from what is now famed as Inspiration Point, and in the evening of the same day they camped at the foot of Bridal Veil Fall. Dr. L. H. Bunnell, who was a member of the expedition, was the one who suggested giving to the natural wonder the name of the tribe which they had set out to exterminate. This force of mounted men found almost no trace of Indians and left on the third day. The marauding band was found later, in May of the same year, at Tenaya Lake. This time the Indians were captured and removed.

However, a third expedition was necessary before the tribe was finally reduced to submission. In 1852 two of a party of prospectors were killed by the still obstreperous Yosemites. A force sent out to punish them found no savages, but did some exploring. The present Leevining Canyon was at a later time named for Leroy Vining, one of the prospectors of this period. None of these parties succeeded in eliminating the Yosemite Indians, and after a while their chief, Tenaya, becoming gradually emboldened, returned to the valley. Some of his young braves decided to steal horses from the territory of the Mono Indians. They proceeded by stealth, but were surprised by the Monos and all but about five or six, who escaped, were stoned to death.

In 1855 J. M. Hutchings visited the valley with the first tourist party. Thomas Ayers, the artist, was a member of this party. Galen Clark also visited the valley in 1855. Clark owned a ranch in the vicinity, which subsequently became Clark's Station, the present Wawona. In 1858 the "Hutchings House," the oldest hotel in the valley, was built. It still stands and is known as "Cedar Cottage." In the year 1864 Hutchings returned to stay and built a sawmill, and made many improvements on his property.

In the year 1864 Senator Conness of California, for whom the mountain of that name is called, prevailed upon the United States Government to pass legislation which set aside the Yosemite from future encroachments.

Other hotels followed the earliest ventures. In 1869 G. F. Leidig, who had been ejected at the point of a gun from proprietorship of what was known as the "Lower Hotel," started "Leidig's Hotel." J. C. Smith's "Cosmopolitan Hotel," which was opened in 1870 and is still standing, won high praise from contemporary writers for its bar and baths.

The year 1871 brought John Conway, the pioneer trail-builder. Previous to this time travelers had been forced to use such trails as the Indians had made, or scramble through brush and over rocks. But Conway changed all this; by 1872 he had finished the four-mile trail to Glacier Point, and in 1873 completed the one to Eagle Peak. A little later came the great highways to the valley; the Coulterville and Big Oak Flat roads in 1874, and the Wawona road in 1875. The newest addition to this series of approaches to Yosemite is the watergrade road, which is to be opened this year of 1926.

Russell's address was illustrated by a most interesting series of lantern slides from the collection of the Yosemite museum. This valuable collection is the result of generous donations by private contributors and constitutes an important part of the Federal Government exhibit.

COUNTY GATHERINGS ARE BIG DRAWING CARDS.

OAKLAND—THE FOURTEEN PARLORS of Alameda County — Angelita 32 (Livermore), Piedmont 87 (Oakland), Aloha 106 (Oakland), Hayward 122, Berkeley 150, Bear Flag 151 (Berkeley), Encinal 156 (Alameda), Brooklyn 157 (Oakland), Argonaut 166 (Oakland), Bahia Vista 167 (Oakland), Fruitvale 177 (Oakland), Laura Loma 182 (Niles), Bay Side 204 (Oakland), El Cereso 207 (San Leandro)—had their first district meeting April 26. Grand President Sue J. Irwin and grand officers from all parts of the state were in attendance. Many counties were represented, the attendance being over 500.

With much dignity, the ritual was exemplified by the district deputies of Alameda County and the presidents and marshals of the several Parlors, those participating being: Senior past president, Grand Trustee Sallie Rutherford-Thaler; junior past president, Anna Aebi; past president, May Adameria; president, Gladys Clancy Farley; first vice-president, Corinne Rose; second vice-president, Maud Sutton; third vice-president, Florence McGrath; marshal, Augusta Huxsol; recording secretary, Lelia Baker; financial secretary, May Barthold; treasurer, Anna Klein; trustees, Rosaline Correia, Emma Johnson, Evelyn Cooney; inside sentinel, Louise Delucci; outside sentinel, Elizabeth Billings; assistant marshals, Jennie Gannon, Helen Ruter, Madeline Wilson. A large class of candidates were initiated, Aloha and Fruitvale presenting the largest numbers. The balloting march was exemplified by the officers of the Parlors of Alameda County.

Grand President Irwin addressed the meeting in her usual charming manner, and her words were an inspiration and incentive to make the Order grow bigger and better. All felt the efforts expended in making the occasion the memorable one that it was had been well repaid.

Gertrude Morrison, supervising district deputy of Alameda County, on behalf of the Parlors presented Miss Irwin with a floor-lamp, as a token of the esteem in which she is held. In turn, Mrs. Morrison was the recipient of hand-painted china at the hands of D.D.G.P. Augusta Huxsol. In the course of a buffet supper, a program was rendered by Mrs. Gladys Williams, Miss Dorothy Dimler, Miss Lena Gambo, Miss Ruth Gleason, Mrs. Augusta Huxsol, Mrs. Edith Stuer, Miss Florence Monroe.

Grand President Irwin and other grand officers expressed appreciation and gratitude for the invitation to be guests of the evening and declared that much had been accomplished. All in attendance agreed the evening well spent and that the Alameda County district meeting was a profitable one.

SANTA CLARA COUNTY.

San Jose—One of the grandest sights ever witnessed in local Native Daughter circles was that of April 22, when the Santa Clara County Parlors—San Jose 81, Vendome 100 (San Jose), El Monte 205 (Mountain View), Palo Alto 229—assembled for a district meeting under the leadership of Past Grand President Mamie Pierce-Carmichael, supervising district deputy grand president, Clara Briggs for Mountain View, Mabel Sontheimer for San Jose and Eldora McCarty for Palo Alto. Previous to the meeting, attended by 450, supper was served. The tables were decorated with stand-baskets of roses, and the favors were hand-made rose-cups, done by the members under the supervision of Mrs. I. L. Koppel.

Grand President Sue J. Irwin, Grand Trustee Sallie Thaler, Past Grand President Addie L. Mosher, D.D.G.P. Josie Barboni, Supervising Deputy Mae Himes-Noonan were among the visitors. Thirty-eight candidates were initiated. Preceding the initiatory ceremonies Mrs. Boardman (San Jose 81) sang "Little Gray Home in the West," and during the ritual rendition Miss Edith Johnson (San Jose 81) rendered "I Love You, California," for the state, Mrs. Gertrude Mathers (Vendome 100), "I'll Remember, Too," for the Pioneer Mother and Father, Mrs. Clara Gairaud (Vendome 100), "The Stars and Stripes Forever," for patriotism. Miss Tillie Brohaska (Vendome 100) was the organist and accompanist of the evening. A silver flowerbasket, filled with choice roses, was presented Grand President Irwin, and presentations were also made to Grand Trustee Thaler, Past Grand Presidents Mosher and Carmichael, Mms. Sontheimer, Briggs, McCarty. Following the meeting a "stunt" program was greatly enjoyed.

Surprise Shower for Bride.

Oroville—The celebration of the fifteenth institution anniversary of Gold of Ophir 190 May 5 was largely attended. Past presidents, with Mrs. Emma Logan presiding, filled the several stations. A basket of beautiful flowers was presented Mrs. Logan by Mrs. Elice La Voy, acting marshal. Mrs. Alta Baldwin was chairman of the committee of arrangements for the affair, which concluded with a banquet.

Mrs. Marie Amaral-Picanco, a recent Gold of Ophir bride, was tendered a surprise shower May 4 at the home of Mrs. Florence Boyle, which was attractively decorated for the occasion. Mrs. Picanco was the recipient of many beautiful gifts. Cards were played and refreshments were served.

History Contest Prize Awarded.

Alturas—The annual Modoc County grammar-school athletic meet and the California history oratorical contest were held here April 24. The prize in the history contest—a five-dollar gold-piece coined in California—was awarded by Alturas 159 to Miss Vayle Cook of the State Line school at New Pine Creek, Oregon State. The Parlor has offered a similar prize for next year's contest.

At the Sacramento Grand Parlor, Alturas will present Mrs. Irma Laird for Grand Organist. At previous sessions she has delighted the attendants with the sweet strains of her music and also with the charm of her personality.

Joint Socials Beneficial.

San Rafael—Marinita 198 and Mount Tamalpais 64 N.S.G.W. are now enjoying joint socials after their meetings, which are held on the same nights. These have not only been great successes but are proving beneficial. May 24 the Parlors featured an indoor basket picnic, and another good time was had.

Friendship Parties Inaugurated.

Daly City—The first of a series of whist parties, to promote friendship among its members and friends, was given May 5 by El Carmelo 181. Arrangements were perfected by a committee composed of President Margaret McDonald and the officers of the Parlor. Mother's Day was observed May 19, Past President Emma Schwarz being in charge of the program. Large numbers of the Parlor's members attended the big doings in San Francisco and Oakland.

As the guests of Grand Trustee Josephine Johnson and Mrs. Ann Amelia Rose, several members of the Parlor's history club attended a recent luncheon of the California Historical Society in San Francisco, when Carl P. Russell spoke on "The Human Interest of Yosemite." The May meeting of the club was held at the home of Mrs. Carl Schwarz.

Past Presidents Entertain.

Pittsburg—Past presidents of Stirling 146 entertained May 12 at a most enjoyable party. Two candidates were initiated. The past presidents were attired in Spanish costumes. Mrs. Miriam McDermott had charge of the program, which included: Spanish dance, Estella Enea, Frances Lucido, Sofia Billeci; reading, Mrs. Ada Errickson; duet, Miss Theresa Gateo, Marie An-

Costume Party Creates Merriment.

Hollister—The costume party of Copa de Oro 105 May 10 was the occasion of much merriment, and the committee in charge deserves great credit for the originality of the prizes, games and decorations. Prizes, suitable to the spirit of the occasion, were awarded to Myrtle Palmtag and Clara L. Black as the "freakiest freaks." "Freaky" games were enjoyed and, at the close, a "weenie" feed, served in appropriate style, was indulged in. The "floral decorations" were the subject of much amusing comment.

The Parlor adopted a resolution heartily endorsing the movement sponsored by San Juan Bautista 179 for the establishment of a national monument, in the form of a national museum, in the old adobe headquarters of General Castro in San Juan, San Benito County

Mothers Guests.

Menlo Park—Menlo 211 and Menlo 185 N.S.G.W. observed Mother's Day by having the mothers of their members as guests. The hall was decorated with red, white, blue and greens and the tables with gold candlesticks and candles. At a specially decorated table in the center of the room sat the mothers. Grace Loverich delivered the address of welcome, George Walsh spoke on "Mother's Day," and a program was presented. During the evening a huge cake, decorated in red, white and blue, was brought in and lighted. Each mother was given a corsage bouquet of red sweetpeas and fern. Dancing concluded the evening.

April 22, Menlo 211 initiated eleven candidates, bringing its membership to 52. April 29 its members were guests of Menlo 185 at a ravioli supper, the occasion being a visit of Judge Fletcher A. Cutler, Grand President N.S.G.W., to the latter Parlor. There were speeches and songs and the occasion was a happy one.

Large Class Initiated.

Taft—Several members and prospective members of Miocene 228 gathered about the banquet board April 24 to honor Grand President Sue J. Irwin, who was present on her official visit. Accompanying her were D.D.G.P. Josephine Barboni of Visalia and Mrs. Eloise Williams of Berkeley. The tables were beautifully decorated, and local talent furnished a program.

At the meeting-hall a large class of candidates were initiated, and presentations were made to Grand President Irwin and D.D.G.P. Barboni. Miss Irwin delivered an interesting address. Sunday the visitors were entertained by President Evelyne Towne and were shown about the "littlest big city on earth," Taft.

Grand President Visits.

Pescadero—Grand President Sue J. Irwin, accompanied by Grand Trustee Sallie Thaler, officially visited Ano Nuevo 180 and Vista del Mar 155 (Halfmoon Bay) at a joint meeting May 7. The ritual was exemplified by Ano Nuevo's officers, with Margaret M. Dias presiding. Orange and blue crepe paper and spring flowers made up the decorations. Supper preceded the meeting. Miss Irwin was the recipient of gifts from the Parlors.

Old-time Styles Brought Forth.

San Jose—Vendome 100's entertainment committee staged an old-time fashion show May 13. Miss Tillie Brohaska was the announcer, and as each model entered the hall she was greeted with ringing cheers. Old-time finery, beautiful as to texture but to the minds of today extremely ridiculous as to style, brought forth many a laugh. Old-time letters were read by Mrs. Alice Kady and old-time music was heard. Refreshments appropriate to the occasion were served. Mrs. Susie Bickford entertained the sewing club of the Parlor at her home May 18.

The entire program from KTAB May 24 was furnished by Native Daughters and Sons; Harry G. Williams, Past Grand President N.S.G.W., delivered a short address; the program was given to honor the heroic men of the days of gold and their descendants. Vendome and the other San Jose Parlors of Native Sons and Daughters were represented in the Fiesta de las Rosas parade by a novel float.

Many Visitors.

Chico—Annie K. Bidwell 168 had as guests April 22 Grand Marshal Dr. Louise C. Heilbron, Grand Trustee Ether Sullivan, Past Grand Presidents Carrie Roesch-Durham and Ema Gett, and forty-two members of Gold of Ophir 190 (Oroville). Two candidates were initiated, an attractive program was presented, and a banquet was served at attractively decorated tables.

Committees for the affair were: Banquet—Mms. Anna Skelly, Anna Stackstill, Josie Wannop, Sophia Pendergast, Margaret Hedspath and Miss Lois Coleman. Reception—Mms. Cora Hintz, Frank Waterland, Isabel Goodspeed, Margaret Warren and Miss Eleanor Stilson.

Mothers' Night.

Oakland—Piedmont 87 honored the mothers of the members at the annual "Mothers' Night", May 13, when thirty mothers were guests. A delightful program had been arranged, which was thoroughly enjoyed by all, particularly the number presented by Past Grand President Addie L. Mosher, entitled, "Mothers' Sunset." A whist game was then indulged in, after which all adjourned to the banquet-hall to partake of the delicious supper prepared by the chairman of the evening, Edna Healey, and her splendid committee. Three years ago the custom of annually observing "Mothers' Night" was launched, and it is one of the many happy evenings which all the members greatly anticipate.

IDA ELLEN BECKLEY.

...the officers and members of Vesta Parlor No. 216 N.D.G.W. ... extend our sincere sympathy in the loss of our sister member, Ida Ellen Beckley. Sister Beckley passed away at her home in Oakland, May 1, 1926, after a short illness, surrounded by her family and friends, who were with her to the last. The following resolutions were read and adopted.

Whereas, It has pleased God in His divine wisdom, to remove from our midst our respected sister, Ida Ellen Beckley.

Resolved, That while bowing in humble submission to our Heavenly Father, we do not the less mourn for our sister who has been taken from us; resolved that Vesta Parlor No. 216 N.D.G.W. ... extends to the bereaved its most sincere and heartfelt sympathy, and be it further resolved, that the charter of this Parlor be draped in mourning for a period of thirty days; that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the husband of our departed sister, and that a copy be sent to the Grizzly Bear for publication, and that they be spread in full upon the minutes of this Parlor.

MARIE C. ANDERSON,
JOSEPHINE B. HARLOW,
ETHEL M. MILLER,
Committee.

Courtland, May 4, 1926

MARY STAFFORD MURRAY.

To Bonita Parlor No. 10 Native Daughters of the Golden West—Dear Sisters: The angel of death has again visited Bonita Parlor No. 10 N.D.G.W. and taken from our midst our much beloved sister and charter member, Mary Stafford Murray. She was ever an enthusiastic and loyal Native Daughter and loved California with a true and tender love, and our Order has lost a faithful member. Therefore, be it

Resolved, That our charter be draped in mourning, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to her bereaved family and that they be published in the "Redwood City Standard" and a copy be sent to The Grizzly Bear Magazine for publication.

"May the California winds blow lightly,
May the California sun shine brightly,
May the California rain fall softly,
Where sleeps our sister dear."

Respectfully submitted in P.D.F.A.,
SOPHIE OFFERMAN,
EMMA MENGEL, LOTTIE HEISE,
MAMIE GLENNAN,
Charter Members.

Redwood City, May 15, 1926.

SADIE BUCKIUS ASHLEY.

Whereas, The Great Sovereign of the Universe has called from our midst Sister Sadie Buckius Ashley, our beloved sister, thus taking from us a loyal member, a true and faithful friend, whose loss is felt by all who knew her.

"Our lives are albums written through
With good or ill, with false or true,
And as the blessed angels turn
The pages of our years
God grant they read the good with smiles
And blot the ill with tears."

Resolved, That the officers and members of Los Angeles Parlor No. 124 N.D.G.W. extend to her bereaved family our sincere sympathy, and be it further resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, and to The Grizzly Bear Magazine for publication, and that a copy be spread upon the minutes of our Parlor.

H. ADELE WHITE,
PEARLE K. DWINELL,
FLORA COLVIN,
Committee.

Los Angeles, May 19, 1926.

JUANITA MARTINEZ.

Whereas, It has been the will of the Supreme Ruler to summon to the Grand Parlor on High our beloved sister, Juanita Martinez. In our journey through the labyrinth of human life, we are constantly reminded that we are pilgrims and wayfarers on the earth, that here we have no abiding city, but that we "Gently pitch our moving tents a day's march nearer home." We have been impressed with the lesson of the uncertainty of human life by the passing of our beloved sister, Juanita Martinez from this world into the mysterious hereafter, whose portal we call death.

"Once again our ranks are broken
By the hand no power can stay,
And we mourn a faithful sister
Who from earth has passed away.

"As we gather at our meetings
Her dear face we'll see no more,
She has crossed the mystic river
And has gained the heavenly shore."

Memory is the only thing that grief can call its own, and we recall the many bright and happy moments, the friendly handclasp and the happiness given our dear sister by her association with us. As Native Daughters, we as thank our Heavenly Father for the privilege of having known her. Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, By Marguerita Parlor No. 198 N.D.G.W., that we extend heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family and in particular to her beloved son, and in testimony thereof that the charter of our Parlor be draped in mourning for a period of thirty days, that a page of our records be dedicated to her memory on which these resolutions be inserted, and that a copy be sent to Arthur Martinez.

LONG BEACH: The Forward-Looking City Where Native Resources Grow With The United Enterprise Of All

SEVEN MILES OF GOLDEN BEACH

A. A. Miller

(SECRETARY, PUBLICITY DEPARTMENT, LONG BEACH CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.)

THE IDEA THAT PLAY IS SOMETHING unsuitable for grown-up men and women has vanished, along with whiskers and steel-ribbed corsets. Tradition tells us that to be young again we must drink of the fountain of youth. Ever since the days of Adam, age has coveted youth. Many years ago Ponce de Leon pursued a fruitless search for the so-called mythical spring, yet the waters of the attainable youth lay all about him in that wilderness. Perhaps tradition is right after all, so why not follow the old dame a bit?

Since she says we must drink of a fountain, there must be water, and where there is water there may be fish, amusement, youthful recreation, water sports, etc. There you are; already back to a youthful recreation the very first thing. Note that word re-creation, because long hours of unbroken sleep and open-air sports of our childhood actually gave us the very capabilities we are now seeking to restore.

Very well then, if we must find youth in outdoor sports, why not swimming, canoeing, golf, and kindred pastimes indulged in by many who continue to grow old, just the same? Such exercise leads us to our goal. A week or two under dame nature's care will provide us with the elements essential to the youth we seek. Life in the open, pure air untainted with smoke, dust or germs, clarifies our blood. Exercise of a new type creates an appetite for wholesome food at regular periods, and a new mental attitude free from irritation and undue excitement insures long hours of deep restful slumber. A new world will be ours.

Every factor that contributes to recreation, such as swimming, horseback riding, motoring, yachting, deep-sea fishing, surf-board riding, golf, etc., is to be had at Long Beach, where seven miles of smooth, white bathing beach will give pleasure and wholesome amusement, and bring contentment to those who seek the fountain of youth.

Few places in the world offer the same number of days of sunshine and the incidental happy outdoor life which is afforded here. It is only natural that men and women should desire to live here. Long Beach will continue to grow and prosper as long as people have a desire to live and enjoy a mild and health-giving climate.

It is here that William Erwin Willmore stood on the crest of the ocean bluff, back in 1880, and gazed out over the blue expanse of the Pacific towards Catalina, little realizing that forty-five years later, on the spot where he stood, a city of 141,762 people would rise, world famous as a watering place and alive with commerce and industry.

Towering apartment buildings, hotels and office structures have broken that once unvarying skyline where a barren wilderness swept down to a crescent-shaped bay of the Pacific Ocean. Stand on these palisades once, and you too will understand what this magnificent site has meant in the transition from a sea-side village to today's metropolis.

The mild climate allows one to bask in sunlight 350 days in the year. (Average temperature: winter 55 degrees, summer 65 degrees). Here you can shed your dark, heavy clothes, and if you choose to walk you can stroll along palm shaded avenues, linger in the parks among the most exotic of blooms, or, if you prefer, you can enjoy the daily band concert under the leadership of Herbert L. Clark, director. This band is composed of fifty of the finest musicians to be had, and concerts are held twice daily, free to the public.

If you prefer to motor, there are the loveliest drives in the world, affording rare glimpses of vale and ocean. For exercise, there is surf bathing and tennis and delightful bridle paths. Yachting is a year-round sport off Long Beach shore. In a climate which makes golf possible twelve months in the year and on fairways cooled by ocean breezes, the golf enthusiast will find the game at its best in Long Beach. Three courses are in use and one more will be completed and open to play within a few months. Two of these courses are situated within the city limits, and within a few minutes ride from the center of the down-town district.

Long Beach's new Recreation Park, covering 400 acres, is under way and at present it has a municipal 18-hole golf course covering ninety acres of ground, with an average of 25,000 to 40,000 players per year, and with a clubhouse where light refreshments can be had at all times and where private parties and dances can be held. This park also has free picnic grounds, and a new field developed for soccer, lacrosse and football which is in constant use by various organizations and clubs. Seven roque courts and one horseshoe field are located in Lincoln Park, in the downtown district, and attract the interest of a large number of tourists the year round.

Long Beach anticipates the vacation months with more than usual enthusiasm. Well she may do so. For is she not, of all beach cities of the Pacific Coast, the Queen? Seven miles of grey-gold, hard-packed sand in a long, thin crescent, with little lapping waves incessantly rolling in give her the natural right to triumph. There is sand to lie flat on, or beach to run and roll on. There is sand for castles and sand for the graves of dreams. There is surf to conquer, or surf to battle, and always the surf to caress. A beach that is a country's playground, it is, unlocked by the key of the sun.

Long Beach enjoys a remarkable geographical location, facing south upon a big and beautiful bay of the Pacific. The city is protected from the storms and wind by the Palos Verdes hills, which lie six miles to the west, and by Catalina Island, twenty miles off the coast. The balmy, equable climate of Long Beach the year around accounts to a large extent for its remarkable growth. To Long Beach, real winter never comes. Many resorts have a boasted climate for half the year, but few of them can even compare with Long Beach, "the Riviera of the West," where the summer climate is delightful, with little wind and fog, and winter is so mild and equable that many have deemed it "too good to be true," until they have spent a winter here to convince themselves.

Salt water bathing, with its curative and invigorating qualities, is a prime attraction in Long Beach for both health and pleasure seekers. Every summer day sees the miles of sun-kissed strand and gently-rolling surf alive with bathers, young and old, their many-colored bathing togs and gay umbrellas making a colorful, unforgetable picture. Rugged men and women enjoy surf bathing at all seasons of the year; many of them enjoy their daily dip every day of the twelve months.

There are three piers in Long Beach, the Silver Spray amusement pier, the Pine Avenue and Belmont piers. These piers are the objective of anglers which set out at daybreak every morning, and trade bait and stories all day long. Fishing boats are run daily to fishing grounds between the mainland and Catalina Island. Sea fishing is one of the principal sports of visitors, and seldom does a boat return without a thoroughly satisfactory catch. Charter parties are a popular thing in the way of amusement. Moonlight boat rides are combined with fishing trips on many occasions. These three piers, built over the ocean for a quarter of a mile or more, bring fishing and boating within easy reach of the people.

Thousands of people gather on these piers and the auditorium verandas and at other vantage points along the beach to watch the glorious sunsets. Neither pen nor brush could give one a proper conception of the wondrous and majestic beauty of these sunsets as you look out at them over the shimmering waters of the Pacific.

Alamitos Bay, a part of Long Beach, is now on its road to permanent fame as a smooth-water bathing and yachting center. The intense interest and activity in the areas surrounding its beautiful landlocked waterways, unpolluted boating and yachting harbor, indicate even now the marvelous future that it has for open-water pleasure and sports.

Off the southern coast of Long Beach is located the wonderful Santa Catalina Island, twenty miles distant, where all sorts of diversions are to be enjoyed. One of the best-known of California's many unique attractions, and one which no visitor to California should miss, is the view of the beautiful submarine gardens seen through glass-bottom boats. Beautiful yachts lie anchored in Avalon Bay; swimming, fishing, riding, hiking—everything in full sway, eagerly awaiting the many visitors that will partake of these pleasures. The wonderful trip to Catalina Island is but one of the many unusually attractive feature near Long Beach.

Long Beach has more than 850 hotels and apartments, all located within walking distance of the beach, shopping district and amusement zone. Hotel accommodations can be had at from $2.50 to $8 per day in first-class, fireproof buildings; apartment rates average from $35 upward. The new Breakers hotel is under construction, and when completed will offer rooms with bath at from $2.50 upward.

Owing to the fact that fine hotels and apartments are within a few steps of the ocean front, it is possible for the tourist to enjoy his vacation without going any distance at all. The Virginia hotel on the ocean front is a million-dollar hostelry, and one of the largest on the Pacific Coast. The Blackstone and Sovereign, two of the leading apartments, are also within a few steps of the ocean promenade, while such apartments as the Cooper Arms, the Cliff Dwellers Inn, the Caldwell and the Barker Arms are within easy walking distance.

Long Beach, "Queen of Beaches," provides wonderful toys and amusements; she has no superior, north, south, east or west; she leads all. Long Beach is "Queen of the Beaches," and together with "King Fun" on the amusement zone, reigns supreme. Here your five senses are developed to a finer degree and you acquire an interest in things never before thought of. Much that you have neglected since childhood comes back to its own, and that which you have worn down through use or abuse slowly but surely revives to an extent that is as amazing as it is gratifying. If these are the attributes of youth, they can be yours in varying charatcer, if you will but make the effort.

PRIZE FOR OLDEST BACHELOR.

San Francisco—The monthly socials of Olympus Parlor No. 189 N.S.G.W. and Fremont Parlor No. 59 N.D.G.W. are well attended. A baby show was a side attraction at the May 19 one, and Elmer Cuadro took first prize. At the June 30 one, a prize will be given the oldest bachelor. Take your time, gents!

Judge Frank J. Murasky, founder of Olympus, is recovering from a capital operation. Past President "Doc" Ernest Roemer, after years of faithful service, has purchased his employers' interests in and is now the sole proprietor of the Boulevard pharmacy, Fulton and Baker streets.

County Clerk Harry I. Mulcrevy of Olympus is being congratulated on the success of the Franciscan festival, given to raise funds for the restoration of Santa Barbara Mission. He was chairman of the festival. The "padre" will disposed of June 7 at a free dance and entertainment in Knights of Columbus Hall.

(MEMBER CHAMBER COMMERCE.)

WILMINGTON'S SCHOOL PROPerty, including lands, buildings and equipment, is valued at more than $1,500,000. Being a part of Los Angeles, the schools of Wilmington are governed by the school board of that city, which is considered to have one of the finest educational systems in the world. Wilmington is justly proud of this phase of its community life, and is able to offer to the children the most modern and up-to-date educational advantages to be found in much larger communities.

The new Phineas Banning high-school, named after the founder of Wilmington, of brick construction and three stories in height, has just been completed. The architecture is of pleasing design and fills a great need in the community. The school has an auditorium capable of seating 1,200 people comfortably, with a large stage that will accommodate 100 individuals if necessary. All of the sciences will be taught, giving the student a liberal education. Playgrounds are provided for physical culture. The shops in a separate building at the rear of the main building have equipment for the teaching of carpentry, drafting, automobile engineering and repair, electrical engineering, printing and many other trades, thus providing ample vocational training opportunities for those students inclined to follow any of these lines of endeavor.

Three new grammar-schools are located in the east, central and west parts of the city, convenient to the homes. The community is very proud of these splendid buildings, which are tasty in design and well arranged for the teaching of smaller children. By name, they are the Wilmington Park, Fries and Gulf grammar-schools. They are each under the management of a very efficient principal, who is producing well-rounded students with satisfaction to the parents. The Wilmington high-school building, situated in the very heart of town, has been converted into a grammar- and vocational-school, with a large enrollment. The total enrollment of the Wilmington schools is 2,600; teachers number 70, and principals 5. A large increase over the above numbers is expected for the fall term of 1926.

The spiritual life of a city is reflected, to a very large degree, in its churches. Every Sabbath more than 2,000 people worship in the various Christian churches in Wilmington, and the various church denominations now functioning are forward-looking and preparing larger church programs to take care of the growing population and to be better able to dispense the Gospel of Christianity. New residents may find the following church organizations to choose from: Presbyterian, a community church, organized in 1870, Lewis Evans pastor; Episcopal, organized in 1883, Thos. P. Swift pastor; Methodist, organized in 1924, Edward Carey pastor; Science, organized as society, Mrs. Martha Bellino first reader; Catholic, Saints Peter and Paul, organized in 1865, J. B. Schiaparelli rector.

NO FAITH

Services in memory of the late Representative John E. Raker of California were held in the National House of Representatives, April 18. The memorial address was delivered by Representative Arthur M. Free of California, affiliated with Observatory Parlor No. 100 N.S.G.W. (San Jose). In conclusion, he said:

The mystery of death is no greater than the mystery of birth. That this is not the end, we must believe. We do not doubt from season to season but that the flowers will bloom again. When the sun sets at night, we have no doubt but that there will be another day. In the brightness of the sunshine of the day, we well know there will come a night. So we must have faith and believe that we are part of a great scheme directed and controlled by a guiding power for the good of us all.

"I have no faith," he said to me,
And there was sadness in his eyes.
"No faith," said I. "That can not be.
Do you believe the sun will rise?

"'Tis dark tonight. No stars are out,
You can not see one gleaming sign,
But can you tell me that you doubt
That stars and moon again will shine?

"You say the clouds have hid their light;
Science explains the darkness so.
And you believe that this is right,
But, tell me, do you really know?

"You have no knowledge that the sun
And moon and stars which disappear
Will keep their courses as they run,
And yet you plan from year to year.

"You see the sun sink down at night,
Nor grieve to see it slip away.
You wait tomorrow's coming light,
And yet you 'have no faith' you say."

THE SAN PEDRO DELEGATION TO the Santa Rosa Native Sons' Grand Parlor are being complimented by all Native Sons and the various civic bodies of San Pedro on bringing the 1927 Grand Parlor of the Native Sons of the Golden West to San Pedro. Chairman James Mee of the delegation was called upon by the local Elks lodge to speak on the convention plans, and he was given a wonderful ovation as he disclosed the plans to entertain the delegates in 1927. All the local service clubs and the San Pedro Chamber of Commerce are anxious to assist Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 in putting over the affair in big style. Organized just a little more than a year ago, Sepulveda has become a factor in local affairs and the people of San Pedro have taken a keen interest in the work of the Order.

Native Sons are concerned with preserving historic sites and documents of the State of California. They will find a treasure of information here. Cabrillo sailed along the Pacific Coast several hundred years ago, dropping anchor off Timm's Point on October 8, 1542. That was the beginning of the White man's activity in this region.

Since then, General John C. Fremont had charge of the barracks in Wilmington, and many noted Pioneers visited and then stayed in the land of promise. Several of the best-known families in San Pedro are descendants of the chivalrous and romantic dons who roamed over the southland in the early part of the nineteenth century.

San Pedro, like Monterey, is one of the historic points in the history of California. But, unlike Monterey, this city has grown to be more than a fishing village. The people here glory in the achievements San Pedro is making by rapid progress in all lines of activity.

Native Sons who may come here in 1927 probably will be more interested in current history than in the early history of this section of the state; both are here to be studied.

San Pedro's progress now and its progress in the future will be written in accurate terms of industry and shipping, and in the less tangible, though well worthwhile, channels of education and culture.

Parlor No. 230 N.D.G.W. May 14. Among the visitors were Past Grand President Grace S. Stoermer and D.D.G.P. Marvel Thomas. Concluding the business meeting, the doors were thrown open for the enjoyment of the special Mother's Day program, which was featured by the appearance of little Miss Coleman as dancer, Mrs. Agnes Mead and Mrs. Marie Wilson as soloists and Jeanette McDonald as reader.

At tables lovely in pastel colors and dotted with dainty butterflies, a delicious supper was served, tiny pioneer figures being used as placecards. To Mrs. Rudecinda F. S. de Dodson, in recognition of her being the oldest mother present, a special favor, in the form of a colonial figure holding a State (Bear) Flag in hand, was given. The good of the order committee responsible for this happy affair included: Mms. Carrie Lenhouse, Carrie Rogers, Carrie Kuhlman, Hazel Boston.

The card party of April 20 was a great success. Prizes were awarded Mms. Ruth Ely, C. Hanson and H. Mason; A. E. Sandstrom, Millard Buchanan, C. Hayman. Refreshments were served and dancing was enjoyed. In charge was this committee: Victoria Adler, Modesta Contos, Alice Parker, Leota Brucker.

Headed by President Charlotte Bennett, the officers of Rudecinda visited Long Beach April 28 and exemplified the ritual. All the visiting officers were presented with corsage bouquets, and refreshments were served. Rudecinda personals: Marie Smith is recovering from a serious operation. Second Vice-president Gertrude Riefe is in Ely, Nevada State, on business. Kathryn Baldwin accompanied her husband, Edgar E. Baldwin, to the Native Sons' Grand Parlor at Santa Rosa.

BEES DOING THEIR BIT.

Millions of bees in Southern California have laid the foundation, through their "industrial" activity, for one of the greatest exports from San Pedro Harbor to foreign countries, says Bert S. Coleman, and enabled the port to take third place among customs districts of the United States, according to Collector of Customs Louis M. Schwaebe, who reports that honey exports from San Pedro during 1925 reached the enormous total of 977,749 pounds, or approximately 500 tons.

The need for producing freight for export, to balance the amount of manufactured products imported, has been declared one of the greatest needs for the southwest to develop shipping activity, outside of oil exports. According to Schwaebe the bees have taken the suggestion with alacrity and are doing their share to build up trade for this section of the country.

Heavy rains in the early part of April improved the outlook for late honey flows in Southern California, the semi-monthly government honey survey states, and would indicate that 1926 exports from this section will be as large, if not larger, than in 1925.

ONE NIGHT IN OCTOBER A STRANGE vessel landed goods mysteriously at San Pedro and the next day a search of Stearns' warehouse there was made, and valuable silks and liquors were found and condemned. Bancroft, in writing of this incident, states that "Stearns wrote violent letters, talked loud and appealed for justice, meanwhile exerting himself, as it seems, to make false invoices and otherwise put his accounts in order." To what extent he succeeded the records fail to show; but in December contraband hides were found by a new search of his warehouse." Stearns, in writing to A. B. Thompson about the accusations against him, said: "The said-to-be contraband goods have been repartido, and myself published as a contrabandisto, all without giving me notice or even saying to me, you are condemned." The extent to which Stearns was engaged in contraband trade cannot be determined, but apparently he did engage to some extent in illegal trade from his warehouse at San Pedro.

The rapid accumulation of wealth by Stearns made him many enemies, among whom was William Day. In the summer of 1835 Stearns sold Day a barrel of wine which the latter claimed had turned to vinegar before receival. Day, eager to make trouble, accused Stearns of having substituted it for the good wine he had bought. Stearns denied the charge, and tried to put Day out of his store. Day then drew a knife and stabbed Stearns three times, in the hand, in the shoulder and in the mouth, severely cutting the tongue. Stearns' life was only saved by the skill of Dr. William Keith. As a result, Day was arrested, put in jail and placed in irons. Botello says that Day was handcuffed to satisfy Stearns, but that it was against the Mexican law, which only allowed leg irons.

Some Mexican citizens of Los Angeles, hearing that the law had been broken in this way, rose up and, headed by Manuel Arzaga, went to the jail, demanded the keys from the corporal of the guard and entered the jail. They removed the handcuffs from Day, but left the leg irons on him. Alcaldes Francisco Alvarado and Domingo Romero, believing the authority of the law to be outraged by this act, arrested the three leaders, Arzaga, Hidalgo and Zelaya, and brought criminal action against them.

Miguel Hidalgo represented Day in Stearns' suit against him, but Felipe Castillo, the fiscal, decided that, in view of the evidence of witnesses to the quarrel, the guilt of Day was proved beyond a doubt, and July 1, 1836, sentenced him to five years in the presidio to labor on public works.

Stearns, from about 1837, when he had become a person of standing among the Californians by his acquisition of wealth and participation in political affairs, loaned money quite extensively to the American ranchers who were engaged in the cattle industry and who made deliveries of hides and kegs of tallow to his establishments. The loans ranged from one hundred dollars to several thousand.

One notable characteristic to be found in Stearns' loaning of money was that he never wished to lend one real to the Mexicans. This was due to the vexations to which General Victoria had subjected him. By this treatment he had acquired a hatred for them, and only desired an opportunity to avenge himself for the offensive treatment which they had so unjustifiably inflicted upon him.

In 1851 the first flour mill was built in Los Angeles. There had long been one at San Gabriel. Stearns was not long in entering this form of business, and in 1855 Jonathan R. Scott and he built a brick flour mill which was known as the Eagle mills. For a number of years it operated under the name of Mullady, Porter & Ayers.

In 1854 Stearns again tried his luck in the ownership of a trading vessel. Alfred Robinson and he projected a plan for supplying Southern California with merchandise direct from the Atlantic Coast. They were satisfied that the tradesmen in that location would be gratified to purchase goods placed at their very doors for the same price they could procure them in San Francisco, and thus evade the enormous freight they were necessarily paying. Robinson proceeded to Boston and there built a ship of eight hundred and fifty tons capacity, which was named "Arcadia," for Dona Arcadia, Stearns' wife.

The ship arrived safely during the month of February 1855, from Boston, making the trip in one hundred and twelve days. It brought a large and valuable cargo. Contrary to the expectations of Stearns and Robinson, they met with jealousy on the part of the traders and a general disinclination to purchase. After Robinson had unloaded the ship and dispatched it to China, he was obliged to freight most of the cargo to San Francisco in order to dispose of it. The "Arcadia" continued to make regular trips between San Pedro and Boston. The merchants in the south soon saw the advantages in trading with the "Arcadia."

Stearns, between 1833 and 1860, was engaged in practically every kind of business, at one time or another. But only a rough sketch of the more important enterprises has been attempted here.

IN CALIFORNIA POLITICS.

Governor Chico, on coming to California, April 30, 1836, boasted of being a friend to the expelled governor, Victoria, who had left so unceremoniously in 1832. Chico had been appointed governor of California in December 1835. He assumed office May 3, 1836. One of the first tasks undertaken by Chico was that of avenging Victoria in supposed wrongs he had suffered at the hands of the people of California. Abel Stearns, who was one of the most active of Victoria's enemies, was among the first marked for destruction.

May 16 Governor Chico issued an order to the alcalde of Los Angeles, so that in the same act of receiving it notice might be given to Abel Stearns that without loss of time he should present himself to the governor of California. No purpose was given for the calling of Stearns. Since Chico's rash proceedings had already become public, Stearns traveled as quickly as possible over the one hundred and thirty leagues which stretched from Los Angeles to Monterey.

Arriving at Monterey, he made his way at once to the governor's chamber, where he found several other persons waiting for an interview.

WILMINGTON

Five thousand books per month are read by Wilmington people, and they are supplied by the Wilmington Library. At the present time the library quarters are located in a store building in the business district until the new library building, to cost more than $40,000, can be erected on the spacious site recently acquired in the center of the residential district. The new building will be of Spanish architecture and very beautiful in design. A prominent architectural firm of Pasadena has the contract for drawing the plans, and the library board is very much gratified with the designs accepted and approved.

The new library, as planned, will have an adult reading-room, children's room, auditorium to seat 300 people, room for historic documents, pictures and articles covering the early history of Wilmington, stack rooms for books, outdoor patio and so on. It is anticipated that the circulation of books in the new library building will be twice the present circulation, due to the new building being accessible to a greater number of homes, and having modern and attractive facilities that encourage a more general use by all ages.

SAN DIEGO A CITY BUILT AROUND A PARK

W. S. Carson

(SAN DIEGO CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.)

THE BUILDING RECORD ESTABlished by San Diego during the first quarter of 1926 strengthens the belief that this year will bring about a continuation of the steadily increasing growth of the city at much the same ce which has been maintained for the last lf-decade. Conservative estimates made as e year opened fixed the valuation of permits pected for 1926 at $20,000,000. At the present rate this figure, which is nearly $2,000,000 ore than the record in 1925, will be surpassed. February and January were not up to the andard set one year ago, but March proved a isy month for builders. As a result, the permits issued during the thirty-one days of that month had a total valuation of over $2,000,000. The total for the quarter exceeded that of the like period in 1925 by over $175,000. As comparatively few building projects of major proportions have been started as yet, the succeeding months promise to further swell the lead.

Purchasers of several downtown sites are busy preparing the plans for new buildings to replace those now occupying these locations and expect to start active construction work as soon as the plans are completed, the grounds cleared and contracts let. Among the structures now under construction, the new building being erected by the Spreckles interests on Broadway will put a new peak into the downtown skyline. It is to be thirteen stories in height. Other buildings on which work is under way include a new home for the Y.W.C.A., a fine theatre and a business block which Los Angeles interests are sponsoring.

Balancing this work in the downtown section are hundreds of residences in all sections of the city, as well as a number of apartment houses to accommodate the steadily increasing number of tourists who come to San Diego to spend a month or more, either summer or winter.

Many of the thousands of tourists who visit San Diego at various seasons of the year remember it as the city built around a park. This idea is gained fom the fact that Balboa Park, containing 1,400 acres, is situated in the heart of the city and only a few blocks from the center of the business district.

Not only is Balboa Park one of the largest in the United States, but is credited with being one of the most atractive. Several elements combine to create this impression. One is the wealth of tropical and seasonal flowers, shrubs and trees which offer an endless variety of floral splendor regardless of the season of the year. Another is the group of great buildings surrounding the central plaza. All of these, except one, are a part of the collection of structures which housed the Panama-California Exposition of 1915-16. Each unit represents a perfect type of Spanish Renaissance architecture and proves the attraction which draws connoisseurs from Europe as well as all parts of this continent.

Enthusiasm for the "dream city" which was aroused during the long run of the exposition was so strong that means were provided for the preservation of a number of the more notable structures. These are even more beautiful today than when they were built, because the years which have elapsed have brought about the maturity of much foliage which was planted just before or during the term of the exposition. The mellowing effect of age has also given added charm to the beauty of the buildings themselves.

Within the park, for recreation, are tennis courts, a golf course, a zoo and a stadium in which the high-school and other athletic teams engage in contests. The zoo, although only four years old, is already recognized as one of the leading institutions of its kind in the United States. Because of the mildness of the climate many animals brought from a tropical clime live outofdoors under surroundings very similar to those they enjoyed in their wild state.

To the south of the central plaza is the world-famous Spreckles outdoor pipe organ on which daily recitals are given. Built primarily for the entertainment of visitors to the exposition, the organ, like other structures, has been kept and today its rolling tones are just as entrancing as they were a half-score years ago when the big instrument was one of the stellar attractions at the "great fair."

With its flowers, foliage, beautiful buildings, the zoo and the play places, tourists spend many hours in Balboa Park and while doing so get the idea well fixed in their minds that San Diego is a city built around a park.

ANOTHER STEP FORWARD IN CABRILLO MONUMENT PROJECT.

President Calvin Coolidge having signed a proclamation May 12 delegating to the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West permission to erect on Point Loma a memorial to the memory of Juan Rodriguez Cabrillo, the first White man to set foot on California soil, San Diego Parlor No. 108 N.S.G.W., which is sponsoring the laudable project, is rejoicing and is preparing to wage a campaign to raise the necessary funds.

As the monument is to be at the entrance to San Diego Harbor, within a Federal Government reservation, the permission just granted had first to be secured. Edgar F. Hastings, Dan E. Schaffer, Rufus Coate, Eugene Daney Jr and Carl Heilbron make up the committee which handled the important detail, and they had the assistance of Congressman Phil D. Swing.

A monument such as should be erected at the most noted of all historic sites in California will cost at least $200,000, it is estimated. The Grand Parlor N.S.G.W. has agreed to give $10,000, "when and if" San Diego Parlor raises $50,000. The undertaking is a big one, but San Diego will "put it over."

NATIVES WANT FIRST CALIFORNIA MISSION RESTORED.

Through the efforts of Deputy Grand President Albert V. Mayrhofer, a large class of candidates were initiated by San Diego Parlor No. 108 N.S.G.W. May 1. Among the visitors were a large delegation from Los Angeles Parlor No. 45 and representatives of Cabrillo Parlor No. 114 (Ventura), Long Beach Parlor No. 239, Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 (San Pedro) and Santa Ana No. 264. A banquet and entertainment followed the ceremonies.

The following day the Parlor had its annual barbecue for the public at El Monte Park and it was a huge success. Dancing and games followed the feast. James Murphy was chief berbecuer, Henry Burkhardt had charge of supplies, Carl Monroe was chairman of the entertainment committee and Marshall Cruze headed the general committee.

At the May 17 meeting of the Parlor the delegates to the Santa Rosa Grand Parlor submitted reports. A commitee was named to meet with a committee from San Diego Parlor No. 208 N.D.G.W. and perfect plans for restoring San Diego Mission. Some time ago $1,300 was raised for this purpose, it was reported, and it is hoped that actual work on the restoration of the first mission in California will start soon.

BIG DELEGATION VISITS.

San Diego Parlor No. 208 N.D.G.W. had an enjoyable visit from Santa Ana Parlor No. 235 April 27, twenty-eight members of the latter arriving by special bus and being welcomed by President Virginia Burk of 208. A program was presented, the participants being Franklin Haney, Frederick Plank, Louis Mierlot, Ben Harrison, Miss Gladys Chandler, Miss Leona Westcott. A novel guessing contest caused much merriment.

A huge bowl of California poppies formed the center decoration of the banquet table. Refreshments were served in dainty orange-colored favors, the handwork of the April social committee: Rosina M. Hertzbrun, Sophie Finley, Edna Taylor, Mae Shaffer, Florence Karner, Sara Miller, Virginia Jackson, Katherine Wood, Ann Wood. Dancing was in order until midnight, when the Santa Anans departed for their homes.

ABEL STEARNS

Chico presently entered and with good-humored compliments gave them seats and took his own. Glancing around, Chico stated that he had not the honor of knowing two of the gentlemen present. He desired to serve them as far as his powers would permit, in case some matters connected with their presence had brought them there.

Learning that one of the two was Stearns, Chico sprang to his feet in a furious rage and, addressing himself to and pointing his finger at him, began the following interrogatory: "You are the rascal, Abel Stearns, whom I ordered called to be punished as your criminal proceedings merit! You are the American scamp who made an attempt against the person of Don Manuel Victoria, and whom tomorrow morning I am going to order to be hung to the staff of the flag, which is in the middle of the plaza! You are the foreigner, as bold as you are lacking in honor, who, without being introduced beforehand, had the shamelessness to take a seat in my chamber, among decent persons who honor me with their visits! Leave my presence immediately, and await until tomorrow the result which you merit for your rascalities!" The state of confusion after such an attack was great, and Stearns made haste to get out quickly from the presence of Chico, even forgetting his hat.

The next day Chico was ashamed of the way he had acted the evening before, and realized that he must either drop the subject or be under the humiliating necessity of retracting what he had said before he could proceed further. He therefore sent word to Stearns that he would be allowed to return to Los Angeles under bond, in order to settle his business in a month, and then for him to leave the country. No final decision was reached on the subject, so Chico promised that he would soon follow Stearns to Los Angeles, in order to conclude there the matter for which he was called to Monterey. After the return of Stearns to Los Angeles, Governor Chico attempted, June 26, to accomplish his object by arbitrarily ordering Stearns to leave the country, but he was not successful in his attempt.

July 8 Stearns wrote to Chico, complaining of the injury done him, and threatening to hold the government responsible. He recapitulated that he had been summoned to Monterey and notified to prepare his affairs to depart to Mexico, on the ground of being a dangerous character and mixed up in the revolution of Senor Victoria. He was asked to give security in order to leave Monterey to settle up his business. He did so, but his large shipping business could not be settled in one month and great loss would result from this sudden step. He had no one to whom he could confide his business, and could not settle it up in such a limited time. He asked for modification of the order, as otherwise he would protest against the government and hold it responsible for any losses he would suffer.

Meanwhile, friends of Stearns undertook to aid him. A revolution was started around San Diego by Don Juan Bandini, and in Monterey a scandal was spread about Chico. These circumstances forced Chico to resign the governorship to Nicholas Gutierrez and to leave the country, July 31, sailing on the ship "Clementine."

Before resigning Chico wrote the following note and left it in the hands of his successor, showing his hatred of Stearns: "The orders issued by me regarding the departure of Don Abel Stearns and of the Rev. Fr. Narcison Duran, a religious, with regard to whom the junta itself has moved that the government should banish him, you will take the opportunity of carrying out. You will observe the same with reference to the prohibition that the Spaniard, Eulogio Celis, should he ever return to the territory, because according to the information in possession of the government he is an instigator of revolutions. Signed, Miano Chico."

CALIFORNIA GREAT PLACE TO ANSWER CALL OF OPEN

MAY BROKE DOWN THE SNOW BARriers on the highways that lead into the wonderland of the Sierras, declares Vonard Fraser of the National Automobile Club. Its balmy breath awakened the feathered chorus of the forests, the rivers broke their winter silence, and the magic wand of spring unleashed the mighty thunder of the waterfalls. Shasta's whitecapped height, last outpost of the season of cold and frost, gleamed iridescent under the warm rays of the summer sun; the volcanic cone of Lassen poured forth a cloud of mist as the snowdrifts vanished from its barren slopes. The giant redwoods doffed their icy pall and the wild-flowers assembled for their annual frolic on meadowland and hill.

The summer tourist season offers the California motorist a diversified field for his activities. He has a choice of four national parks: Lassen, General Grant, Sequoia and Yosemite. The first is a natural museum of weird phenomena; the second and third include the noblest of all forest areas, and the fourth presents the most awe-inspiring water spectacle in the world. The Mariposa and Tuolumne redwoods may be included on the Yosemite itinerary, and the Grand Canyons of the King and Kern on the visit to Sequoia.

There are four national monuments in California: Palm Springs, 125 miles from Los Angeles; the Pinnacles of San Benito County; Muir Woods on the slopes of Mount Tamalpais, Marin County, and the Modoc Lava Beds. The first offers an Arabian landscape, the second is a strange barren land of the weird, while the third, named after the great naturalist of California, is a fernladen forest that attracts thousands of picnicking parties each week-end. The Modoc Lava Beds were recently added to the list of national monuments by presidential proclamation.

In addition to the national parks and monuments, there are a number of state reservations including a number of groves along the Redwood highway between Garberville and Eureka, Humboldt County, and a considerable acreage in the Big Basin near Santa Cruz. Two groves in the state are privately owned: one, the Calaveras grove, located in the central Sierra Nevada, and the other, Welch's grove, a few miles out of Santa Cruz City.

The geological record of California, its volcanic origin and the action of the glacial period has left a queer ensemble of interesting districts which must be included among the tourist attractions of the state.

In Napa, Sonoma and Lake Counties are to be found a number of spouting geysers and the petrified forest. Just outside of Chico, Butte County, is a grotesque canyon which shows volcanic origin. A few miles out of the town of Mojave, Kern County, is Red Rock Canyon, where nature has left a remarkable record of her sculptural abilities on the limestone cliffs that abound in the valley.

California South has scores of remarkable beach resorts, while on California North coast from Point Reyes, Marin County, to Eureka, Humboldt County, some of the finest ocean vistas are to be found. The Rim-of-the-World drive, out of San Bernardino City, is one of the most spectacular itineraries of California South, and the Tioga road is another world-famous scenic highway.

The Golden Rule has to be operating at all times, and the nerves of the pilot of the machine must be in healthy condition or a glimpse over a mile-high cliff when the wheels are two inches from the edge will send him to the hospital.

The rule of fifteen miles an hour around blind

rns is one to be remembered and observed: akes must be in good condition; the driver ust know how to use the compression of his gine as a braking auxiliary and if he can ouble shift from high to intermediate and to w so much the better.

If you start a campfire, remember to put it t before you break camp. Remember, too, at you must secure fire permits before you art a fire in a national forest reserve. Per- its are not issued for the season as heretofore, t for the single trip, and new permits must be cured for succeeding excursions.

Summers in the Sierras are not overly warm, cept for a week or so during August, and enty of warm bedding is a requisite to com- rt. The overloading so often resorted to by e novice camper is in the nature of a miscel- neous collection of pots and pans and eating ensils as well as toilet requisites that can well e left at home.

California is a great place to answer the call the open. Play safe, and you will enjoy it the utmost.

NTERESTING HISTORY RELATED BY CALIFORNIA STATE LIBRARIAN.

Owing to information given on a road adver- sing sign near Folsom, Sacramento County, aid the "Telegraph" of that place April 23, here is an impression here that Folsom will be 00 years old in June. The "Telegraph" wrote the California State Library for information n this point, receiving the following reply:

"Editor Folsom Telegraph: In reply to your tter, we give below a very brief sketch of the arly history of Folsom: The first settlement that locality was at Negro Bar, which was etween the present town of Folsom and the merican River, in 1849. By 1851 there were ver 700 people on the bar. Folsom was laid ut by Theodore D. Judah, R. Chenery and Sam- el C. Bruce for Captain Joseph L. Folsom in 855. Town lots were sold at public auction anuary 17, 1856, in Sacramento. Every lot as sold on that day.

"On February 22, 1856, the Sacramento Val- y railroad was completed to Folsom. One housand people attended the opening, includ- ng the governor and many other notables. The own was first named Granite, but through the nfluence of Captain Folsom was changed to the resent name.

"There is no foundation for the statement hat Folsom was a trading post in 1826. There as not a settlement of any kind in the whole acramento Valley at that time. Captain Sut- er was the first man to settle in the valley and e came in 1839. Prior to that date the only nhabitants were Indians.

"Very truly yours,

FOURTEEN GOVERNORS WILL ATTEND GOOD ROADS MEETING.

The fourteenth annual convention of the United States Good Roads Association will be eld at Santa Monica, Los Angeles County, June to 12, in conjunction with the Bankhead Na- ional Highway Association and the United States Good Roads Show. The gathering is an important one and will be most interesting.

The governors of fourteen states will be among the many in attendance; they are com- ng from Virginia, Alabama, Georgia, Mississippi, Kentucky, Oklahoma, Kansas, Colorado, Utah, Nevada, Montana, Oregon, Idaho, California. The visiting governors will be met at the Cali- fornia state line by Governor Friend W. Rich- ardson and escorted to Santa Monica.

STATE ATTRACTIONS FOR JUNE.

Among the numerous events to be held in various parts of California during the month of June are these:

1-7—Seventeenth annual cherry festival, San Leandro, Alameda County.

4-6—National camp fire girls' conference, Yo- semite National Park.

5-6—Portuguese fiesta, Santa Clara City.

20—Annual flower show, Oceanside, San Di- ego County.

29 July 1—Old Spanish days' fiesta, Santa Barbara City.

In Memory of Heroes—The Monterey County Board of Supervisors has selected a [illegible] tract in the Santa Lucia Range, near the head of the Arroyo Seco, as a memorial park in honor of the soldier and sailor dead from that county.

A BIT 'O FARMING

EYES OF THE NATION TURNED TO AGRICULTURE

AGRICULTURE BIDS FAIR TO PROFIT from the exigencies of a political year. Whether it is with a view to coming elections, or whether it is because the distress of agriculture really has gone home to the government, promises are being made now that something is to be done, and in the near future, to put agriculture back among the industries that show profits and that attract men.

The Federal Secretary of Agriculture announces that $140,000,000 will be spent within the next fiscal year, beginning July 1, in an endeavor to relieve the depression. Congress has finally, and for the first time, taken a serious view of the situation. It may be hard to legislate prosperity into the farming business, but it should not be difficult to remove some of the obstacles that have been making agricultural progress almost impossible. In co-operation with the colleges of agriculture, control of crop and livestock pests may be worked out, introduction of new pests can be prevented, better farming methods introduced and aid given in marketing problems.

A few lines of agriculture show a profit, but as a whole the industry is in a bad way, and will be unless constructive measures are enacted. This does not mean, necessarily, that any pet scheme of relief must be enacted, but the whole situation must be viewed in a careful light, and the remedy applied shoull not be political. Farmers cannot much longer be pacified by being told from the political soap-box that they are the backbone of the nation. Unless conditions are changed in the near future, and farming made attractive from a financial point of view, the capable men in agriculture will turn to some other business.

Young men are not interested in the farm as they once were. The enrollment in the colleges of agriculture proves this beyond a question. The need has become apparent, and so apparent that at last something is to be done about it.

Agriculture in California hopes that whatever is done will not be an act of putting a political pacifier where a substantial program is needed.

SALESMANSHIP NEEDED.

Salesmanship, not legislation, is the key of the situation, according to some students of the problem. There are no surpluses, they declare. There are only lacks of markets, and if salesmen were sent to foreign countries to open the markets, there would be no difficulty, is one opinion advanced. And there may be some truth in that.

When the California raisin-growers, encouraged by a year or two of unusual prosperity, planted vines beyond all reason, very naturally there was a tremendous increase in production. But fortunately for the growers, they had chosen a capable head for their business, who himself went to the Orient and opened markets. And while there still is a production of raisins that makes handling a real problem, Ralph P. Merritt has gone a long way in reaching the solution of this problem by introducing the dried fruit of the vine to Japan, China and other foreign countries.

It does not seem impossible that other lines of agriculture may do the same thing. No industry has keener competition than raisin-growing, with the enormous quantities produced around the Mediterranean. Men who have given thought to the question, have come to the agreement that the solution lies not in artificial stimulation of prices through such measures as proposed in the McNary-Haugen bill, but through the voluntary and co-operative efforts of the farmers themselves, guided by such men as have turned disaster into stability in California.

FARM VALUES DECREASE.

The value of American farms and farm buildings dropped in the last five years from $66,316,002,602 to $49,546,523,759, according to estimates made by the Federal Department of Commerce, after a survey covering the period from 1920 to 1925. Farm plantings declined in the same period from 953,883,715 acres to 924,889,380. While the 1925 figures, compared with those for 1910, showed an increase of 35 percent in the average farm value, the purchasing power of the dollar has so shrunk during the fifteen-year period that there actually is a net decline of 10 percent during the period. Various reasons are assigned for the decline in the various parts of the nation, but the picture shows agriculture as a whole in the United States anything but prosperous.

So, again we seek the remedy. Apparently we are on the way. Aid by the government in controlling pests and in economy of production, co-operation in marketing and a program grounded on commonsense and not ingrained with political intrigue, should go a long way in bettering the situation that already has existed for too many years.

SUNBURN ON TREES.

At this time of the year the orchardist may notice sunburn on his trees and is quite likely to think the summer sun is getting in its work. It is more often true, however, that the damage was done during the bright, sunny days of the winter, when frosty nights followed the warm days. It is well enough to whitewash the trees now and protect them; perhaps wraps, applied loosely, might help.

But next fall or early winter don't forget that the great range in temperature, often from 100 to well below freezing during twenty-four hours, in the bark of the tree is far more apt to do damage than the hot summer sun. Whitewash the trees before the frosty nights of early winte with a solution that won't wash off. The dange from sunburn then will be small.

PEACHES AND PRODUCTION.

What the situation as regards peach-growin is, has been carefully outlined in an Agricu tural Extension Service Circular, No. 1, issue by the College of Agriculture, University of Cal fornia. There is no advice as to the plantin of peaches, but the facts regarding the peach in dustry are carefully set forth in detail, and the summarized. Shipping peaches, canning peache and drying peaches are given separate treatment in this exhaustive bulletin, the first of a series on California crops. Others are to follow.

This work was undertaken as a result of appeals made by farmers and their organizations, so that they might have data on which to base operations in the future. It is planned to take up each important crop of the state, and when the series is completed the farmer may not have advice as to what to plant and what not to plant, but he will have information that will enable him to form his own judgment accurately and avoid mistakes of overproduction that have embarrassed the agricultural industry of the state in the past few years.

PICKING BLACKBERRIES.

Picking blackberries always has been a disagreeable job. With the introduction of the thornless variety, this problem has been lessened, but still the old kinds are much more numerous. In some places, old inner tubes of automobile tires have been cut in sections and slipped over the arms for protection. The arm can be bent and work is not impeded, but the ever-persistent stickers are said to be completely baffled.

MARKETS BUREAU REVIVED.

The Bureau of Marketing of the State Department of Agriculture is to be revived, with Professor R. L. Adams of the Farm Management Division of the College of Agriculture, University of California, temporarily in charge. It has been three years since there has been any attempt made by the state to handle the markets situation. Professor Adams takes charge with all the technical and theoretical knowledge required, with practical experience that has resulted from careful studies and observations as well as first-hand contacts, and should be able to cope with the problem in a most satisfactory manner.

There is plenty to be done in this line, and all too much of it has been neglected. If order can be brought out of chaos, particularly for the small producer, Professor Adams will have rendered an invaluable service to the agricultural industry of the state; and when he turns the office over to the successor who is expected to come from the United States Department of Agriculture within a year there may be a different conception in the minds of some of those who have to deal with markets as to just what a state bureau of markets is.

IRRIGATION AND CULTIVATION.

This is the season of irrigation and cultivation. A word to those who use water and who till the soil seldom gets home, but always hopefully those who have practiced what they preach appeal for better methods. In the first place, too much irrigation is just as bad and in its permanent effects may be far worse than too little. There is but one way to tell whether soil needs water, and that is by finding out. And there is but one practical way of finding out—with the soil auger. Test the soil. If it needs water, irrigate. If it doesn't, don't irrigate. And remember that too much water raises the water level under the soil and with the rising water table comes alkali that makes the land worthless.

Similarly, cultivate if the soil needs it. If there are weeds, the soil does need it. If there are no weeds, the chances are you will waste your time and money by cultivating. But be sure you don't permit weeds to sap the soil of the water your trees need at this time of the year.

WATCH THE RED SPIDER.

With the summer comes the red spider, and still there is no assurance that he will not be as troublesome a pest as always he has been. It has been noticed, however, that the dryer the year the more pestiferous the insect. Some growers say that plenty of water spray will control the pest. Unfortunately most orchards are not so supplied with water that they can be given sprays with water as often as necessary, but where this is possible the experiment will be worth the while. Otherwise, resort to the old-time and well-tried solutions and keep the damage down as well as possible until the College of Agriculture and the State Department of Agriculture have worked out a better method. The safest remedy now seems to be some of the new oil preparations offered on the market and tried with success in many orchards last summer.

PROCEEDINGS FORTY-NINTH NATIVE SON GRAND PARLOR

(CLARENCE M. HUNT.)

THE FORTY-NINTH GRAND PARLOR of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, in session at Santa Rosa, Sonoma County, May 10, 12 and 14, has gone into history. Grand President Fletcher A. Cutler presided throughout the deliberations, and his report was the outstanding feature of the gathering. In the course of the report, a considerable portion of which dealt with matters heretofore given publicity in these columns, Judge Cutler said:

"I am very proud of the record that our Order has made during the past year and the satisfaction is occasioned by the knowledge that each grand officer whom you selected at San Bernardino to carry on our work has acquitted himself in a manner commendable and with a loyalty unsurpassed. Each member of the Order in the state has been thoughtful, zealous and responsive, all of which has lightened the labors of the Grand President and could not fail to bring his administration to a successful close. . . .

"The importance of our fellowship endowment at the University of California has become pronounced. 'Native Sons Fellows' have a meaning and a reputation extending far beyond the confines of our state. They are becoming known in the educational world as historians; men who are building up, not only the history of California, which is not and can never be provincial, but historians in the broadest sense of the word, men who are adding to the accumulated store of the world's knowledge and who receive their stimulus and inspiration from the Native Sons' endowment at the University of California. . . .

"Our Order is firmly intrenched in the public-schools of the state. It is welcomed everywhere by teachers and student-bodies as a friend, advisor and coadjutor. . . . To one who has been granted the privilege of appearing before the students of our public-schools, the future men and women of our state, and cultivating a kindly feeling for, and a deep interest in, our Order, there comes the compensating thought that to be a grand officer of the Native Sons of the Golden West privileged to encourage a standard of citizenship within this state meeting the ideals as exemplified in the lives of the men and women of the long ago, is a position exalted and honorable in every sense of the word. May we never falter in the school work that we have embarked on.

(South San Francisco 157)
RE-ELECTED GRAND SECRETARY.

"For many years the public had but little knowledge of the work we were engaged in. Lack of contact with the general public dwarfed our growth and affected materially our real position in the affairs of the state. Our Order was founded by young men who were living in a time and in an atmosphere close to the days of '49. It was a fraternal society, as that term is used to denote an organization founded primarily upon a sick benefit system. Nothing was done in a substantial way to perpetuate the history of the state, and the annual Admission Day celebration was the one public event of the Order. Fifty years have passed since we were organized. . . . The time has arrived when we must gradually break away from the idea of our Order being based on an insurance scheme and boldly enter the broader field of becoming identified with the rapidly increasing affairs of the state. We should not hesitate to deal with all public questions affecting local and state-wide interests. I have recommended the affiliation of the various Parlors with the local chambers of commerce and other civic bodies in their respective communities, and assuming a positive, aggressive stand on all measures non-political in their nature, but which do enter into the civic life of their people. . . .

"In this connection, may I be permitted to mention one agency that is doing so much to advertise our Order and our activities—The Grizzly Bear Magazine. It should be the solemn duty of every member of this Order to subscribe for the magazine and, after reading it, to pass it along. The press of the state has been most kind in its attitude toward our Order and the various newspapers have never failed to grant access to their columns. I would therefore advise a closer contact with the press by our various Parlors in their activities. . . . .

"As a part of our history work, the identifying of places where historical events occurred should not be discounted. We are proud of our record of the past in this highly important service that we are rendering the state and posterity. The perspective that the passing years give emphasizes the historical significance of every event which transpired on California soil, each constituting an important part in the progress and mission of the American people. With the limited funds at our command we have visited and marked places that stand out prominently in California history and which invoke the most sacred regard and affection. In the past we have participated in the restoration of historical buildings and the missions which, year by year, are falling into a state of decay. Our attention has been called to the almost complete destruction of the far-famed Santa Barbara Mission, and I have endeavored to enlist the services of our membership in raising a fund to co-operate with those who are engaged in the work of restoration. . . .

"I have endeavored to . . . keep myself informed as to the nature of the great humanitarian service the Native Daughters and Native Sons are rendering the state in carrying on this [homeless children] work. I found a committee composed of a splendid body of men and women who were giving their close attention to the details incidental to the administration of the great trust reposed in them. . . . By personal contact I have become acquainted with the far-reaching results of our past service. I find in almost every section of the state a boy or girl blossoming into a glorious womanhood and manhood, loved and revered by those who are able to give them advantages which will make them ideal citizens of the state. I want to carry the message to every Native Son, that the effort and the money and the time that they have contributed to this cause has resulted in an achievement that yields a golden return for the investment. Our Order is deeply indebted to the men and the women who have performed their part in their respective committees and their names should appear upon our roll of honor. . . .

"In conclusion, I wish to say that my activities in the Order will not cease with my retirement from the Presidency. I shall always be ready to render whatever aid may be asked of me. I part with my brother grand officers with feelings of regret and loving affection. They have sustained me by words and action through many trying situations. They are true representative Native Sons and the future has much in store for this Order. Under their guidance there can be no step backward, but the Order will march valiantly on reaping honor and credit for itself and the ever-increasing glory of the state. I shall not say farewell, because the members will always be with me in spirit, and memories of the past shall ever remain as a lasting reward for whatever time I have devoted to the Order. The incoming grand officers have the confidence, trust and admiration of every member of the Order. I know they will give to you, as they have given to me, that same Friendship, Loyalty and Charity, and I know that you will prove yourselves to be worthy of all that they may bestow upon you."

Summarized proceedings of the Grand Parlor follow. Reports of officers and other matters heretofore given publicity in The Grizzly Bear are not included, and no reference is made to proposed legislation and resolutions which failed to receive favorable consideration.

IN MEMORIAM

The following tribute to the late Luther Bu bank, submitted by Past Grand Presider Charles E. McLaughlin, William J. Hayes a Bismarck Bruck, was adopted by a rising vo and the Grand Secretary was directed to forwa to his widow an engrossed, framed copy:

"Luther Burbank is dead. The people of t earth have bowed their heads with the flowe and fields he made more beautiful and fruitf

"Exalted and lowly, beneficiaries of his wo have made his home and grave a shrine.

"Born in Massachusetts, he came in his bo hood to add lustre to the fame of Californ and by developing her beauty proved hims her most loyal and devoted son. Few men ha rendered greater service to mankind, and t sons of California now living, and who will li upon its soil, will ever sing his immortality a praise.

"God inspired and approved his work, a when He called him home a call came amo the flowers he had made more beautiful, a he sank to rest amid the scenes he loved. Th was the benediction upon his work. Of t eternal beatitude of his gentle soul, we have shadow of unfaith."

BENEFITS.

The most constructive legislation propos was that embodied in a resolution sponsored the delegates of San Diego Parlor No. 108, o lining the establishment of a sick and death be efits department. The payment of benefits now optional with the Subordinate Parlors.

Edward H. Dowell, who has thoroughly vestigated the benefit subject, presented the gument for the resolution. He admitted th the plan provided was not perfect, but contend that it was at least a good foundation up which could be built a safe and sound benef regulation.

There was much debate, for the paying benefits has long been a "bone of contentio in the Grand Parlor. It was generally conced that the proposal under discussion was the mo logical ever presented for the solution of t question, and Dowell was highly complimente The writer's opinion is, that the putting in operation of the plan suggested would be mo beneficial to the Order—it would insure the pa ment of benefits to all members, would ma rially aid in solving the suspension "evil," a would release Subordinate Parlor funds for s cial purposes, the course that must be follow if the membership is to be increased.

As a result of the debate, a special committ of five, to investigate the suggested plan a report to the Board of Grand Officers within s months, was authorized, as was also an appr priation to cover the committee's expenses. E ward H. Dowell (San Diego 108), John Per (Stockton 7), Past Grand President Charles McLaughlin, Past Grand President Louis Mooser, Junior Past Grand President Fletch A. ## One man in six—wisely takes advantage of this privilege

No matter how great or how small his wealth may be, it is man's lawful privilege to dictate the disposition of his possessions after he is gone. Nearly everyone expects to take advantage of that privilege, but five people out of six put off making a will until it is too late, often leaving only undue responsibility and confusion to those who depended on them.

Yet it is easy to arrange your affairs so that there can be no trouble. First come in and talk this matter over in confidence with an executive in our Trust Department. Then have your lawyer draw your will, naming a Trust Company executor, or co-executor with a friend or member of your family.

There is no more certain, sounder way of safeguarding the accumulations of your lifetime and protecting the interests of your heirs.

Five hundred dollars was contributed to the Santa Barbara Mission restoration fund.

Corona Parlor No. 196 (Los Angeles) was granted permission to change its name to Hollywood Parlor No. 196.

Five cents was added to the percapita tax, the proceeds to be used in financing the celebration of Admission Day.

Sacramento City was designated as the place for holding this year's general Admission Day, September 9, celebration.

Article XI, section 5 of the Grand Parlor constitution was amended to provide for additional details to be carried out in the consolidation of Subordinate Parlors.

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED.

Appointing each delegate a committee of one to request his Parlor to name a committee of five to assist in the restoration of Santa Barbara Mission, the names of said committee to be transmitted to the Grand Secretary.

Endorsing the efforts to turn Sutter Fort, Sacramento City, into a California museum, under intelligent supervision.

Directing the Grand Secretary to express to Charles L. McEnerney, a former grand officer, the sympathy of the Grand Parlor in his illness.

Providing for the adoption, by the Board of Grand Officers, of an official emblematic advertising sign for use by Subordinate Parlors.

Requesting the Grand President to each year issue a proclamation calling upon Subordinate Parlors to fittingly observe Flag Day, June 14.

Granting the Cabrillo monument committee "the privilege of appointing a special campaign committee, to consist of one member from each Parlor, for the purpose of disseminating publicity in preparation for an active drive to raise as large a sum as the project warrants."

Directing the Board of Grand Officers to report as to the feasibility of creating a proposed lapsation bureau under the direction of the Grand Secretary.

Authorizing the Grand President to "appoint a committee of five, to be known as the committee on forestry and reforestation, whose duty it shall be to formulate a policy of active participation by the members of the Order in this important subject." Past Grand President Herman C. Lichtenberger, R. L. P. Bigelow (Hydraulic 56), Harvey M. Toy (Stanford 76), George G. Radcliff (Watsonville 65), Historiographer Roy W. Cloud were named as the committee.

Declaring that "it shall be the duty of each Subordinate Parlor to annually, before the first of May, give observance to the proposition of fire protection," to the end that the forests of California may be protected from the ravages of fire.

Endorsing the proposal to build a bridge across the Golden Gate and pledging "support by all honorable means to bring about the speedy completion of the project."

Directing the grand officers to "present with appropriate ceremonies the emblem of the Bear Flag Republic to the Leland Stanford Junior Uuniversity."

Calling upon the Subordinate Parlors "to appoint committees whose duty shall be to initiate, advise upon and promote all matters pertaining to the economic growth of our beloved state, and the preservation to the people of the state of our natural resources, and their complete development."

Empowering the Board of Grand Officers to investigate the proposed purchase, by the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West, of a grove of redwoods in Humboldt County, to be dedicated as a living memorial to the Pioneers of California; and, if the project is feasible, that a sum not in excess of five hundred dollars be contributed to the fund being raised by the Native Daughters for the purchase of the memorial grove.

Expressing appreciation for the publicity given the deliberations by the "Santa Rosa Press-Democrat," the "Santa Rosa Republican" and various news gathering associations.

Extending thanks to the people generally of Santa Rosa and Sonoma County, to Santa Rosa, Petaluma, Sonoma, Sebastopol and Glen Ellen Parlors of Native Sons, to the Native Daughters of Sonoma County and to the citizens of Monte Rio, for the pleasure afforded the members of the Grand Parlor and their accompanying ladie and for the numerous courtesies extended.

Extending a special vote of thanks to Sant Rosa Parlor No. 217 N.D.G.W. for the beautift floral decorations.

Extending to the retiring Grand Presiden Judge Fletcher A. Cutler, thanks "for the ab and impartial manner in which he presided ov the deliberations of this Grand Parlor, and fo his masterly contribution to the successful te mination of the very important legislation e fected for the good of our beloved Order."

MISCELLANEOUS.

Past Grand President Louis H. Mooser e pressed the opinion that the report of Gran President Fletcher A. Cutler was the best ev presented by a retiring Grand President. Fo lowing the presentation of the report, Jud Cutler was roundly applauded, in appreciatio for his work in the Order's behalf during th year.

Grand Secretary John T. Regan (South Sa Francisco 157) was given a rising vote of co fidence, accompanied by three rousing cheers.

JUDGE REX B. GOODCELL, A NATIVE SON, CANDIDATE FOR GOVERNOR OF CALIFORNIA

"THERE IS BUT ONE CALIFORNIA, AND AS a Native Son of Pioneer parents I am most anxious to see the waters and forests of the state conserved to the utmost degree and her resources developed until it will be possible to bring under irrigation millions of her fertile but now-idle acres, that manufactured products from her raw materials shall find their way to every land on the globe and millions more of people shall find happy homes within her borders," says Judge Rex B. Goodcell in picturing the California of the future that he hopes to have a part in building, in his campaign for the Republican nomination for Governor now under way throughout the state.

Judge Goodcell is one of the best-known men in public life in California today. He is seeking the Republican nomination for Governor on his record as a public official. Born in San Bernardino, he was educated in the schools of that city and Oakland. His mother came to California in an ox-cart over the Donner Trail in 1852, while his father came in a similar manner over the Arrowhead Trail to Southern California in 1856.

The practice of law was taken up as a life work by young Goodcell. His father is one of the pioneer barristers of San Bernardino County. Rex B. Goodcell was admitted to the bar in 1901 and in 1910 became District Attorney of San Bernardino County after having served as an assistant for four years. He refused a second term, but in 1918 was elected as Superior Judge of his native county. He served in that capacity with distinction and honor until 1922 when he resigned to accept the appointment, by President Warren G. Harding, as Collector of Internal Revenue for the Southern California District with offices in Los Angeles. He was reappointed to the place last fall by President Calvin Coolidge but resigned, effective April 5 this year, to enter the campaign for the governorship in which he has received assurances of widespread support. His revenue office made a national record for efficiency and served as a model for other similar offices throughout the country.

JUDGE REX B. GOODCELL, ARROWHEAD 110 N.S.G.W. CANDIDATE FOR GOVERNOR OF CALIFORNIA

The candidacy of Judge Goodcell for the governorship is of special interest to the members of the Native Sons of the Golden West as well as the Native Daughters of the Golden West, who take pride in the growth, development and prosperity of their state. He is a member of the former order, Arrowhead Parlor of San Bernardino, from which he was a delegate to the last session of the Grand Parlor at Santa Rosa. He took a most prominent part in the deliberations of that body, as he has several times in former years.

While in the north at the Santa Rosa convention Goodcell made addresses in a dozen or more communities in that vicinity, being warmly greeted and receiving substantial evidences of support on every hand.

His conservation program is being especially stressed by Judge Goodcell in his campaign. He would conserve the state's water supply for the bringing under irrigation millions of acres of now-fertile but idle land. Not only is he for the Boulder Canyon All-American canal for the Imperial Valley and augmented water supply for Southern California's interior from the Colorado River, being one of the pioneer advocates of that combined project, but he is for the conserving of the water supply of every section of the state, the Sacramento and San Joaquin Rivers and other streams, great and small, within her borders, by the building of storage dams, reforestation and otherwise. He asserts there is sufficient waterfall within the state to insure the irrigation of every idle acre, if properly conserved.

"The completion of the survey of our state's water supply should be pressed with all possible rapidity," he says, "and a definite comprehensive plan of conservation and development agreed upon. It should be the dream of every Californian that every drop of water falling on California's watersheds should be put to some useful purpose.

"No true Californian will rest content until the natural resources of our state have reached a maximum development and our people have realized the greatest of prosperity."

Vice-president James A. Wilson. Past Grand President Lewis F. Byington delivered the dedicatory address.

At the ball Wednesday evening the grand march was led by Grand President Fletcher A. Cutler and Grand President Sue J. Irwin of the Native Daughters. Others in line were Grand First Vice-president and Mrs. Hilliard E. Welch, Grand Secretary and Mrs. John T. Regan, Grand Marshal and Mrs. Harry W. Gaetjen, Grand Trustee and Mrs. Richard M. Hamb, Grand Trustee and Mrs. Charles L. Dodge, Grand Trustee and Mrs. John T. Newell, Grand Director and Mrs. John Andreson, Past Grand President and Mrs. William I. Traeger. Excellent music was provided.

Thursday the visitors were taken on a pilgrimage to three of Sonoma County's numerous historic places, where markers were placed. Past Grand President Joseph R. Knowland presided. At Sonoma Mission, the property of the state, Grand First Vice-president Hilliard E. Welch and George G. Radcliff, chairman State Board Control, were the speakers; at the Vallejo home, George H. Barron; at the Hooker ranch, Past Grand President Lewis F. Byington. At the latter place a barbecue was served.

Previous to the pilgrimage, the Grand Parlor presented American and State (Bear) Flags to six Santa Rosa public-schools, the speakers being Historiographer Roy W. Cloud, Harmon Skillen, Milton Parks, Edward Van Vranken, Rowan Hardin, Ronald M. Ross.

At the banquet Thursday evening Justice Emmet Seawell was the toastmaster, and responses were made as follows: "Our Order," Grand President Fletcher A. Cutler; "The Pioneers," Grand First Vice-president Hilliard E. Welch; "Our Flag," Grand Second Vice-president Charles A. Thompson; "Historic Landmarks," Past Grand President Lewis F. Byington; "Homeless Children," Grand Third Vice-president James A. Wilson; "California," Rowan Hardin (Tuolumne 144); "A Message From the Southland," Burrell D. Neighbours (Ramona 109). Junior Past Grand President Edward J. Lynch, on behalf of the Order, presented a remembrance to Judge Cutler, retiring Grand President.

For the women visitors, special entertainment features were provided: an afternoon card party, an evening theatre party, and an auto trip to the petrified forest.

planting. This is not advice to plant more commercial vineyards—far from it. But it is hard to find, in this state, a place where some varieties of grapes will not thrive. In most places nearly any kind will do well. Grape vines require little care, take little space and add to the appearance of the back yard. There are places on the farm where a few for family use can, and should, be planted. As fresh fruit, or as dried, they have their place in the diet. Grape juice could easily supplant many less palatable, if now more popular, beverages.

BROODY HENS DON'T PAY.

Broody hens continue their operation during the summer. When they want to produce a family, they don't want to produce eggs, and all the time they occupy in clucking is subtracted from that when they should be cackling. Break them up, and quickly.

A suspended box with a chicken wire bottom is about as discouraging to the would-be mother hen as anything that has been devised. Bear in mind that the sooner the hen gets her mind free from the nest as a permanent resting place for three weeks the quicker she will be ready to occupy it with more profitable results a few minutes each day.

CANNOT YOU SEE?

A TRIBUTE TO THE PIONEERS OF CALIFORNIA

"CONSIDER THOSE MEN AND women who came overland and around the Horn to California about the time of the discovery of gold at Coloma, El Dorado County, January 24, 1848," said Hilliard E. Welch of Lodi, now Grand President of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West, responding to the toast, "The Pioneer," at the banquet in Santa Rosa, Sonoma County, during the Forty-ninth Grand Parlor session there last month.

"Almost eighty years have passed away since that memorable event took place, and very few of the participants are alive to tell the story. Within a few years, none will remain.

"Even the humble homes of those men and women are fast succumbing to the ravages of time and the natural processes of erosion and decay. Soon, all will disappear. As we stand today in this beautiful Valley of the Sonoma, with its many historic spots, our minds naturally turn to the men and to the events of the long ago.

"Let your eyes wander over Sonoma's hills to the proud Sierras beyond. Cannot you see, in the evening haze, an outline of the old Pioneer, standing on the summit of those grand mountains, with his eyes shaded looking down the western slope, as is so strikingly set forth in the monument to the Pioneer on the shores of Donner Lake? Cannot you see him, as darkness envelopes the landscape, turn and enter his humble home and, with an old-fashioned flint, build the evening fire in the great open fireplace? Cannot you see, as the flames gather strength and volume, the shadows recede until light penetrates the entire room? Cannot you see the ashes drop from the log to the open hearth beneath?

"My brothers, that log is the log of life which is being consumed by the fire of hope and love and faith and confidence. As its volume increases, the shadows of envy, of doubt, of suspicion will recede and disappear, and the ashes of hate, of greed, of discord will fall from our lives.

"The Order of Native Sons of the Golden West was founded by the descendants of the Pioneers. Our ideals are a combination of all their ideals, our ambitions the fulfillment of all their dreams.

"Due reverence—for the religious faith of not only the Franciscan monks who established the long line of missions, but for those of many faiths who came into California in the days of forty-nine—has inspired us with a zeal which finds fulfillment in endeavoring to assist in preserving the old missions, in marking the spots made memorable by the activities of the Pioneers, and in making it possible for students of the University of California to study and delve into the archives of Europe in order that a better and more complete history of California may be built for future use. The amount of valuable material that has been accumulated is one part of our work with which the average member of the Order is in complete ignorance. And it has just begun. Each year unfolds something more valuable than the year before, and the pity of it all is, that we are unable to provide five or ten times the fund now devoted to this splendid work, in order that many records which in time will mold and decay might be copied or preserved while they are still in existence.

"Agricultural and commercial development naturally followed the influx of population into California. Temporary structures gave way to more permanent buildings and, in a short time, at advantageous points, there sprang up settlements which have later developed into the great cities of the state. As time goes on, these centers of population will develop in proportion to the development and prosperity of the great valleys of the state. The waterways, which were once combed as with a fine-tooth comb by the miner in his search for gold, will be harnessed by gigantic dams and new energy will be transmitted to the valleys below to furnish power to the great manufacturing plants which will dot the landscape.

HILLIARD E. WELCH OF LODI,
GRAND PRESIDENT ORDER NATIVE SONS GOLDEN WEST.

"The lives that we live are, for the most part, part and parcel of this great agricultural and commercial development. May we continue to find time and means to endeavor to instill into the minds of the children of our schools the lessons contained in the lives and activities of the Pioneers. May the splendid work of dedicating school buildings and presenting flags to schools be continued, for there is no better way in which to tell the story of California to those who will, in a few short years, guide her destiny.

"What of the Forty-niner? Towns and villages, hastily built up around and about the scenes of newly-discovered deposits of gold, are as hastily deserted when those deposits become exhausted. The ravines of California could tell of scores of once-populous communities, a trace of none of which today remains. We should continue, with renewed zeal, to mark the many historic spots hallowed by the heroic deeds of men of all climes who came here and helped lay the foundation for this heritage that been given to us.

"It has been truly said, that any process wh continually takes and gives nothing cannot of a permanent nature. The process of min may be said to be of this nature. In the imm diate localities, the results were inevitabl Nothing now remains to tell the story, exc upturned rocks and barren wastes. Howev this same gold did make possible the mate development of the great valleys, the constr tion of cities with all the comforts and pleasu of modern times.

"As the little brooklet leaps from rock rock and finally joins the larger stream, to lost in the sluggish flow as the level stretc of country are reached, and as surely as recognize the fact that has taken many small, t bulent streams to make the mighty river that r lazily on to the sea, may we come to rea that the lives of the Fo niners, rough, rugged, couth, storm-tossed, ha one by one, been melted, the winter's snows un summer's sun, into river of experience, wh flows on and on and and finally forms the gr sea of life.

"Santa Rosa, 'the City Roses,' the home of late Luther Burbank, county-seat of Sono County, abounding in h toric spots, has entertai us royally. While visit the old adobe home of G eral Vallejo near Petalu Dr. H. E. Bolton, profes of history at the Univers of California, remarked t Vallejo was one of six v prominent men who hel to make history and ha great deal to do with initial agricultural devel ment of Central Californ In that list he inclu Vallejo, with his holdi in the Sonoma Valley, S ter in the lower Sacrame Valley, Weber in the Sto ton region, Marsh in t wonderful confusion rolling hills intersper with fertile valleys in Marsh Creek section, Liv more in the Livermore V ley, and Sunol in that trict adjacent to the to which bears his name.

"Dr. Bolton chooses call these men the 'Lo of the North,' and presses the hope that so day some enterprising s dent of history will cho to write the story of th lives and achievements. is certain that such a ume would add much the already voluminous h tory of the California Pioneers, particularly it would reveal to all readers a sidelight o type of Pioneer that we are too apt to for while reading and thinking and dreaming of Gold Pioneers. These six men belonged to entirely different type: their dreams were of soil and its products; of cattle, horses, sheep hogs roaming a hundred hills; of comforta farms housing happy and contented children; schoolhouses and churches and all of th things that make up the splendid rural agric tural life of the California of the present.

"These men controlled a vast area across middle section of the state that served as a b wark of defense against the more warlike Indi tribes of Northern California and the further croachments of the Russians along the north coast. In fact, with the permanent establi ment of the 'Lords of the North' began the d of Russian colonization within California."

¶ The Order of the Native Sons of the Golden West is founded upon the same broad patriotic principles that have been the inspiration of similar organizations in older States of the Union. Each State has its history. Into that history is interwoven a narrative of deeds performed by a mighty race of men who frontiered and pioneered the pathway for the countless thousands to follow. They transplanted the spirit, the life, the institutions of the Colonists, and wherever a State was erected there were established the ideals of the Fathers of the Republic.

¶ Therefore, the membership of our Order is limited to those born within the State, because we believe that pride of nativity is inherent in the breast of every person and moves that person to a consecrated loyalty to his native land. We do not maintain that birthplace alone confers any special privilege; rather do we teach that this casts upon the citizen an increased obligation to become interested in all material matters affecting its development and progress. National strength and national greatness have been commensurate with State strength and State greatness.

¶ California was the thirty-first State to be admitted into the Union. She contributed a citizenship and a golden treasure at an opportune time in the affairs of the nation. The many events connected with its settlement and organization as a State played a prominent part in shaping the destiny of the American people, and geographically she occupies a strategic position in the world-wide problems of the present and the future.

¶ We have taken an active interest in the conservation of our natural resources; the preservation of our scenic wonders and making them accessible to all; the retention of the State and its soil for the White race; all legislation, Federal and State, affecting the State and its interests.

¶ In our Fellowship endowment at the University of California we have expended over fifty thousand dollars in the preparation and preservation of the history of California and the Pacific Coast, and it has become the incentive for the Student Body of that institution and of the high-schools throughout the State to learn and teach that history. In this work we have laid the foundation for a text-book to be used in the public schools.

¶ We visit places where important events transpired and we have identified and marked the same with tablet and monument. Responding to the patriotic objects of our Order, we observe each recurring anniversary day of the Admission of California into the Union by public ceremonies in the various cities of the State. We actively participate in public dedicatory ceremonies of grammar-school and high-school buildings, on which occasions the students and citizens are addressed by officials of our Order on patriotic subjects.

¶ We maintain a "Homeless Children" Bureau and have placed in the childless homes over twenty-six hundred homeless boys and girls, insuring their development into a splendid citizenship amid elevating environments. In this activity we have expended over two hundred thousand dollars, contributed generously and voluntarily by the membership of the Order.

¶ It thus appears that the work of our organization appeals to every citizen of the State, irrespective of place of birth. It matters not where we were born in this land of ours; we are all citizens of a common country, we pledge our allegiance to one flag, and we are best evidencing our love of country and our loyalty to that flag by deservedly wearing the badge of public service wherever we exist and have our home.

¶ We welcome to our Membership the sons of California, and we promise nothing in return, save that compensation which comes to the citizen who conscientiously endeavors to perform his part in the cause of a greater and better civilization.

HILLIARD E. WELCH,

Grand President, Native Sons of the Golden West.

REGISTER AND VOTE!

TUESDAY, AUGUST 31, IS AN IMPORTant date—primary election day. At that time, the voters of California are to nominate a senator and eleven representatives for the Federal Congress, a full list of state officials, senators and emblymen for the State Legislature and, in eral counties, county officials. Registration, participate in the nominating primary, closes y 31.

Every citizen, worthy of being classified as h, should register, and vote! Many are prone look upon the voting privilege as valueless, ereas it is the greatest asset the true Amcan has.

The future welfare of the nation and the te depends, in large measure, on the nominees be selected at the August primary. There is more likelihood of worthless officials being in nomination by the minority than by the jority.

The Grizzly Bear urges every citizen of Calinia to register, and vote. Ascertain the alifications—from their past records, not their -election declarations,—of each and every didate, and then vote according to YOUR lings, without regard to party. This course, l this alone, will assure competent officials, those who will, without fear or favor, ence all the laws.

n the National House of Representatives, te 3, Congressman Jeremiah E. O'Connell of ode Island State delivered the following brief ress on the "Duties of Citizenship" which is rflowing with meat for the thinking citizen:

"No more important privilege attaches to zenship in this fair land than that of voting those officials in state and nation to whom intrusted the conduct of public affairs. The dency is widespread to critize such officials, en unjustly, but investigation will frequently eal that such criticisms are made by persons fail to exercise their voting franchise either absenting themselves from the polls or by ing to qualify, by registration or otherwise, hat they may have a voice and a vote in seing their local, state, or national representa-s.

Failure to vote is regrettable and unpardone and places a citizen in the position where wails and complaints should be received h scant sympathy. He, by his own example, igs about a condition which is sadly to be lored.

Many states have laws providing for registra-. They differ as to the period, but most of m permit registration up to a time reasonr close to the date of election. . . . Regardof party, it is the duty of all good citizens qualify by registration so that they may parpate in choosing their public officials.

No one who does not exercise the privilege he franchise has any moral right to criticize selection of candidates and officials by those take enough interest in the affairs of their ernment to participate in the selection of n officials. If incompetent or dishonest men elected to office, it is largely by reason of n dereliction."

THINK IT OVER!

The Order of Native Sons of the Golden West we believe, with the exception of the Order Native Daughters of the Golden West, the ly organization that limits membership exsively to NATIVE-BORN AMERICANS. Knowing the serious conditions in this country tay, this fact alone should impel every Native n of California to immediately SEEK AFLIATION with that American-born and erican-operated institution, the man-power i wealth of which are pledged to the protecn of American institutions in times of peace well as in times of war.

April 15, in the National House of Representatives, Representative Wood of Indiana bitterly denounced the sale, by the Federal Shipping Board, of the Admiral-Oriental line of Seattle to the Dollar line of San Francisco. "Let me tell you all about the Dollars," said he, and he did:

"The Dollars are not so patriotic that they would give up their substance to the United States. . . . Their British Columbia line is operated under contract with and in co-operation with Japanese capital. . . . We have surrendered the greatest auxiliary the navy has on the Pacific Coast."

And, from the contents of a letter, dealing with this subject, received by The Grizzly Bear from a well-informed San Franciscan the very day after Representative Wood's address, suspicion is aroused that the "surrender" that has been made is not in the interest of the United States nor encouraging to the maintenance of an American merchant marine. Quoting from the letter:

"What could be sweeter than to give five of the best ships of the shipping board fleet that cost over $8,000,000 to Robert Dollar for $4,500,000. Because, forsooth, Chairman T. V. O'Connor states boldly 'the sale was made in pursuance of the board's policy to transfer government-owned vessels to private ownership, to assure a permanent American merchant marine.' Now, the writer cannot say that T. V. O'Connor is a prevaricator; no, he's a stevedore. But I beg to insinuate, in the most delicate manner possible, that circumstances compel me to doubt the veracity of his statement. Let us see:

"What ship of Dollar flies the American Flag or is registered here in our great United States? Did he, Dollar, state that he would man all his ships with Orientals if he could? Yes, he stated that in Washington. Perhaps O'Connor was there, and knows. O'Connor certainly knows that he has replaced White men with Orientals in every and any capacity—firemen, sailors, flunkeys and a few petty officers."

The director of the statistical bureau of the State Board of Health disputes the veracity of the federal census figures showing but 15,000 Jap women in California. He says that the birth rate among the Japs indicates that there are at least 26,000 of the female of the species here.

We'll wager that, if it were possible to accurately count them, the number of Jap women—all diligently breeding for the mikado's glory—would total nearer 50,000 than either the census figure or the statistician's estimate. But, the Japs evade the census-takers, just as they evade the laws, and they have no difficulty in getting away with the evasion processes in all instances.

"Humboldt County Can Grow Lettuce," heads an article in the "Arcata Union." Not only lettuce, but everything else, for Humboldt is one of California's most productive counties.

---

Iowa is now listed with the states opposed to the World Court,—the trap-door entrance to the League of Nations—United States Senator Cummins, an administration pro-Courter, having gone down to defeat in the June nominating primary. Other states that have retired World Court senators are Oregon, Pennsylvania and Illinois, and the voters of California should, on primary day, follow their lead.

TO THE WILLOW

(MISS ESTHER CRONE.)

Oh, willow tree, speak to me
Of days that have crowned thy stay,
And tell me why the passerby
Stops on his weary way
Beside the brook in a shady nook
In the heat of a summer day.

Thy long limbs dip like an emerald drip
And sway as the breezes blow,
Thy cooling leaves bring sense of ease
That revives and cheers us so,—
And thoughts of praise to God we raise
That the willow was made to grow.

"If we have another war," declared Brigadier-General William Mitchell, the fighting aviator, in a recent Oakland address, "it will be with Japan or Russia, or both, and they would attack through Alaska and California."

That such a war is coming, in the not-far-distant future, is a near-certainty. Japan is, and has been, feverishly preparing for it. And what is this country doing? Everything possible to assure an easy victory for Japan!

John Nion Coulter, state wharfinger at San Francisco, went into Canada to wed a Swiss girl, and had a hard time getting by the immigration authorities when he wished to return to the United States.

His membership in the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West satisfied the authorities as to his American citizenship, after Senator Hiram W. Johnson, himself a Native Son, produced evidence that only White males born in California may affiliate with the Order, and he was allowed to come back. Another reason every eligible should be a Native Son.

Because of the fortune spent in the recent Pennsylvania primary, the political old-liners are directing their fire at the primary-law, hoping to have it repealed, so that the old system may again prevail.

If the people are wise, they will never relinquish the hold they now have on affairs of government by giving up the direct primary. To do so, would mean their political enslavement.

Instead of being repealed or modified, the direct primary should be extended to include every public elective office, and the recall should be made applicable to every elective and appointive public official. Then the political "boss" would cease to be and the country would be benefited.

Hawaiian authorities are delighted at the Federal Department of Labor's letting down of the bars so that 126,000 Japs, claiming to be American citizens because born in the islands, may have unrestricted access to the mainland.

Why should they not be jubilant? They know that the Japs are undesirable, and they are glad of the opportunity to dump them into California and the other Pacific Coast states. What the people of this state should do, is to dump every Jap, native or otherwise, back into Japan. If action to that end is not taken, eventually the Japs will dump the White people out of California.

STEARNS WAS INTENSELY FOND OF politics and when Governor Alvarado, in 1837, was set aside so unceremoniously for Carlos Antonio Carrillo, he immediately joined Alvarado's party and helped him retain his admirers. Alvarado, in speaking of Stearns, said he was for the foreigners what the indomitable Angel Ramirez was for the Mexicans, with the sole difference that the latter conspired for the pleasure of conspiring and was as ready to join one party as another, while Stearns was a man of principle who was always ready to co-operate in the triumph of any movement which might redound to the injury of the Mexicans, whom he called "the perpetual ministers of bad faith."

In 1839 Stearns was again mixed up in political affairs. Governor Alvarado had appointed Don Cosme Pena prefect of the southern district, with headquarters at Los Angeles. Pena, being unpopular with Alvarado's party, laid himself open for criticism in Los Angeles. Upon arriving there, the only place offered for his use was an office in the residence of Don Abel Stearns, which he accepted, and he raised the flag of the Mexican republic on the top of a pole in front of the Stearns residence and planted a cannon.

One Sunday, when Pena was out of the city, a party of fifteen young men pulled down the Mexican flag and then, by way of added insult, slaughtered a calf at the flagpole. The explanation offered by the citizens of the affair was that Don Abel was accustomed to use the pole as a hitching post for cattle that were presently to be slaughtered, and that the flag was removed and the calf killed as a mark of their disapproval of Pena's choice of headquarters. In the territory, generally, it was taken as an insult to the national emblem. Pena resigned in anger, and Alvarado fined each member of the ayuntamiento ten dollars and compelled twenty citizens who had signed a letter to him on the subject to pay five dollars each for their rashness. The question was finally settled when, May 25, 1839, an act was passed at a session of the ayuntamiento of Los Angeles directing that the flag be removed from the house of Abel Stearns, in compliance with the representations of certain citizens, and raised over the house of the prefect, as it was not proper that it be placed on the house of a private individual.

In 1845 Stearns was active with many others against Governor Micheltorena and his "Cholos" who, as convict soldiers, the governor brought with him from Mexico.

October 19, 1842, Commodore Thomas Catesby Jones, with two American men-of-war, sailed into Monterey Bay and demanded the surrender of the fort. The Mexican officials and the officers of the army were astonished. They knew of no war between the two countries. Since Alvarado, who was acting for the absent Governor Micheltorena, had neither men nor arms to resist the demand, he gave orders to surrender. The next day the Mexican flag and forces gave place to those of the United States.

The same day Jones, on investigation, satisfied himself that the information on which he had acted was incorrect, and that he had made a mistake—"a breach of the faith of nations," as it was called,—which was liable to involve the United States in grave difficulties. He apologized to the Mexican commander and gave back possession of the fort. Commodore Jones then set sail immediately for San Pedro, so that he could apologize also to Micheltorena, who was at the time stopping in Los Angeles.

Commodore Jones reached San Pedro, January 17, 1843. There he waited, and had dinner at Stearns' warehouse while he sent a messenger up to his countryman, Don Abel, in Los Angeles, urging him to mediate between Governor Micheltorena and himself. Stearns succeeded in arranging a meeting at his house and Commodore Jones and his staff went up to Los Angeles.

Commodore Jones, in speaking of the meeting between Micheltorena and himself, says: "Scarcely had our party passed through the welcome greeting of Mr. Stearns and his charming wife and sister (no less engaging and interesting than Mrs. Stearns), attended on this occasion by several citizens of the United States sojourning at the pueblo, when the approach of his excellency, Governor Micheltorena, was announced."

Mrs. Stearns relates the incidents of the meeting between Jones and Micheltorena in the following way: "We gave a dinner to the governor, the commodore and their attendants. Everything was very friendly, they seemed to enjoy themselves, and the uniforms of the two countries were very handsome. On the next day but one the governor gave a ball. It was to be at his home, which was the only two-story house in Los Angeles. To show the Americans how patriotic the people of California were, the governor requested in the invitations that all the ladies wear white with a scarf of the Mexican colors—red, green and white. Of course, we gladly complied, though some of us had to work hard to get the costumes ready.

"The day of the ball came, but with it came rain, such a storm as I never had seen. As it drew toward evening the water came down faster and faster. The governor had the only carriage in California, and this he was to send for the commodore, Mr. Stearns, Isadora and myself; but the poor young officers had to walk, and their faces were long when they looked out at the rain and then down at their fine uniforms and shining boots.

"Our California horses were not trained to pull loads and would not work in the rain, so when the carriage came for us, it was drawn by a number of the governor's "Cholo" soldiers. We got in quite safely and it was only a short distance we had to go, but as I was getting out the wind suddenly changed and down came a torrent of water on me. It was clear that I could not go to the ball in that condition, but the governor immediately ordered the soldiers to pull the carriage back to my home, where I soon made another toilet. The ball was delightful. The governor and the commodore vied with each other in exchanging compliments and courtesies."

January 20 a series of propositions were agreed upon between Jones and Micheltorena, setting forth the facts and circumstances of the seizure of Monterey and containing an agreement that at twelve o'clock the next day the American vessels then at San Pedro should salute the Mexican flag.

It was a sad fact, however, that in spite of the apologies, dinners and balls, it was difficult for the Americans to persuade the Californians that the United States looked upon them as brothers. The Mexicans began to regard with suspicion the host of American immigrants who were coming into the territory.

The United States Government, recognizing the complexity of the California situation in 1844, appointed Thomas O. Larkin United States consul at Monterey. Larkin believed in securing California for the United States by peaceful methods, and towards this end kept the government at Washington posted as to the exact state of affairs in California. Larkin, being a personal friend of Stearns, often asked his opinion as to the state of affairs in the south and was guided by them.

April 17, 1846, a few days after hostilities had actually begun on the Rio Grande, Larkin, because of the failure of arrival of Commodore John Drake Sloat, definitely opened the campaign planned at Washington more than six months before, when the war prospect seemed dim; the plan which, if the Slidell purchase failed, was to secure California by the method that had proved so eminently successful in the case of Texas.

Larkin's first move was to address a circular letter, April 27, to three prominent men; for the northern part of California, he wrote to Jacob P. Leese, at Sonoma; for the southern part. he addressed Abel Stearns of Los Angeles and John Warner of San Diego. All three were naturalized Mexican citizens, but Larkin felt that loyalty to their mother country and to their material interests would outweigh any obligations to an adopted government. His letter refers definitely to the prospect of peaceful acquisition if war should not come. The major part of the letter, summarized, partly in quotation, follows:

"Mr. Polk has taken a high stand respecting the Oregon question, from which he will not descend." Mr. Slidell's ministry has been refused by Mexico and great political dissatisfaction has been caused in Mexico by the struggle between Herrera and Paredes. When the "Portsmouth" left Mazatlan (April 1 or 2) the commandant general of Mazatlan before leaving for Rosario, taking the archives, etc., "published a bando informing the inhabitants that the commodore would on the morrow declare the port in a state of blockade, thereby giving the Americans reason to suppose that there was war." However, Sloat had no definite news of war, although was expecting it. "No two adjacent nations c continue long as Mexico and the United Stat have been of late. War or better terms is t only alternative. Should the former now be t case, I believe that the stars would shine ov California before the 4th of July! Helping thc who see them and their posterity after them If peace should continue and friendship betwe the two nations be established, some change the near future is bound to occur. I am part to the Californians, and hope to see them prc by the change. There is much at stake in t coming events. Only better government Mexico in California can keep the people h loyal to Mexico. They already begin to lo abroad for help; "some look to England, so to the United States, and a few to France; last is a dernier resort. Those who look Europe know nothing of the European colonis life, or the heavy tax and impositions he suffer The Californian should look only to the Unit States of America for assistance, as there o will he find a fellow-feeling. Mr. Polk has iterated the Monroe Doctrine and will make good. "The day that the European by purcha or the European by war, places his foot on C fornia soil, that day shall we see the hardy s of the west come to the rescue!"

I have given my opinion to you as a friend California, and wish no copies made of the l ter. "You will oblige me by carefully readi and with the same care giving me an answer, I know you have always preferred excitement indolence, and have been much in the politi vortex of California. I must ask of you if y will inform me, by a safe conveyance, from t to time, of any wish on the part of the people your vicinity to change or better their conditi Should circumstances require it, I shall visit north and south this summer."

Warner and Leese both replied, after some lay, that they were favorable to the Uni States. The letter to Stearns at Los Ange was answered promptly and fully May 14, he is the only one of the three who entered i Larkin's campaign on behalf of the Uni States. He informed Larkin that the among the Californians for independence for a long time been cherished at the south, he opposed it, as he believed that there w neither means nor people to support it, and t overtures had been made by British agents the government of California to declare its dependence, and at the same time requestin to declare itself under the protection of t government and offering guarantees. The p ple of the south were desirous of some kind change and had decided in favor of callin convention, the deputies to be elected the las the month and to meet the middle of the n The proposal was sanctioned by Governor Pico.

In a letter dated June 12, 1846, Stearns wr that one question which some of the pec wanted answered was whether the United St would give immediate and permanent protect to California in case of a declaration in fa of the former country?

May 23, 1846, Larkin appointed Stearns s confidential agent of the United States at Angeles, which post he accepted June 27, 1 In asking Don Abel to accept the position, I kin says that, "from various circumstance consider it of sufficient importance to me, have a confidential correspondence in your p of residence, one with whom I can rely on the conducting and negotiating of my busin I may have now or may have henceforth." I kin offered Stearns no special remuneration his trouble, but said that he believed that Stearns and his interests would "be advance some future day not far distant, therefore, end may justify the means, at least in the res You must only look for recompense at pres in an extended knowledge of affairs." He Stearns to let no one know of his acceptanc the offer at present.

When Don Abel Stearns accepted the offe Thomas Larkin he was placed in a delicate p tion. He was a naturalized Mexican citizen was, at the time of his appointment of c dential agent of the United States, sub-pre at Los Angeles for the Mexican governm All of his communications to Larkin had t delivered with the utmost care and secr Stearns' ready acceptance of the offer of La was due largely to his desire for the annexa of California by the United States, which w secure a stable and permanent government California. Stearns used his influence in

CONSTRUCTIVE LEGISLATION AT SACRAMENTO SESSION

(CLARENCE M. HUNT.)

PRECEDING THE FORMAL OPENING of the Fortieth Grand Parlor of the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West in the Elks' Building at Sacramento, June 21, Past Grand President Ema Gett, on behalf of the Native Daughters of her home-city, welcomed the visitors, the Sacramento boys' band gave a delightful half-hour concert, and a key to the Capital City of California was presented by little Barbara Keehner.

Grand President Sue J. Irwin of Berkeley called the Grand Parlor to order at 10 a.m., and presided throughout the session, which concluded June 24. Following the formal opening Miss Irwin presented a report of her year's activities in the Order's behalf. The accomplishments recorded were a revelation, and she was showered with congratulations. The high-lights of Miss Irwin's report, declared by many the most noteworthy ever presented by a Grand President, follow:

"To be allowed to serve as Grand President of the Native Daughters of the Golden West is the highest honor that can be bestowed upon a Daughter of California—yet an honor fraught with grave responsibilities. The life, reputation and usefulness of the Order depend largely upon the manner in which the Grand President administers the duties of her office, and the happiness of the members and the consequent co-operation will be in proportion to the watchful care with which she cherishes the principles of the Order, and directs activities for its advancement.

" 'Attempt the end, and never stand to doubt;
Nothing's so hard, but search will find it out.'

"Upon accepting her office, it was evident to the Grand President that a definite plan must be arranged to carry on the work of the ensuing year, with objectives clearly outlined, and possibly an enriched program of activities for the Subordinate Parlors. At all times the Order is judged by the accomplishments of the Subordinate Parlors, their standing with respect to the clubs and fraternal bodies of their districts, and by their procedures and achievements, whether singly or in conjunction with other organizations.

"The Grand President firmly believes that our objectives, 'To honor and revere the memory of the Pioneers, and to advance the interests of our state and country,' are so comprehensive as to provide wide scope for all the work which the Parlors may wish to undertake.

"By honoring and revering the memory of the Pioneers, we justify our existence as an Order. As to the desirability of this, one of our prime objectives, there can be no question. To our second aim, that of advancing the interests of our state and country, we must give considerable thought, for the life of our organization today, existing as it does in this age of enlightenment and progress, depends very largely upon our ability to adapt ourselves to our environment and to the needs of this modern state and its peoples.

"The Grand President noted with regret, after taking her chair, that many of the Parlors were not gaining in membership and, thereupon, she decided that our program of activities should be so planned as to meet the needs presented by the complexity of this modern situation, a program individual, yet sufficiently uniform throughout the Order as to comply with our fundamental objectives, yet interest the public and advance the Order through the medium of our Grand Parlor projects and also through the medium of local civic efforts, compelling the attention, respect and support of the people of California.

ORGANIZATION.

"The Subordinate Parlors form the backbone of our Order. The Grand Parlor is affected largely by the condition and progress of these Subordinate Parlors.

"At a time when so much discussion is being given to the possibilities of 'scientific management' in the world of material production, it seems desirable that the principles of a more effective form of supervision be examined in order to ascertain the possibilities of applying them to the problems of guidance and direction of the efforts of the Subordinate Parlors during the year. The Grand President realized that management, direction and supervision are functions of every co-operative undertaking, very necessary to success. While members or Parlors act singly, direction can find no place, but when all work for common ends, someone must direct the diffuse efforts of the group in order to secure unity and effectiveness. As the Grand President is required to visit each Subordinate Parlor, necessitating much traveling and prolonged absence from the office, it is apparent that another supervisor responsible for the coordination of the work in each district (or smaller districts) and serving as a medium of communication between the Grand President and the district deputy grand presidents—who are largely responsible for the success of the Subordinate Parlor—is a very essential officer.

"Therefore, the office of supervising district deputy grand president was added to the previously arranged list of appointed officers, and the Grand President appreciates that the success of the year is largely due to the untiring efforts of these faithful officers who, in each case, was selected because of her experience in the work of the Order, knowledge of procedures and marked executive ability. Because of this added officer, it was possible to appoint district deputy grand presidents from among the younger members, a desirable step, in that it developed latent talent in our Parlors and encouraged greater interest in higher office. Often the supervising district deputy grand president, representing the Grand President, visited the Parlors within her jurisdiction, conferred with the district deputy grand presidents and assisted the Parlors whenever possible.

"The uniformity with which the ritualistic work has been presented, the unity of effort toward established ideals and the remarkable growth along all lines of endeavor attest the wisdom of continuing this more intensive supervision. The outstanding gains in membership and greater accomplishments of Subordinate Parlors are noted in the districts in which the supervising district deputy was most active."

Referring to the official visits, Miss Irwin said she made a total of 233 visits and traveled 34,265 miles as the Order's representative. "The official visits were always a delight—and the many delightful banquets, receptions and clever programs given in her honor will ever be most pleasant memories.

PROCEDURE.

"In determining good procedure for developing desired objectives, we must be certain that adequate motives are provided, through desirable projects, to arouse the interest of every member, so that she may participate in an active way. Through the Grand Parlor and Subordinate Parlors, the following projects are provided that each member may follow the line of endeavor where she may happily contribute to the total contribution of the Order to the advancement of California.

DIAMOND JUBILEE CELEBRATION.

"While all California was intensely interested in the diamond jubilee celebration and desirous that it should be fittingly observed, the Native Sons and Native Daughters of the Golden West were tireless in their efforts to place before the thousands of people who visited San Francisco at that time the history and romance of California.

"The historical pageant enacted by the Native Sons and Native Daughters on September 9 was the most beautiful pageant ever presented in the history of California. We may be justly proud of our contribution to the perpetuation of California history on that occasion, but equally as important to us was the effect upon our own members. No other effort ever placed us, as an organization, before the people of the world in such a favorable light and to our own members came a realization of our strength and abilities. The Subordinate Parlors, as organizations, and members individually expended a sum in excess of $35,000 in commemorating this historical event.

HISTORY AND LANDMARKS.

"Considerable thought has been given to the perpetuation of the early history and romance of California, through prizes for essays, programs, pageants and even visual aids. Much has been done to impress upon, especially the youth of California, that the history of this state is interesting and to create in him a desire to engage in profitable research.

"It is to be regretted that more of the historic landmarks of California have not been marked by the Native Daughters of the Golden West. Throughout the state there are innumerable places and buildings, silent reminders of the romantic period of California's history, standing neglected, and, to many people, unknown. It is not necessary that large sums be spent to a complish this important work—and it is ours do.

"Recently, upon visiting in Tuolumne Count the Grand President learned that it would possible to secure beautiful marble slabs abo 12 by 18 inches at a total expense of $10. The slabs could be placed as markers, bearing t desired information. What could be more su able than these messengers from the heart the Mother Lode? The Grand President has a pointed a committee to investigate and rep upon this suggestion, and, if found practicab the markers can be ordered through the office the Grand Secretary.

MISSION RESTORATION.

"At the last Grand Parlor the delegates Reina del Mar Parlor No. 126, Santa Barba appealed to the delegates assembled for financ assistance in the restoration of Santa Ynez M sion in Santa Barbara County. Although definite sum was pledged at that time, the d egates were instructed to carry the message Reina del Mar home to their respective P lors and, if possible, to secure a donation aid the Parlor at Santa Barbara in accompli ing the desired ends.

"Because it had always been easy for Rei del Mar Parlor to raise necessary funds in Sa Barbara, and also because it seemed evid that many of the Subordinate Parlors would spond to the appeal, the work of restorati necessitating the expenditure of more than $ 000, was undertaken immediately.

"While the Parlor was busily engaged ranging to secure the necessary funds to m this indebtedness the City of Santa Barbara v visited by the earthquake, which left ruin in wake, and all but mortally wounded Miss Santa Barbara, the queen of the missions. Re del Mar Parlor was indeed placed in a diffic situation; already in debt for the restoration Santa Ynez Mission, the Parlor now felt cal upon to materially assist in the efforts to s Santa Barbara Mission.

"When the Grand President visited Sa Barbara and saw the condition of this miss she felt that the course already decided upon raise funds for the necessary work was the m practical and advisable one and was glad learn from Father Augustine that it had alre been decided to assemble a large committee, r resenting all organizations in California, to responsible for the state-wide campaign funds. The Grand President felt relieved, cause she realized that it would be utterly possible for the Native Daughters or the Nat Sons, unaided, to ever raise the amount nec sary to restore this historic landmark; but co-operation with other organizations of state we might materially aid the committee its efforts. She was convinced that our con bution should be made through the medium Reina del Mar Parlor at Santa Barbara, suggested that Anna McCaughey represent Order on that important committee.

"Unfortunately the appeal from this comm tee circularized the Subordinate Parlors with coming to the Grand President for approv This was merely an oversight, but consequen so far as our organization is concerned, the w has not been centralized. It did not seem w to the Grand President to recircularize the S ordinate Parlors. So on the occasion of ev official visit to the Subordinate Parlors Grand President has urged that the Parlors r ognize this appeal and, if possible, make a tribution. The response has been most liber To date, the report set forth, $3,111.70 has b contributed for the restoration of the Fran can missions in Santa Barbara.

REDWOOD MEMORIAL GROVE.

"The last Grand Parlor set aside $500 a nucleus toward a fund for the purchase o grove of redwood trees on the Humboldt hi way, to be dedicated as a memorial to the Pi eer Fathers and Mothers of California—a liv memorial, 'Not builded by the hand of ma Therefore, the Grand President this year thusiastically urged that this fund be augmen by liberal donations from the Subordinate P lors, that we may not only complete this uni memorial, but also that we may, in a broad w reciprocate the liberality and loyalty of Northern Parlors toward every appeal of Order.

"The amount of the donations thus rece from our Subordinate Parlors is only $750 date, not so large as it would have undoubte been in another year, when the treasuries of

ACTIVE IN THE COUNCILS OF THE NATIVE SONS OF THE Golden West for many years, Sheriff William I. Traeger is asking his many friends in the vicinity to continue him in office at the August 31 primaries, that he may consummate constructive policies he has initiated during his regime.

As Grand President of the Native Sons in 1922, he was selected for the highest honor the organization, at that time of 167 Parlors, had to bestow. At the present time he is a life member of Ramona Parlor of the Order and of the history committee of the Grand Parlor, which for more than fifteen years has co-operated with the University of California in invaluable historical research work.

A native of Porterville, a Spanish War veteran and a Stanford University law student, Sheriff Traeger started his career as a peace officer in 1903, when he was appointed a deputy United States marshal. In 1907 he was named a deputy sheriff of Los Angeles County and in 1909 was admitted to the bar by the California courts.

Appointed sheriff of Los Angeles County in March, 1921, in the five years he has held the office the organization has grown from a personnel of 135 to what is believed to be the largest sheriff's office in the United States, with more than 460 men under his command.

WILLIAM I. (BILL) TRAEGER

From his earliest days as a peace officer, it is stated by those associated with him that Traeger has made a study of police work from the angle of crime prevention as the most effective means of combatting the criminal, a principle he has put into practical use in his organization.

He has constantly sought to increase the efficiency of his department by following the same principles of organization that characterize big and successful business firms, his associates say.

Sheriff Traeger is asking the voters to continue him in office on the strength of the record already made in his administration, and his sponsors are pointing to the following as achievements of his regime:

Established honor camps for trustworthy prisoners, relieving jail congestion, helping prisoners morally and physically and saving money for the taxpayers.

Instituted new plan of purchasing food for prisoners, obtaining more and better food at less cost, and saving expense to the county.

Perfected one of the most thoroughly equipped, scientific identification bureaus of any police organization in the world.

Inaugurated a bureau of records patterned after the most efficient plans in use by large and successful business corporations.

Established a department of economy, research and statistics, which studies all technical problems scientifically and promotes organization efficiency.

Solved problem of effectively policing 2,500 square miles of the county by establishing substations and districts and organizing the county constabulary.

Instituted a public relations campaign to induce the public to take precautions against crime and co-operate effectively with the officers.

Established a rifle and revolver school under expert instructors and made sharpshooting a necessary qualification for all deputies who serve under him.

Subordinate Parlors were not so severely strained by the expenses of the diamond jubilee and other appeals this year. . . . The Grand Parlor N.S.G.W. responded to an invitation from your Grand President to assist financially, should it care to have a part in this expression of appreciation of our heritage from the Pioneers, and $500 was set aside as a nucleus toward their fund, which will be used to assist the Native Daughters' project.

PIONEER RELICS.

"The many interesting collections of pioneer relics assembled by the members in museums, memorial halls and other public buildings command the attention of the visitor and perpetuate the history of the district.

"This important work has been the incentive for active participation of members in the year's program of many successful Parlors.

VETERAN WELFARE.

"During the past few years many Parlors have been expressing to the disabled veterans of the world war, confined to government hospitals in California, appreciation of the contribution of these boys to the cause of humanity. . . .

CHILD WELFARE WORK.

"Many Parlors, feeling the need of a localized program, have generously supported day nurseries, boy scouts, camp fire girls, the several state institutions where corrective work is being accomplished, and other community efforts, aiming to bring about the proper development of the future citizens of California.

"The interesting programs, card parties and enjoyable dances arranged that necessary funds might be available for these necessary community efforts, often provide social needs that would not otherwise have been met.

NATIVE DAUGHTERS' HOME.

" 'A house is built of bricks and stones,
Of sills and posts and piers;
But a home is built of loving deeds
That stand a thousand years.
The men of earth build houses,
Halls and chambers, roofs and domes;
But the women of earth, God bless them,—
The women build the homes.'

"The Native Daughters' Home at 555 Baker street, San Francisco, is indeed, 'built of loving deeds.' This is the only project which the members of the Order unselfishly support for our own—an expression of our love for and interest in one another.

"The Grand President visited the home several times during the year and attended the meetings of the home committee whenever possible. From the assessment of less than a penny a week, paid by each member of the Order annually, the home has been maintained, the adjoining property has been purchased and, in addition, the sum of $25,000 has been accumulated to be used for future development.

"In past years we have regarded the home as a place where older members of the Order might be cared for when home ties were broken or families scattered. Recently, however, the home has been meeting a new need in the Order. In many of our remote cities opportunities for our young girls are very limited and it becomes necessary for them to venture forth into the larger cities alone. It is a splendid comfort to the mothers, members of our Order, to feel that their daughters, during their first months away from the family firesides, may find a safe home under jurisdiction of the Order, where a splendid California women mothers them.

HOMELESS CHILDREN.

" 'If there is anything that will endure
The eye of God, because it still is pure,
It is the spirit of a little child,
Fresh from His hand, and therefore undefiled.
Nearer the gate of Paradise than we.
Our children breathe its airs, its angels see;
And when they pray, God hears their simple prayer,
Yea, even sheathes His sword, in judgment bare.'

"The project that places us most favorably before the public of California is, beyond question, the work accomplished through the Central Committee on Homeless Children. From Siskiyou to San Diego, from the Sierras to the sea, the Grand President did not find one Parlor that was not vitally interested in this commendable work—'the placing of the homeless child in the childless home.' While the larger Parlors and the prosperous counties in which joint affairs are held for the benefit of this work have responded most liberally with boxes of clothing and large checks, many of the smaller Parlors have been saved to the Order because the members found this endeavor to be 'the tie that binds.'

"In several instances where interest in the Parlors seemed to be lacking, the Grand President recommended that sewing bees be held to make garments with 'a personal touch,' and later reports from these same Parlors showed enthusiasm and evidence of renewed life and activity.

"If we promoted no other project, this splendid expression of faith in childhood and belief in the sanctity of the home would justify our every effort.

"It was a great pleasure to the Grand President to present this work to the Subordinate Parlors, whose members never tired of hearing of our enthusiastic secretary, Sister Mary E. Brusie, who, with that happy personality and most cordial manner, presents to us only the happy side of the work—she carries the heartaches and the sorrows—while she efficiently represents us in this splendid work.

PUBLICITY.

"Much splendid publicity in the local press has brought interest and prosperity to the Order. The Grand President regrets that Subordinate Parlors do not always report their activities to The Grizzly Bear for publication.

"Many Parlors have complained that the dead line of ten days makes it impossible for them to get their news to Los Angeles in time for publication in the current number. The magazine management has agreed to publish news north of Sacramento, received up to the 24th of the month, thereby giving those Parlors the advantages of four additional days. This should prove a valuable concession to Parlors of the northern part of the state, and should result in more news for the Native Daughter page.

"Recently the Grand President selected twelve members of the Order to contribute articles on California history to the official magazine, on article to appear each month. The editor gladl agreed to allow additional space. The first c these articles, 'Sutter at Hock Farm,' writte by Esther R. Sullivan, will appear in the Jul issue."

MEMBERSHIP.

Referring to the membership, Grand Presiden Irwin said: "There seems to be no good reaso why this Order should not increase materiall in membership each year. . . . There should b a Subordinate Parlor within easy driving dis tance of every native-born woman within th State of California, and a carefully planned pro gram of extension and development could mak this possible in a very few years." She exhibite several charts, prepared from information ob tained direct from the Subordinate Parlors, whic disclosed these interesting facts:

That to June 1 the net gain in membership fo the fiscal year had reached 1,253, by far th largest in the Order's history. [As the fisca year ends June 30, it is most probable that whe membership-figures are finally tabulated Mis Irwin's term will show a net gain of 1,500 an more.]

Seven Parlors were instituted by Grand Presi dent Irwin: Auburn 233, Auburn, Placer Coun ty, October 31, 1925; Carquinez 234, Crockett

GERMS OF SUCCESS IN EVERY NATURE

FOLLOWING HER INSTALLATION AS Grand President of the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West, Mrs. Pearl Lamb of Tracy, San Joaquin County, addressed the members of the Fortieth Grand Parlor, in session at Sacramento, saying:

"Grand officers, sisters and friends of the Native Daughters of the Golden West: Often it has been said that the world's a stage and people are actors upon it. So tonight, with a setting and a cast, we push back, fold by fold, the great drama of this fraternal organization, each one assuming her respective role and playing her part in a living prologue in this great and glorious State of California.

"I have been assigned the part of stage director for the coming year, and as I assume the responsibilities of my worthy predecessors I do so with a sense of pride and grateful appreciation, knowing full well my pathway has been made smoother, by their noble efforts, for me to attain the heights of fraternal success. What I desire most during my term of office is a clear mind and a cool head, realizing that the best and most permanent pleasures are those that come from the faithful fulfillment of life's duties and obligations.

"Like a lighthouse that illumines and beautifies the swashing waves of the storm, your faith and confidence in me will help me to ride above any difficulties that I may encounter. I will endeavor to do each day, in every moment, the best I can by the light I have, for no one knows what she can do until she tries, for it is by trying we learn.

"The germs of success are in every nature, but hard work is required in order to mature them. If one fixes her eyes on a certain goal, be it ever so high, and makes for it with all her strength, she is quite certain to rise above obstructions that beset her pathway. 'Not enjoyment and not sorrow, is our destined end or way; but to act that each tomorrow, finds us farther than today.'

"I am deeply grateful to all grand officers and delegates who have supported my candidacy at different times, and for all courtesies shown me during my term of office as Grand Vice-president, especially to the members of my own Parlor [El Pescadero No. 82]. It is through their co-operation and interest that I have attained the highest office in the gift of this Grand Parlor. I hope I may merit the same confidence during the year as Grand President.

" 'After all, there is never a sorrow should cause us repining, for sorrows were made for the spirit's refining. When you think you too long have waited and striven, then remember you've gotten as much as you've given. In the loaf of your burden just look for the leaven, for God is in the world and the world is His Heaven'. "

GREETINGS.

Grand President Lamb's first official communication, dated at Tracy, July 1, and addressed to the officers and members of the Subordinate Parlors, follows:

"It is with love and devotion I extend to each and every one fraternal greetings as I enter upon the duties of Grand President. I w endeavor to do my best, at all times, and wi your co-operation and wise council I feel con dent of a successful year in office. I shall alwa keep in mind that there is an invisible pen ev writing over my head and making an exa register of all my transactions.

"In justice to myself, I shall try to live in a atmosphere that keeps me living my best, as one is so insignificant as to be without influenc The changes in our varying moods are all r corded in the delicate barometer of the lives others. Therefore ever let our influence filt through human love and sympathy. By o very presence we should be a tower of strengt to those around us.

MRS. PEARL LAMB,
New Head of Order Native Daughters.

"I shall count on your loyalty and co-opera tion. It will be the propelling power that wi carry me onward and upward to a successfu year. Should, by chance, failure come to m at any time, I will meet it bravely. I shall loo back upon the past with no regret, and wit heroic courage face results, whatever they ma be, knowing that I could make them no differen

" 'If we sit down at set of sun and coun the things that we have done, and countin finds one self-denying act, one word that ease the heart of him who heard, one glance mos kind that fell like sunshine where it went, the we may count that day well spent'. "

Yes, I'm tired of the dry land,
The rushing city pace;
I want to feel the salt wind
Blow soft upon my face.
To set the course to seaward
Where the white gulls swoop and dive,
And then forget my troubles
In the joy that I'm alive!
—Alfred Stuart Myers in "Yachting."

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIANS ARE SOMEtimes boastful about their state. With considerable magniloquence they will tell you of the sunshine, the highways, the oranges and the lemons, of Hollywood, Hiram Johnson and Ben Turpin; they will tell you that Southern California is the world's greatest playground, and will point with rodomontadeic pride to the country clubs, where golf, tennis and polo are sports royal enjoyed in winter and summer alike; and, if you are a sportsman and speak the lingo of the game, they will tell you that the great Southland is the creme de la creme of Sir Volstead's kingdom, and that here you can choose from a great assortment the recreation you desire and enjoy with zeal and ardor the sunny side of a happy existence for evermore.

You will listen and you will agree with what they say but if, perchance, in your veins flows the blood of the Vikings, or if you have once felt the sting of salty spray while sailing your own boat over a wind-swept, foam-patterned blue ocean, you will wonder why Southern Californians do not boast more about the big Pacific lapping at their shore, and why, in their ardent boosting of the sunshine state and the great playground, they almost overlook such an important factor as yachting and sailing on this choice bit of the seven great seas.

Then you will decide that it is because the majority of Southern California pleasureseekers are landsmen. They have not discovered the lure of the Pacific and the big thrill of driving their own ship down to the sea. But nevertheless they are learning, and additions are being made steadily to the thousand-odd pleasure craft in Southern California waters, and yachting as a sport is up and coming. Every four or five weeks a stately pleasure craft, new and shiny, with flags and bunting flying slides off the ways at one or other of the many boat-building yards located on or in the vicinity of Long Beach-Los Angeles Harbor and is added to the ever-growing fleet of yachts. And why not get afloat for your fun? Put this question to the average person who has never owned a pleasure craft and you will generally meet with one or two answers. "I cannot afford it," or, "I do not care for the water."

Recently one of my friends, the editor of a popular yachting magazine, discoursed to me for the better part of one night on the subject of owning a boat, and some of his deductions were so well founded that they should be broadcasted to the general non-boat-owning public and everyone else lingering about the "world's greatest playground" looking for amusement.

This happened while he and I were cruising off Long Beach in a little sailing boat. We enjoyed a wonderful trip, except for that part of it made by automobile from a city fifty miles inland to the California Yacht Club, where we went aboard. It was ten o'clock Saturday night when we cast off the mooring and he still carried a grouch that had accumulated while bucking the heavy automobile traffic over those fifty miles of densely-crowded pavements. But as we rounded San Pedro light and met a friendly easterly quartering our port, his ill feelings toward motor cars, traffic cops, shrieking breaks and stinking gasoline fumes dissipated completely in the balmy atmosphere. He leaned back leisurely, moved the tiller, cupped his hands over a lighted match, got his pipe going and ruminated:

"There is a lure to the Pacific that is hard to define, harder still to resist. I can well appreciate the feelings of that bluff old Elizabethan seadog, John Drake, when he wrote to her majesty, good Queen Bess, after sighting the broad reach of this smiling blue expanse, 'I will find no peace in my own mind till I have sailed an English ship in these seas.' And even before, when that adventurous gentleman, Vasco Nunez de Balboa, discovered this vast body of water and named it the Pacific Ocean because, as he stated, it was the most peaceful and the most beautiful sea he had yet encountered, he surely cleated the halliard snug on its proper cleat." He went on to say:

"The yachtsman off the Southern California coast is not troubled with sudden thunderstorms and squalls, the tempests of New England, West India hurricanes, not to mention typhoons nor williwaws of other sections. True, now and then in the summer a Santa Ana springs up from the southeast, but this is not a dangerous storm and it blows itself out after a short time. The winter season here is disturbed by an occasional hard blow, lasting for three or four days or even longer, but weather bureau and newspapers warn the sailorman long in advance and a deaf-dumb-and-blind yachtsman should not be caught unawares. Never in the history of Southern California yachting has there been a fatality due to stormy weather. You have no doubt read in the newspapers about narrow escapes of yachts and near disasters in storms, but think hard, and perhaps you will remember that most of those have been 'front page stories' for movie actors and were written by high-salaried press agents.

"And now, if you own a boat on this ocean where will you go and what will you see? Look at a map or chart of the coast. There are islands that call the cruiser—friendly little islands rising out of the sea mists ahead having distinctly inviting aspects that beckon insistently and loudly to all who love the sea; some rugged, strange, pebbly beaches often disclose a fragment of pottery, a crudely-shaped stone to tell of a race of men long gone, a people that have vanished forever. The variegatedness of their outlines, the sense they present of guarding great silent secrets just behind their shores are superlatively alluring. Santa Catalina, San Clemente, San Nicholas, Santa Cruz, Santa Rosa, San Miguel are the largest in the group of channel islands and nearly all have well-charted and protected coves and bays awaiting to greet your inquiring bowsprit. They are always a joy and offer you the objective for many a power or sailing cruise for Saturday afternoon, a week-end, a week, a month or for the summer.

"What kind of a boat is best for sailing these waters, you may ask. The old square-sailed windjammer is going fast. Drake and Magellan, De Gamma and Cook and all of the rest of that daring crowd are but figures written on the dusty pages of history. The modern yacht will travel a league in a breeze when these clumsy craft of old would scarcely make headway for a sea mile.

"The baggy sails of the early sea rovers are now displaced by trim, well-cut canvas, the blunt, bowed craft have evolved into sleek, sharp-nosed cruisers of today. Yet the same ocean spreads out to the faraway skyline mystical and intriguing as it did in the days of the early navigators. The islands off the coast have scarce changed one bit since Cabrillo first sighted Santa Catalina and the age-old salt in our veins cries aloud for the rasp of the sea-soaked mainsheet, the feel of the kicking wheel and the flap of the canvas, for the lifting surge of the open sea free from the trammels and cramping rules and regulations of the land.

"Look among the present-day craft. Schooners, yawls, ketches, sloops, jibheaded and gaff-rigged with this and that type hull, and among the power cruisers, the bridged decked, raised decked, trunk cabined, the V-bottomed, the sea skiffs and many others. To the novice, the nautical lingo is puzzling. How is the landlubber to know?

"First of all, the sport of yachting must be divided into two classes, sailing and motorboating. America is a motor-wise country, and figuratively and literally speaking it is only a step from the motor car to the deck of a motor-driven express cruiser, or from motor-car wise-

AN IDEAL VACATIONLAND
ON CALIFORNIA'S LARGEST FRESH WATER LAKE

A FEW HOURS' MOTOR RIDE FROM SAN Francisco Bay over one of California's most wonderful state highways takes you to the shores of Clear Lake in Lake County, the "Little Switzerland of America". Here, on the shores of California's largest natural body of fresh water, has been built one of the fairest year-around resorts to be found on the Pacific Coast.

Clearlake Park occupies a large wooded peninsula reaching out into the waters of the lake, with some twelve miles of sandy beach. The altitude of the lake being only 1,350 feet above sea level, enables everyone to enjoy its charm without physical discomfort, while every outdoor sport and recreation desired has been provided by Nature or by man.

Clearlake Park is the oldest subdivision on the lake and is the result of the creative work of a group of San Francisco and Los Angeles businessmen who have combined sufficient capital to build the fascinating resort.

Adjoining a natural cove which has been developed into a satisfactory harbor, lies the thriving town of Clearlake, with stores, hotel, garage, postoffice and all the conveniences and comforts of modern life.

The photographs shown here were all taken recently at Clearlake Park, though they give but a limited idea of the charm and beauty of this magnificent playground.

A free campsite has been built on the shore of the lake for the convenience of motor tourists, where those who prefer to live outofdoors in their tents may do so without putting themselves under obligations.

In one of the most beautiful spots along the lake shore is Pine Dell Club, limited to 450, where a clubhouse, log cabins, dancing, swimming, etc., may be enjoyed exclusively by the members.

Although Pine Dell Club is on the peninsula owned by the Clearlake Park Company, it is a separate proposition, with exclusive bathing beach, clubhouse, garage, and is, in fact, a distinctive country club where members may enjoy their outdoor recreation unmolested. The club has built a number of attractive log cabins, each with sufficient living accommodations to enable each member or his guests to occupy space sufficient for three persons for two weeks each year without charge. This is a radical departure in the management of country clubs as it enables a member to live at the property without going to the expense of building himself an individual cabin.

Clear Lake is the largest lake wholly within the state, and owing to its beautiful setting in the surrounding hills it is one of the most beautiful to be found anywhere in the West. It is from twenty-five to thirty miles long and from two to nine miles wide; covering eighty-four square miles and has one hundred miles of shoreline.

One of the great disadvantages of most lakes in California is the lack of accessibility all the year around. Most California lakes are set high in the mountains and are snowed in during a large portion of the year. Clearlake Park, however, is accessible three hundred and sixty-five days in the year over one of the best state highways in California, without precipitous climbing of stiff and dangerous mountain grades such as are ex-of the lake provide excellent hunting for wild duck and geese.

Everything that California has to offer—all that has made this state famous throughout the world—climate, scenery, tree-clad hills, clear waters, medicinal springs and healthful living conditions, are concentrated at their best at Clear Lake.

The people of California are imbued with the vacation spirit and the citizens of this state probably do more outdoor touring and camping than those of any other. They have found that the best business tonic is to slip away for a vacation of at least two weeks and motor to some easily accessible spot where they may enjoy the natural beauties which God has given the Golden State. Probably nowhere else can they find so many comforts and conveniences set by the hand of man in the midst of the most beautiful natural surroundings than at Clearlake Park.

HOLLYWOOD'S NATURAL AMPHITHEATER

Harry Barratt

(ASSISTANT SECRETARY, HOLLYWOOD CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.)

TUCKED AWAY IN A POCKET OF THE Santa Monica Mountains almost in the heart of Hollywood, lies a tract of some 167 acres of land in which is a hollow, scooped out by the hand of nature and which has become known throughout the entire nation as the Hollywood Bowl.

This natural amphitheatre, which was discovered only a few short years ago as a possible scene for open-air musical and dramatic productions, of broad expanse and almost surrounded by the hills, possesses singular acoustic values and characteristics and its discovery has resulted in giving to Hollywood what has popularly become known as the "Symphony Under the Stars."

The unfolding of this place of wonder provided Hollywood an opportunity to develop its natural artistic bent, offering as it did the chance to build a great institution in which could be promoted orchestral and dramatic offerings of the highest character. It offered itself to the public as a spot in which adoration might be offered to Christian ideals in the commemoration of the great church feast, "The Resurrection," and it offered a splendid outlet for a pent-up community desire to express its artistic emotions through the medium of the musical compositions of such masters as Wagner, Tschaikowsky, Verdi, Lizst and others, rendered by orchestras numbering more than 100 instrumental artists and conducted by directorial geniuses. It provided an opportunity for more than 21,000 persons to hear a single performance by Ameleta Galli-Curci, and was the scene of the rendition of Bizet's "Carmen" and this year will be the scene of opera productions as well as the annual summer concerts.

Four years ago the Hollywood Bowl was a community experiment in outdoor summer concerts. Today it is an established institution offering every opportunity for development along its prescribed lines, and inviting the world to come and enjoy the offerings its promoters present. It represents democratization of music through its "two-bit" symphony concerts, attracting alike all classes and thus tends to bring to the masses the best and highest in music, the result being a demand for a loftier standard in orchestral and other musical productions. The bowl is the shrine where all may seek and enjoy tranquility which comes only through the medium of the sublime in music and where, under its spangled canopy, one may quaff to complete satisfaction the mystic nectar which enthralls with delight.

Plays, pageants and grand operas have all been presented in the Hollywood Bowl on a lavish and magnificent scale, their lighting, costuming, scenery and production marvels of stagecraft. Peace celebrations, when women from all parts of the world planned for the permanent world-harmony all long for, have been held there, and solemn services in memory of two dead presidents have stirred the thousands who participated.

The golden voices of Schumann-Heink, Galli-Curci, Edward Johnson and many other artists have filled the bowl with music, and all manner of recreational gatherings of immense size have brought the people of this and surrounding communities closer together in aim and understanding, under the giant, ancient pepper trees.

Within the picturesque walls of this dream place of music the ceremony was enacted a festival commemorating the completion of a $1,000,000 unit which forms the first section of a $1,000,000 permanent improvement program planned for ultimate completion inside of a few years.

Hollywood Bowl now belongs to the people of Los Angeles County, the property having been deeded to the county by the Bowl Association in order that there may be brought to fruition a plan for improved recreational facilities which will bring something more and more unique and singular to Hollywood in the general scheme to establish a great artistic center in the motion-picture capital.

The bowl's possibilities were discovered first by a small group of beauty-loving people when its sixty acres were owned by two public spirited women, Mrs. Chauncey Clarke and Mrs. Christine Wetherill (founder and transcriber of the "Pilgrimage Play"). They, with Harry Ellis Reed, E. N. Martin, Dr. T. Percival Gerson and others explored from rim to rim of the vast natural theatre, and dreamed great things for the hollow in the heart of the Hollywood hills. The two owners sold it for a low price to the community, in the interest of community art development. The Community Park and Art Association ("Bowl Association") was formed in 1922 and with its "dollar for life membership" offering its fellowship to everyone, it has grown to about 5,000 members.

The price, approximately $65,000, that was paid for the bowl was raised in several ways. First, by the "Penny a Day" campaign, when every family kept a little penny-box on the "parlor mantel" and the children saved pennies, with their elders, thus all having a warm interest in the beautiful spot they were helping to procure for their community. Larger contributions, ranging from hundreds to thousands of dollars, increased the fund, and finally, through Hugo Kirchofer's and Mrs. J. J. Carter's personal efforts, the mortgage indebtedness was raised at the close of the 1923 summer concerts.

The first season of bowl symphony concerts had Alfred Hertz as conductor, Emil Oberhoffer, poet and musician, following in 1923. In the following season Hertz returned and last year found a number of eminent conductors in charge at different times, Hertz appearing during the closing fortnight, with Sir Henry Wood opening the season.

Emil Oberhoffer inaugurated the fifth concert season, July 6. He has often been referred to as the "poet of the symphony" for his exquisitely beautiful interpretations. During his many years as conductor of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra he brought it to great heights of popularity. Aside from the regular concerts given in Minneapolis, its history shows several transcontinental tours under his direction.

Sir Henry Wood, distinguished European musician who leads the Queen's Hall Orchestra in the promenade concerts in London, and who last year traveled 12,000 miles to direct the Hollywood Bowl orchestra in four concerts, will again be a guest conductor at the southland's summer symphony. This year, Sir Henry will direct during the third and fourth weeks of the concert season. His engagement is lengthened by reason of the thousands of requests from his devoted listeners at the bowl last year.

Willem van Hoogstraten, one of the youngest conductors who has ever appeared at the bowl, a musician of dynamic personality and a master-interpreter of thrilling appeal, will conduct again.

The Hollywood Bowl concerts are being held, as formerly, on Tuesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday at 8:30 o'clock in the evening.

The old wooden benches which served during the past four years have been removed and 20,000 new and more comfortable seats have been installed. These and other improvements marked the opening of this season and represent part of the Allied Architects' $1,000,000 plan which will turn the old bowl into a magnificently beautiful garden theatre.

Prior to the beginning of the regular concert season scheduled for July 6, a grand dedicatory opening benefit was given June 22. This was the most elaborate musical festival ever presented in Hollywood Bowl.

Thomas R. Jones

(COMPILED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR.)

THIS BEING THE CENTENNIAL OF the Declaration of Independence, extensive preparations were made to celebrate it, not only in California, but in every part of the union. Patriotic American citizens vied with one another to give the best service toward the observation of the day, and the consequence was that in every city, town and hamlet the decorations of bunting and evergreens, the parades, the literary exercises and the burning of gunpowder exceeded anything before known.

In San Francisco there was a morning parade of the military and in the afternoon a sham bombardment of the forts by the navy from Mare Island. Thousands of people gathered upon the hills overlooking the bay to witness the novel sight and saw an immense firing of blank shots by the ships and the forts. Other cities and towns in the state had big celebrations and, fortunately, there were no distressing accidents nor disastrous fires to mar the festivities of the day. The consensus of newspaper opinions was, that it was the greatest celebration of the Fourth of July that had yet been seen.

A new and commodious lumber yard was established this month on the corner of Fifth and Spring streets, Los Angeles.

A meeting of wheat-growers from all over the state, to the number of several hundred, was held in San Francisco July 25. Their proceedings were in secret, and were aimed at improvement in transportation facilities.

A trot for $2,000 was contested in Los Angeles July 5 between "Brushy John" and "Cactus," locally owned trotters, and was a big betting affair. "Brushy John" won by distancing "Cactus" in the fourth heat.

OIL SPRING DISCOVERED.

The supervisors of San Francisco passed an ordinance requiring the hair on the heads of all criminals to be clipped. This reduced the number of Chinese criminals seventy-five percent during the first week of its enforcement.

Ventura had a slight shock of earthquake at 8:45 p. m., July 10.

The town of Newhall, Los Angeles County, named after the owner of the rancho through which the line of the Southern Pacific ran, was laid out this month.

A Democratic state convention was held in San Francisco July 25 and selected as candidates for presidential electors the following: Dr. J. C. Shorb, Judge J. S. Hager, Frank Ganahl, Stuart M. Taylor, James H. Budd and Barclay Henley. A big ratification meeting addressed by Governor Irwin and a score of warhorses was held.

J. F. Dye discovered an oil spring in Ventura County about ten miles from the coast in the mountains. The oil from the spring flowed into a depression that filled and contained a large quantity of crude oil. He located a claim and went to Los Angeles and formed a company of capitalists there who were going to develop the find.

A branch line of the Central Pacific between Oakland and Berkeley was opened for operation July 25 but came to an unexpected halt when the train, proceeding on its way, found the track obstructed by an old woman seated between the rails that crossed her land and holding a cocked revolver in her hand. She threatened to shoot the train crew if they did not immediately back up. This they did, and let the officials settle the dispute with her.

FARMERS WOULD LYNCH SPIRITUALIST.

F. P. F. Temple, a Los Angeles banker, filed a petition in bankruptcy, showing his liabilities at over $200,000 and a list of assets of uncertain value.

A fire July 15 on Broadway and Franklin streets, Oakland, burned a block of buildings and caused a heavy loss.

At Stockton July 22 a spiritualist named Jacobs was arrested for the abduction of a fa er's daughter in San Joaquin County and lod in jail. During the afternoon farmers fr nearby districts to the number of several h dred surrounded the jail and declared their tention of lynching Jacobs. The military c pany was called out and fifty deputy sher were sworn in to prevent summary action. cobs was finally hustled out and secretly tal aboard a train, put in a boxcar and taken fr the city.

Mike Madden, employed in a hydraulic m at Smartsville, Yuba County, July 1 died fr a sunstroke. This was the second death fr that cause during the existing hot spell.

July 19 a cooper in San Francisco was sh ing a barrel stave with a drawknife, wh slipped as he drew it toward him. It cut o his abdomen and killed him.

Mrs. Jaycox, a leading and popular sch teacher of Sacramento City, while standing u a rock at the end of Cypress Point near M terey, was swept off it by a sudden high w and drowned July 6.

A 9-year-old boy named Wilcoxson at Salir Monterey County, July 7 was riding upo grain wagon. He fell off and the wheel, p ing over his neck, broke it and caused his de

CANNON BALL IN AMADOR TREE RECALLS DAYS OF KIT CARSO

Thomas L. Bartlett, a resident of Amad County for many years, while falling trees n Jackson several days ago encountered a v hard object in one of the trunks. On close amination he found it to be a small cann ball, which he presented to the Amador Cou Chamber of Commerce.

This brings back memories of the days wh John Fremont's scouts under the leadership Kit Carson in 1847 and 1848 blazed the tr through Amador County. It is thought the b was fired from one of their small brass cannc in an Indian skirmish.—Amador Ledger.

"SONGS IN FLOWERS" WILL BE THEME OF 1927 TOURNAMENT

Laura Packard Daniels

(WOMEN'S DIVISION OF THE PASADENA TOURNAMENT OF ROSES.)

CALIFORNIA WOMEN ARE TO TAKE the most active part in the coming celebration of the rose in Pasadena. The annual Tournament of Roses which is held every New Year is the outstanding event of beautiful pageants in the country.

It was the happy thought of Mrs. Florence Magill Wallace, well-known throughout the East and Middle West for her original work in pageantry and her connection as entertainment editor of the "Ladies' Home Journal," to organize the Women's Division of the tournament, comprised of women representatives from each city and town in Southern California. The first meeting of this Women's Division was held in Pasadena, April 21, with twenty-six members of Pasadena and thirty-six towns represented by the member appointed by their local chambers of commerce. Mrs. Myron Hunt of Pasadena, chairman, proved her successful leadership in securing the expression of the entire membership, which was unanimous for the theme for 1927, "Songs in Flowers."

Each city is invited to enter a float which will depict in form and tableau one of the old and beloved songs. For instance, "Silver Threads Among the Gold," to be carried out in yellow flowers entwined with strands of silver ribbon, and picturing the old couple in their old-fashioned garden. The title of each song will be displayed on a banner carried in front of each entry.

The directors of the Pasadena Tournament will set to music the words of a "rose poem" collected from entries in a nation-wide contest now being held by the Tournament of Roses Association, with $500 in cash as the first prize.

of Roses Association, were most enthusiastic over the report brought to them from the Women's Division and adopted the above title. President Harry M. Ticknor, Joseph Count and C. Hal Reynolds are the advisory board of the Women's Division.

Mrs. J. A. Elias was appointed chairman of the rose planting week, and the results of her work and interest have been most satisfactory.

Mrs. Lena R. Pepperdine, the Los Angeles representative, gave a luncheon June 14, to which three hundred of the most representative citizens of Los Angeles were invited. "All of Southern California is interested in the Tournament of Roses," declared Mrs. Pepperdine in her brief address of welcome at the luncheon. "Officials of the Tournament Association feel that the pageant should more fully represent all of the Southland, and they have invited Los Angeles and all other cities to help in the annual unfoldment of the vivid wonders of this country."

Mrs. Carrie Jacobs Bond, who was present, declared herself in love with ALL of California in her brief talk, adding, "Why should we try to advance one portion of the state at the expense of another? If Southern California is going to provide all of the roses, why not ask Northern California to bring a redwood tree or two to this pageant of wonder?"

Mrs. Bond has consented to write a song as her gift to the Tournament Association. The words of this song are to be obtained through a nation-wide poem contest. The Tournament Association offers a prize of $500 for a poem of not less than twelve nor more than twenty lines with the rose as its theme. It is further announced by Mr. Ticknor that this song will be adopted as the official Tournament of Roses song, to be sung on New Year's Day and become one of the great features of the parade. Rules for this contest may be had by applying to the Tournament Association office, 100 South Raymond Avenue, Pasadena, California.

Mrs. Jeanette Porter Meehan, daughter of Gene Stratton-Porter, is the chairman of the rose poem committee. In a recent interview with her, Mrs Meehan said: "The rose holds a warmer place in the hearts of the people than any other flower. It reigns supreme in the realm of flowers; it delights us constantly with the perfection of its form, the charm of its color and the fragrance of its perfume." It may be interesting to the young readers of this magazine and the lovers of Gene Stratton-Porter to know that Jeanette Porter Meehan is the "Girl of the Limberlost," and Leo Meehan, her noted husband, is the hero of that popular romance. The "Little Scout," the small heroine of the "Keeper of the Bees," is the daughter of the "Girl of the Limberlost."

There are many interesting meetings scheduled in the near future by the chairman of each town and city in the interest of the coming celebration, New Year's Day, 1927. Fourteen cities have chosen the title of their song at this writing, twelve have chosen their flower which will be worn as the floral badge by the citizens who attend. For instance, San Bernardinoans will wear the orange blossom, Comptonians will wear the pink carnation, Temple has chosen the pansy, Arcadia the lily and, of course, Pasadena the rose. And so, the women of California are doing now, as they always have done, their very best, for the glory of their state, the honor of their "home towns" and the love of their homes and gardens.

And not only are the women giving of their best, but the children are doing their bit. Students in the Pasadena schools have made designs for the New Year's floats as a part of their regular work. The best of these designs will be submitted, gratis, to those who need help in carrying out a plan for a song depicted by flowers.

These old familiar songs will recall many memories to the 800,000 spectators. Sentiment will be the subject of the day; in fact, the whole pageant might be called "A California Love Story." As life seems to be made up of memories, why not add another lovely flower in your garden and take some part in this unique and beautiful Tournament of Roses, as an entrant, a spectator, or just plant another rose in your garden and call it the tournament rose. You can do even more; send in your own idea of suitable words for the rose song to be set to ness to motor-boat wiseness. One of course must learn the rules of the road at sea as well as on land, but the ocean is not, as the highways are, crowded with red blinking stop-lights and the task is not complicated. It is well for the novice to start with a power boat, for sailing is a master art in sportdom. But many of the Southern California corinthians who shun the idea of a craft driven by any other power than the Pacific breezes mastered this art of sailing sufficiently well in a season to bring their boats safely through ordinary emergencies.

UNDER SAIL

"To the beginner in the game a visit to the shipyards on the Long Beach-Los Angeles Harbor will be an education. In a few hours here it will be possible to acquire information that in ordinary course of events would take weeks to obtain. Rubbing elbows with those men of old-established concerns who have been building sailing ships and power cruisers for years of the type suitable for the waters off Long Beach, and with the designers and naval architects who make it their business to study the purchaser's needs and requirements in new boats, and listening to the pros and cons concerning this and that type boat are worth while to the sportsman who is contemplating making the broad reaches of the Pacific his playground.

"Here, too, he will see all of the common types of pleasure craft,—schooners, yawls, ketches and sloops,—and a large number of different designs in power-driven craft. He will soon learn to distinguish one from the other, and will learn that it is the arrangement of the sails and rigging that places the sailboat in one or the other of the classifications and not the shape of the hull. Some of the ABC information that will be picked up on the first visit is that a schooner may have two or more masts. Two is the predominating number unless the boat is very large. The mainmast is placed aft the center of the boat and the foremast is well forward. Forward of the foremast the jib is attached to the bowsprit. If there is no bowsprit it is spoken of as rigged inboard. A ketch might be called a reversed schooner rig. The mainmast is stepped well forward and the smaller mizzenmast is aft but forward of the steering gear. The yawl has two masts like the schooner and ketch and is quite similar to the ketch except that the mizzenmast is shorter than on the ketch and is placed aft of the steering gear and abaft of the afterwater line. The sloop has but one mast and her sails are the mainsail and jibs, the latter being attached to the bowsprit.

"At the Long Beach boat yards will be found yachts, some large and palatial, designed by naval architects to coincide with the owner's requirements right down to the minutest details, the cost sometimes running into many thousands of dollars. And here also it will be found that the building of pleasure craft in Southern California has been worked out carefully along modern business principles, and that there are being built here the best boats in the world for the money. And that among the smaller craft, quantity production has been a great factor in reducing prices of the new standardized models.

"And finally, it will be learned that the purchase of a boat is an operation very similar to the purchase of an automobile. A good craft can be had for a few hundred dollars, or many thousand can be spent. But differing from the purchase of a motor car, buying a boat is more of a financial investment. Not only will the buyer collect large dividends of pleasure and enjoyment for years, but the actual depreciation of the monetary value of the boat will be written off much slower than that of a car.

"Finally, the selection of a boat will be made sail or power. Then the owner will dig up a couple of large scale charts of the Pacific, say from Ensenada to Point Conception, and"—

The moon hung low in the west. The easy swells coming from over a thousand miles of open sea to the westward gently cradeled our little craft as we neared those misty and unreal shores of Catalina Island silhouetted against the luminous sky. As if propelled by unseen hands, we glided, phantom-like, around a headland and into a little cove. With the anchor down, my friend re lighted his pipe.

"There is much more to be said about the joys of yachting off the Southern California shores," he said. "Someone must toot the horn of the old Pacific and boast of its wonders until this country of landsmen fully realizes that the ocean is a great playground." Then he ceased speaking. He had been silenced by the spell of the sea and the grandeur of the perfect night.

GRAND PARLOR DOINGS REPORTED.

Visitors from Santa Ana, San Pedro and Los Angeles were present at the June 2 meeting of Long Beach Parlor No. 239 N.S.G.W., when the ritual was exemplified by a mixed team and several applications for membership were presented. Officers were elected, Edgar C. Crowell being chosen president.

Among the speakers of the evening were Grand Trustee John T. Newell, D.D.G.P. Burrel D. Neighbours, Ralph I. Harbison, "Bill" Reuter, Deputy Grand President Albert V. Mayrhofer, Walter M. Slosson, Willard Buchanan. Judge Percy Hight made an interesting report of the Santa Rosa Grand Parlor, to which he was a delegate from Long Beach. Refreshments were served at the meeting's close.

SEWING CLUB ENTERTAINED.

The California Thimble Club of Long Beach Parlor No. 154 N.D.G.W., engaged in sewing for the homeless children, was entertained June 3 at the home of Mrs. Leona Dodd. June 14 Mrs. H. F. Oatman was the hostess, at her home.

MAKE A BUDGET AND KNOW WHERE YOU ARE GOING.

The Bureau of Home Economics of the United States Department of Agriculture says "make a budget," and tells how to do it.

First, estimate the size of your income for the year, without being too optimistic. Put down what you are fairly sure you will have. It is always easier to spend a bit of extra income than it is to make a smaller income go a little farther.

Now make a list of all the things your family will have to have for the year: Rent, fuel, light, and all the things for running the house, food, clothes for each person, taxes, insurance. You ought to have some fun, buy some books, give something to a good cause. You must look after your health. You want to save something. Put it all down. Include every little item and what you think each will cost. Add up your list. How does it compare with your estimated income? If it is smaller, you are happy. If not, go over your list. Use your imagination. There are leaks, and you can find them. But you can't spend more than you make and be comfortable.

Your budget is made. You have a spending and saving plan. Get the whole family to cooperate in using it. No doubt before the year is over, by all working together, you will improve it.

The budget will be easy to live up to if you get an account book—any blank book will do—and write down in it each day what you have spent. Don't jumble up all the items together. Put all the food items on one page, all the clothes on another, all the savings on a third, and so on. Add up each page at the end of every month. Compare the totals with your budget. This will tell you where you are going. You'll know if you're running your expenditures or if they are running you.

California Rich—With an assesed valuation of $6,657,797,880, representing a real value of $12,000,000,000, California is the fourth richest state in the nation.

MOTORISTS WARNED TO PLAN TOURS IN ADVANCE.

With the roads and highways more crowded than ever before and with seasonal detours and congestion on many of the trunk highways, the American Automobile Association has broadcasted a warning from its headquarters in Washington, D. C., urging motorists to plan their tours ahead and not to depend on wayside information.

"Because of this increase it is more essential than ever before that the motorist plan his touring trip ahead of his actual departure," according to George S. Grant, manager of the touring bureau of the California State Automobile Association, the California affiliate of the nation-wide motoring organization. "Failure to do so may involve a heavy penalty in the form of delay and discomfort.

"Thousands of car owners, when planning their trips, do not realize that it takes more than good roads, attractive scenery and up-to-date accommodations to make a tour pleasant. The most essential of all preparations is a dependable road information service available at all points on which the motorist can absolutely depend."

MOTOR VEHICLE DIVISION HAS TRAVELING BRANCH OFFICE.

A traveling "branch office" on wheels of the State Division of Motor Vehicles has been placed in operation and if it proves a success another will be added. It will follow the trails of speeders and reckless drivers in California and otherwise inform the motoring public of state traffic laws and regulations.

The "branch office" is a high-powered truck furnished with office equipment, motor vehicle registration blanks and other appurtenances necessary to disseminating general information about the department regulations and enforcing the law. It will travel all over the state and will enable the motor-vehicle division to set up an office at a moment's notice in any town through which it is passing.

The officers will make regular stops for the purpose of holding examinations for operators, arresting violators and giving information about registration. Equipment will be carried for testing headlights and checking excess loads. A motorcycle will be kept on board for chasing speeders.

OPENING ALL-YEAR YOSEMITE GATEWAY WILL BE CELEBRATED.

Plans for celebrating the completion of the all-year highway into Yosemite Valley are being perfected by a committee headed by D. V. Nicholson, assistant secretary of the California State Automobile Association. The Order of Native Sons of the Golden West is represented by Grand President Hilliard E. Welch.

July 31 has been selected as the date of the dedication of the new all-year gateway into Yosemite Valley and on August 1 the valley's romantic history will be told in pageantry.

Completion of the all-year highway, which will be thrown open to traffic July 31, will end the reign of the storm god, which has barred motor travel from Yosemite several months each year. By a happy coincidence, the completion of this project, which California has looked forward to for years, coincides with the seventy-

ALWAYS BE CAREFUL.

The cautious man is not a driver that travels at the slowest pace, but the individual who does not take chances just in order to save a second or so of time. The good driver "rides" his brake at the blind intersection, he does not place any great amount of faith in the "other fellow," and he can bring his car to a stop if the hazard of accident is near.

Do not forget that the motor car is a deadly weapon when it is beyond control, or when it is driven by a reckless individual who fails to follow the rules of safety. Make the highways and byways safer for yourself and the other fellow by adhering at all times to the commonsense regulations of caution. Remember that the "A B C" of safety is, "Always Be Careful."

UNIFORM TRAFFIC ORDINANCE.

The uniform traffic ordinance, proposed by the California Public Safety Conference, an organization formed by the women of California under the leadership of the Women's Department of the California Development Association, has been endorsed by the state convention of the California Federation of Women's Clubs. It was prepared by the legal departments of the California State Automobile Association and the Automobile Club of Southern California.

Every city of California will be asked to adopt this ordinance, so that the number of accidents may be decreased, by pedestrians and motorists becoming familiar with the laws and getting the habit of safe procedure.

OVER 3,000,000 MILES HIGHWAYS.

There were over 3,000,000 miles of roads and highways in the United States at the beginning of 1926, according to the highways bureau of the California State Automobile Association. Of these, almost one-half million miles, 495,000 to be exact, are surfaced highways. Approximately 35,000 miles of highways were surfaced during 1925.

KEEP TIRES INFLATED.

Tires that are under-inflated will cause the car to sway and make it difficult to keep it on the road. They will squeal on turns and under such conditions fast driving is dangerous, as an emergency stop will cause the tire to slip on the rim, sheering the valve stem.

Oil Leading Export—California is supplying 94 percent of the fuel-oil and 62 percent of the gasoline being shipped to foreign countries bordering the Pacific, according to the Bureau of Mines, Federal Department of Commerce.

Truckee River Highway Open—The Truckee River highway, part of United States route No. 40 and a fitting gateway to California and the Lake Tahoe country, is now open to traffic.

MONUMENT TO MARK MODOC WAR SITE DEDICATED

ALTURAS (MODOC COUNTY)—ONE of the greatest events in the life of Alturas Parlor No. 159 N.D.G.W. took place June 13 out on the Modoc Lava Beds, when the monument the Parlor had caused to be erected in commemoration of General E. R. S. Canby and others who perished in the Modoc War of 1872-73 was formally unveiled and dedicated. Hundreds of automobiles carrying over a thousand people made the pilgrimage from various points in Southern Oregon and Northern California across the famous wonderland of lava to the site of the monument, near Canby's Cross.

Mrs. Gertrude French, Miss Dorothy V. Gloster and Mrs. May Gooch, the committee of the Parlor which has had full charge of the monument project since its inception, arranged the program, which opened with Chairman French calling the assemblage to order and introducing Rev. Micklowsky, who offered the invocation. "America," led by Miss Mildred Archer, accompanied on the violin by Thomas Godfrey, was sung by the assemblage. Miss Dorothy Gloster then introduced Miss Catherine E. Gloster, Past Grand President N.D.G.W., who said, in part:

"Alturas Parlor places this monument with the object of marking forever the battleground where General Edward R. S. Canby and his men heroically sacrificed their lives, and others now living and dead exposed themselves to every element of danger to life and limb, in a conflict with a renegade band of Indians under the leadership of Captain Jack in the years 1872-73.

"This is known in history as the Modoc War, and was characterized by unquestioned obedience to the mandates of our government by those who participated in ridding Northern California and Southern Oregon of the grim menace to the lives and property of the White settlers thereabout in the depredations and murderous treachery of these Indians.

"Fifty-three years have passed since the last gun was fired on this battlefield, and during that space the spot was marked only by yonder rude cross hastily raised by Canby's followers, and it has been subjected to defacement, mutilation and vandalism. . . .

"I fervently hope that this occasion may be to us an incentive to higher ideals and better citizenship. It is now my sacred privilege to unveil for you and all posterity this monument, erected by Alturas Parlor No. 159 N.D.G.W., assisted by the Grand Parlors N.S.G.W. and N.D.G.W., Grand Chapter Royal Arch Masons, other civics and fraternal organizations and patriotic citizens in Northern California and Southern Oregon. The monument of lava rock typifies the sturdy character of the actors on this stage in the stirring days of 1872-73; the grizzly bear, aroused to fighting strength by the wound in his side by a broken arrow, symbolizes the West wounded through the broken faith of the Indians, and the bronze plaeque records the purpose of the monument.

"I also present, in behalf of Alturas Parlor No. 159 N.D.G.W., the original Canby's cross, presented and restored through its efforts, and may these memories help to perpetuate an example for unborn generations to emulate."

Hilliard E. Welch, Grand President N.S.G.W., in an eloquent address outlined the history of California and referred to the history and landmarks work of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West. E. C. Bonner, representing the Grand Chapter Royal Arch Masons, said that had the Indians not been subdued the civilizing and development of all the Western states would have been jeopardized. E. G. Scammon, representing Lassen County, paid tribute to the accomplishment of the Native Daughters.

James D. Fairchild, son of the late John A. Fairchild, pioneer rancher of Dorris, Siskiyou County, and participant in the Modoc War, was the next speaker. He was a small boy in those stirring days, but he recalled many interesting details surrounding the events of that time. His father was captain of a company of California volunteers, and on different occasions his ranchhouse was headquarters for the army officers and members of the peace commission. Other speakers included G. W. Lyons, United State Forest Supervisor of the Modoc Forest; Colonel William Thompson and Captain O. C. Applegate, veterans of the Modoc and other Indian wars; Peter Schonchin, nephew of Chief Schonchin, and son of John Schonchin who, as an accomplice of Captain Jack, was executed October 3, 1873. Jesse D. Walker, John S. Shucks, William Sheridan and Mr. Terwilligan, veterans of the Modoc War, were in attendance, as were also a few Indians who were government scouts at that time.

The Malin band helped to enliven the occasion, several appropriate songs were rendered by the assemblage and Eulalona Chapter D.A.R. of Klamath Falls, Oregon State, recited in unison "The American's Creed." Picnic lunches were served and various points of interest were visited.

DISCOVERY PERTAINING TO FERTILITY.

Vitamine X, the mysterious substance that makes for fertility of reproduction in animals, has taken its place as Vitamine E, among the known vitamines. Dr. Herbert M. Evans of the University of California found through tests made with rats, that the absence of this vitamine in food made the rats sterile, but that they became fertile again when given the vitamine.

This may have some bearing on the cattle industry. Range cattle at times become sterile, and it is thought this may be a result of the lack of this vitamine in dry range feed. Sterility in herd sires, confined and fed in stalls, may possibly be traced to this source. Generally speaking, however, the discovery of this vitamine and its effect on fertility, means little to agriculture.

SAN DIEGO'S HISTORICAL PRE-EMINENCE

(COPYRIGHTED.)

Commencing with this issue, The Grizzly Bear will, in this department, recount the history of San Diego as compiled by William E. Smythe and published in 1907 in a copyrighted work entitled "History of San Diego." Permission to use the material has been granted The Grizzly Bear by the surviving children of Author Smythe: Mabel L. Bridge of San Diego City, William Smythe of Walnut Creek and Bensel Smythe of Los Angeles City. Readers of the magazine will find this one of the most interesting and instructive California history stories ever published in The Grizzly Bear.—Editor.

THE CIVILIZATION OF CALIFORNIA, and of the whole western coast now belonging to the United States, begun on the shores of San Diego Bay. What Plymouth is to New England and the region facing the Atlantic, San Diego is to the great empire which faces the Pacific.

This fact is not appreciated as it deserves to be by readers of history generally, nor by people of California, nor even by the people of San Diego. Here by the southwestern gateway of the republic should be one of the great shrines of historical America, where pilgrims should come by thousands to pay homage to the past, and where monuments should be erected by this generation, to be bequeathed to the keeping of generations yet to come.

Plymouth and San Diego! Each the scene of the first enduring settlement on its own side of the continent; each the offspring of religious zeal; each planted by those who, building better than they knew, became the pioneers of a movement which contributed immeasurably to the betterment of mankind; and each showing the way for millions to carve homes from the wilderness—the one by clearing the forest, the other by irrigating the desert!

Nor is this the whole of San Diego's claim to everlasting distinction in human history. Not only was it the birthplace of civilization on the Pacific Coast of the United States, but it was also the scene of the first discovery of that coast by the Spanish explorers of the sixteenth century. Thus is happened that the first European footprint was indelibly impressed on the shores of San Diego Bay. Surely there is no other spot so precious in the entire continental expanse from Plymouth Rock to Point Loma! This leads me to ask if there is any logical relation between the history of such a city and its future growth.

It is unquestionably true that mere priority of settlement, even when this priority is a matter of large historical consequence, does not guarantee the growth, nor ever the permanence, of a community. Jamestown in Virginia, where English-speaking men first built their homes in America, long since perished from the earth, leaving barely enough ruins to mark the site. Even at Plymouth, where the community has enjoyed a vigorous and continuous existence since 1620, there was a population of less than ten thousand, according to the census of 1900. On the other hand, the metropolis of New England has grown up where John Winthrop colonized his English followers in 1630, and the metropolis of the nation has developed where the Dutch founded New Amsterdam in 1623.

There can be little question that priority of settlement and its resulting historical pre-eminence are assets of extraordinary value when joined to the possession of great natural advantages. There was no good reason why Plymouth should become a large city, for neither agriculture, commerce nor manufactures belonged to it by natural right. Jamestown was destroyed in the so-called Bacon's Rebellion of 1676, and never afterwards rebuilt, because there were much better locations elsewhere. But Boston and New York enjoyed strategic locations and were thus able to reap the benefits of their early settlement and the fame which it brought them. It is to the latter class that San Diego belongs. Hence, its historical pre-eminence ought to count heavily as a factor in its future growth and ultimate greatness.

Western cities do not patiently await the slow accretions of time. They reckon in decades where the older cities of the East measure their growth by centuries. Their effort at advancement takes the form of fierce competition among themselves in seeking to attract the attention of the outside world as a means of reinforcing their capital and recruiting their citizenship. In California this competition is more conspicuously in evidence than anywhere else in the United States. San Diego, alone, can challenge the attention of the world by saying:

Here came the Spanish discoverer to behold for the first time the Pacific Coast of what is now the United States. Here, too, is the Plymouth of the West, where the European first built his home and reared the Cross. Here was the first town, the first irrigation ditch, the first cultivated field, the first school and the first of those historic missions which ushered in the Christian era in California. And here we are building a mighty city as an everlasting monument to the Pilgrim Fathers of the West.

If the publication of this work could be attended by a result above all others gratifying to me, it would fix the historical pre-eminence of San Diego as firmly and clearly in the public mind as the historical pre-eminence of Plymouth has been established for many generations by its faithful historians. And if it could produce a further result in line with this, it would inspire the people of San Diego to the preservation of all the precious landmarks of the early time and the creation of enduring memorials worthy of their history. With the rise of the city to a place of commanding influence in the new world of the Pacific and the dawn of a new era in the development of the vast region which traces the beginnings of its history to this spot, the time has come when San Diego can no longer afford to be careless of its past, any more than it can afford to neglect its future. And it is quite undeniable that San Diego has been careless of its past. Not only so, but it has tamely acquiesced in similar carelessness on the part of those whose business it is to record the truth of history and to preserve the priceless evidences of civilized man's earliest dominion on these shores.

Even the name of Cabrillo is but little known to American schoolchildren, still less to general aders. What is yet more strange, the name this historic man is neglected by the compilers encyclopedias and biographical dictionaries. on may consult standard works of reference ithout discovering the man who discovered alifornia. Sir Francis Drake has been more rtunate and reaped a larger renown for a rformance of less value, as historical values e usually reckoned. San Diego owes it to its wn fame, as well as to Cabrillo's, to celebrate e achievement of the pioneer navigator and to ect a splendid memorial in his honor. As Far-gut stands guard in Madison Square, and as olonel Shaw yet marches among his men in St. udens' noble monument fronting the Boston ate House, so Juan Rodriquez Cabrillo should ok upon the faces of passing generations of alifornians in one of the public places of San ego.

[Thanks to the enterprise of San Diego Parlor o. 108 N.S.G.W., the memory of Juan Rodri-ez Cabrillo is to be perpetuated in a magnifi-nt monument. Permission to erect the tribute the Federal Government reservation at Point oma has just recently been granted in a proc-ntion signed by President Calvin Coolidge to e Order of Native Sons of the Golden West. e monument will cost thousands; the Grand rlor N.S.G.W. has pledged $10,000 to the pro-oject and San Diego Parlor will raise the bal-ce of the necessary fund. So Author Smythe's ggestion as to the first White man to ever set ot on the soil of California, Juan Rodriquez brillo, is about to be realized.—Editor]

Stand upon the heights in the sunny after-on and turn your eyes to the dazzling waste waters and, with the slightest exercise of im-gination, you may see them yet—those Span-h ships that crept up the coast, then headed the Silver Gate, in September 1542. Quaint ft they were, with their round bows and uare sterns and their poopdecks rising in the , so that they seemed about as high as they re long. Although small when compared with e standards of today—only three or four ndred tons—there was a certain grandeur out them which does not attach to the mod-n liner. Somehow, they suggested the poverty-icken Spanish gentleman who manages to ep his pomp and pride on an empty stomach. r there were paint and gold, carvings and blazonry of armorial bearings, but there was obably very little to eat, especially in the recastle.

It is a marvel that they could make long yages in those days. The ships were clumsy, rd to handle, capable of carrying but a small read of canvas in anything approaching a ong breeze, and sailed sidewise almost as well forward. They seemed to invite every peril tt goes with the sea. Besides, the lack of ndensed foods, of facilities for refrigeration d of sanitary knowledge entailed hardship d privation upon those who set out upon long yages into regions of the earth but vaguely own. It is little wonder that sailors died like s from causes which were comprehensively aracterized as scurvy, though in many cases trouble was simply starvation. And yet those ships which had pitched and rolled along ir uncertain way from Mexico made a brave ht as they swept in upon the smooth waters San Diego Bay and dropped their anchors der the shelter of Point Loma. They were first ships that ever rested on those waters he San Salvador and the Victoria—and a new had dawned upon the world of the Pacific en Juan Rodriquez Cabrillo, a Portuguese rigator in the service of Spain, looked up and wn the bay, around the encircling shores and n to the hills and mountains that make the le background.

t was exactly sixty years before the ships civilization again appeared off the coast of thern California. Charles V. passed away hout any serious attempt to colonize and elop the region, but during the reign of his and successor, Philip II., the possibilities of penisula of Lower California and of the thern regions known as Alta California were ch in the royal mind. It is easy to understand y nothing was accomplished. Philip, busy h his European politics and with the terrors the Inquistition, had neither time nor money expend upon the conquest of the wilderness. h efforts as were made came to nothing, but n, in 1598, a merciful providence removed the royal fanatic from his blood-stained throne, Philip III, immediately took steps to improve the Spanish possessions of what is now the Pacific Coast of the United States.

Don Sebastian Viscaino was chosen as captain-general of the expedition and sailed on May 5, 1602, from the port of Acapulco, with two ships and a frigate, together with a small vessel to be used in exploring shallow waters. He was accompanied by three religious Carmelities, one of whom, Friar Antonio de la Ascension, became the journalist of the expedition and wrote an account of the voyage, which extended to the northern coast of California.

Viscaino pursued his leisurely course northward, stopping at several points in Lower California, and found himself at the picturesque islands which rise abruptly from the sea off San Diego on November 5, 1602, precisely six months after leaving Acapulco. He gave the islands the name which they still bear, the Coronados. It was November 10 when his fleet sailed into the harbor which no White man, save Cabrillo and his companions, had visited before. A survey of the harbor was immediately undertaken, for Viscaino was bent on obtaining exact information as far as it was possible with the facilities at his command, and he was able to leave several maps which constituted a very valuable contribution to the geographical knowledge of the time.

It was he who gave the port its present name, though many people suppose that the name originated with the mission which was established more than a century and a half later, and others suppose it was derived from Saint James of the Bible. Because his survey was either begun or ended on November 12—no one knows exactly which, though the former seems more probable—and because that was the day of Saint James of Alcala (San Diego de Alcala) Viscaino gave the port the name of San Diego.

On the day after his arrival the captain-general organized a party to survey a forest lying "on the Northwest side of the Bay,"—evidently Point Loma. The party was in charge of Ensign Alarcon, and included Captain Pequero, Father Antonio de la Ascension and eight soldiers. In this forest they found "tall and straight oaks and other trees, some shrubs resembling rosemary, and a great variety of fragrant and wholesome plants." The identity of the spot with Point Loma is further confirmed by the report that "the high ground commanded a view of the whole harbor, which appeared spacious, convenient, and well sheltered," and by the further statement that "to the Northwest of the wood is another harbor," which doubtless refers to False Bay. The forest is described as bordering on San Diego Bay and its dimensions are given as "three leagues in length and half a league in breadth."

The existence of anything approaching a noble forest on the slopes and top of Point Loma in 1602 is a matter of unique interest, in view of the fact that nothing of the sort is found today. But the story is unquestioned by the oldest set-ers; indeed, those with whom I have talked nfirm it and furnish some evidence to sustain e view.

The explorers were delighted with San Diego, d their expressions sound much like those of e tourist of today. They admired the beauty the scene and appreciated the remarkable cli- ate. They declared that the situation offered fine site for a Spanish settlement." Of the ineral possibilities of the country, Father de Ascension wrote: "In the sands of the beach ere was a great quantity of marcasite, golden d spongy, which is a clear sign that in the ountains round the port there are gold-mines, ecause the waters when it rains bring it from e mountains." They also found in the sand lasses of a gray light substance, which it was ought might be amber. Some very heavy blue ones with which, when powdered and mixed in ater, the natives made shining streaks on their ces, were thought to be rich in silver.

But most of all, the visitors were impressed uring their ten days' stay, with the importance San Diego as a natural seaport. In their hole voyage they found no more perfect har- or, nor any place upon which nature had writ- n more unmistakably the prophecy of a great estiny. In fact, it may be truthfully said that iscaino and his chroniclers were the first San iego "boomers." And yet, for a period of one undred and sixty-seven years after this explor- tion, which added so richly to geographical re, civilization held aloof from the tempting pportunity. For one hundred and sixty-seven ears—what history was made elsewhere in that ace of time!—the sun rose and set, the seasons ame and went, and the ocean roared along the hore, while this land, which daring explorers ad rescued from the unknown, slept in primeval ilence. The Indian papooses that Father de la scension blessed in 1602 grew to manhood, and heir children and children's children lived and assed away, before the White man came again ith sword and cross to plant the first seed of stitutions which were destined to take root nd flourish.

SAN DIEGO HAS MUCH TO OFFER VACATIONIST

(W. S. CARSON,
San Diego Chamber Commerce.)

Ushered in by a record-breaking crowd over he weekend followed by Decoration Day, the eason at San Diego's beaches and back country esorts is now in full swing, with every indica- ion that more people are going to enjoy their acation in the southern city than ever before. Reports gathered from the railroad companies, he steamship lines and the chamber of com- nerce indicate an unprecedented influx of sum- ner visitors this year, and the city is expected o be called upon for its most liberal hospitality, while the lodges, inns and camps of the uplands will be taxed if the large number of early-comers s any indication of what conditions will be later.

The beaches are decked out in their summer egalia and each day sees the number of visitors ncreasing, come to enjoy the coolness of the limate as well as the pleasures of the seaside esort. At all, the crowds are enjoying the di- versions afforded.

Never before has the upland country to the east of San Diego been more attractive than this year. The long rainy season, which brought a copious downpour of the life-giving water, has made the mountains and valleys veritable gar- dens. As a result, many of those who hereto- fore sought places along the coast for their va- cation-place are this year turning their respec- tive backs on the domain ruled over by King Neptune and seeking play-places under the tow- ering pines or widespreading oaks where cozy camps, cottages or inns offer unlimited hospi- tality and many inducements to those seeking recreation that is different. For those who wish to fish there are the lakes, whose waters teem with game fish, while for those who prefer to study nature in her visible form, there are the trails leading to out-of-the-way places of rare beauty.

Whether it is beach or back country for the vacationist, San Diego has much to offer, and the

PIONEER SPRECKELS' PASSING DEPLORED.

San Diego Parlor No. 108 N.S.G.W. has elected officers, Edward H. Dowell being chosen president. Initiation has become a regular feature and the membership-list is growing. At the June 7 meeting the Parlor adopted the following, prepared by Edward H. Dowell, Stephen Dove and Albert V. Mayrhofer, and directed to Claus Spreckels, one of its members:

"To all of us comes the sorrow that none can escape—the hour when the shadow falls over the home and the loved one passes on to that higher life. To attempt to sympathize with you at this time is beyond our limited power, but we do sincerely desire to express to you that spirit of brotherhood that binds us to you as a brother Native Son of the Golden West.

"We, together with all San Diego, have, in the passing of your beloved father, John D. Spreckels, suffered a loss that leaves us sorely stricken, and in the community there is a vacancy that will long remain unfilled."

HUMOROUS SKIT.

At its May 25 meeting San Diego Parlor No. 208 N.D.G.W. initiated two candidates. A humorous skit, directed by Dell Koop, was put on by the May good of the order committee. Those participating were: Ann Wood, Virginia Jackson, Gertrude Faswell, Marion Stough, Evangeline Kerr, Martha Klindt. Refreshments were served during the evening.

(MARGERY BOYD.)

"THE SPLENDID SHILLING."

By Idwal Jones; Doubleday, Page & Company Publishers, Garden City; Price, $2.00.

With a plot as provocative as its hero, "T Shilling" spends itself splendidly. It is a stran tale, for the wanderings of the gypsy lad, G Puncheon, lead from the moors of Wales tawny California.

Two months since Guy had left the manor, y the place was in desolation. Shadrich, Danz Puncheon—where are they? Gone forever fro the manor. Guy vowed solemnly to find Danz and so the journey began, with only a splend shilling as fare.

California, in the early '50s of the gold mi ing days! Pine Log, Chinese Camp, Knigh Ferry, then booming mining towns, Guy trudg through them all. At last Danzel, but, flittir like a shadow before the sun, she is gon After Danzel, Guy hurls the splendid shillin He stands alone.

This gypsy story, compelling, dominating, alien to modern fiction. It is distinctly uniqu but whether pleasingly so, only a perusal of th book can decide.

"JORGENSEN."

By Tristram Tupper; J. B. Lippincott Company Publishers, Philadelphia; Price, $2.00.

Black Mountain stood silent, unconquered, a mysterious as the man Jorgensen, who came t conquer. But swiftly the work was going fo ward—"Laborers with their shoulders, contra tors with their wills, engineers with the brains." Soon the tunnel would be clove through the heart of the mountain, a fra bridge would span the rushing river, and th railroad, completed, would wind triumphantl down to the valley. Jorgensen willed it so. Hi will against Black Mountain's.

Immutable the mountain watched the dram enacting at its base. Ellen, wife of the residen engineer, cold, pale as the moon; black-haire Rosalie, who "could tell something, if she ha a mind to;" Jorgensen, center of the vortex— actors all, puppets at the base of Black Moun tain.

"Laborers with their shoulders, contractor with their wills, engineers with their brains."— Black Mountain conquered! At its base th curtain rings down upon the last act, serenel down upon Ellen, the luminous, and Jorgensen the conqueror.

MUNICIPALITIES LEAGUE TO MEET.

The League of California Municipalities wil meet in convention at Yosemite August 16-19 and in conjunction therewith the health officer of the state will have their annual conference

School Bonds Voted—Citizens of Riverside City have authorized a bond issue of $1,300,00 for new schools and equipment; three junio high-schools are among the projects provided for.

New Court House—Voters of Santa Barbara County have authorized a bond issue of $700,00 for the erection of a new county court house in Santa Barbara City.

WILMINGTON THE HEART OF L. A. HARBOR

Katheryn Winslow

(OFFICE MANAGER, WILMINGTON CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.)

WILMINGTON, SITUATED AS IT IS in the heart of Los Angeles Harbor district, enjoys the distinction of being located nearer to the center of Los Angeles City proper than any other portion of the harbor. It has increased in four years from a population of 4,000 to 13,000, and has ideal working conditions three hundred and sixty-five days in the year.

The second largest street-paving job ever "put over" in Los Angeles is now under construction, consisting of seventy-one blocks. This improvement includes curbs, sidewalks, storm drains, house connections, sewers, where needed, new water and gas mains and fire plugs. When completed, this will make one of the finest paved sections in Southern California and will complete the paving program of all streets west of Broad avenue, south of Anaheim street and east of Wilmington boulevard, with the exception of Gulf avenue which, it is understood, is to be paved in the very near future. Wilmington boulevard is also undergoing an improvement, consisting of ornamental lights, curbs, sidewalks and widening, from Reyes street to B street, a distance of sixteen blocks. K street has just been paved from Banning boulevard to Wilmington boulevard, which makes another fine cross-town street.

Wilmington is just now acquiring a new steam generating plant to be located on the east side of the West Basin. This plant will have a capacity of 33,000 horsepower and will protect all consumers against costly interruptions of power and light service. Three new concerns have just begun operations: The Western Refinery Company, with a wonderful new oil refinery; the Collapso Bed Company and a textile factory. Smart & Final, wholesale grocers, have moved into their new three-story warehouse on Marine avenue. The lower floor of this warehouse has a capacity of eighty-five carloads and the company can handle four carloads at a time. This company first located in Wilmington in 1915 and has increased its business of $300,000 annually to $4,000,000 in this short space of time, which is some record.

Last month the Santa Fe Railway Company connected on to the municipal belt line and is now running on a regular schedule and, it is reported, its new depot will be ready for use before the summer ends. The construction of the viaduct on Anaheim boulevard, costing in the neighborhood of $350,000, is progressing rapidly and will probably be ready for use the 1st of September. The Union Pacific will be the first railway under the new viaduct and the Santa Fe is next in line. This will eliminate two grade crossings over one of the most-traveled

MODOC NOW HAS MEMORIAL PARK, THANKS TO NATIVE DAUGHTERS.

ALTURAS—SOME YEARS AGO A pioneer settler of Alturas, Mrs. Rachael Dorris, now deceased, deeded to Modoc County a five-acre tract of land, adjacent to the southern boundary of the town of Alturas, for park purposes. Because of a flaw in the deed, the gift was not accepted by the county.

Recently heirs of the Dorris estate appealed to Alturas 159, asking it to sponsor a project whereby the wishes of this estimable Pioneer Mother, for whose immediate family the town of Alturas was originally called "Dorris Bridge," should be fulfilled in having this tract converted into a park for Modoc County. They promised to clear the county's title to the tract. The Parlor accepted the project as a labor of love and in veneration of the memory of one of Modoc County's most revered Pioneers.

A committee consisting of Past Grand President Catherine E. Gloster, Elma Dorris, Effie Kauffman, Bertie Auble, Willie Hughes and Eva Williams appeared before the board of supervisors of Modoc County. Acting on the appeal of this committee, the board accepted the gift of land, ordered it surveyed, promised to have it fenced, authorized the Native Daughters to take charge of beautifying the grounds and designated the name of the Park as "The Rachael Dorris Pioneer Park."

Helps Neighboring Parlor.

Calistoga—Calistoga 145 went to Middleton May 22 and presented a most excellent program for the benefit of Clear Lake 135. There was a large and appreciative audience, and a goodly sum was realized. Dancing was enjoyed following the program.

Class Sixteen Initiated.

Manteca—Sixteen candidates were initiated by Phoebe A. Hearst 214 when Grand President Sue J. Irwin paid her official visit to the Parlor. In addition to Miss Irwin addresses were made by the following visitors: Past Grand Presidents Carrie Roesch-Durham and Addie L. Mosher, Grand Trustee Sallie Thaler, D.D.G.Ps. Ethel Murphy and Gertrude Morrison. Refreshments were served by a committee composed of Beth Oliver, Effie Betz, Catherine Jones.

June 8 the Parlor initiated another candidate and had a handkerchief shower for Mrs. Daisy Duvall, who expects to make her future home in Vallejo. Marion Dye, Lulu Ferguson, Ella Knudsen constituted the refreshments committee of the evening.

Past Presidents Entertained.

Hollister—Copa de Oro 105 gave an enjoyable bridge and "500" party, the proceeds of which were forwarded to the committee in charge of the Grand Parlor's memorial redwood grove in Humboldt County. Appropriate rewards were presented to those attaining high scores as well as those holding lucky door numbers.

June 4 Past President Elsie Schou entertained members of the Past Presidents' Club at her cosy home with a pleasing bridge party. Clara L. Black was the fortunate winner of the high-score prize, while Past Grand President Bertha A. Briggs was awarded the consolation prize. Appetizing refreshments were served at the close of the card playing.

Girl Scouts Get Flag.

Menlo Park—Menlo 211 celebrated its tenth institution anniversary with an elaborate banquet May 24. The tables were beautifully decorated and at each plate was a hand-painted placecard sent from Yosemite by Past President Agnes Quinn. President Grace Loverich was the toastmistress and there were numerous responses. Following an interesting program two candidates were initiated. As a souvenier of the occasion each attendant was given a useful tin present.

June 5 the Parlor had a community picnic at Searsville Lake, being the guest of the improvement club. On Menlo's behalf Secretary Frances E. Maloney presented the Menlo Troop of Girl Scouts with a silk American Flag, which was gratefully accepted by the scout leader.

District Deputy Visitor.

Taft—The newly-elected officers of Miocene 228, with Minnie B. Heath as president, will be installed July 10. D.D.G.P. Josephine Barboni of Visalia was a visitor at the June 12 meeting. The Parlor participated in the institution of the new parlor at Bakersfield June 17.

"Editor Grizzly Bear: Enclosed find check for $1.50 for renewal of subscription to The Grizzly Bear.

Six Initiated, More To Follow.

Quincy—Plumas Pioneer 219 had a special meeting at Portola, Plumas County, June 9 and initiated a class of six candidates resident there. The ritual was impressively exemplified by the officers, headed by President Nellie B. Erwin.

Following the ceremonies the Portola members served a delicious chicken dinner, guests at which included several eligibles who are to affiliate with Plumas Pioneer at an early date.

Anniversary Celebrated.

San Rafael—Marinita 198 celebrated the fourteenth anniversary of its institution with a dinner-dance at Larkspur June 12. Assemblyman Charles T. Reindollar presided at the festivities and Charles Redding, treasurer Marin County, was the principal speaker.

National Historic Monument Proposed.

San Juan Bautista—At a recent luncheon plans were discussed for a campaign in behalf of a national historic monument, sponsored by San Juan Bautista 179, to be located here. Speakers included Mayor F. B. Abbe, Perry Buckley, Past Grand President Bertha A. Briggs, L. W. Rood, Frazier O. Reed, Miss Blanche J. Taix, Walter Keene, Rudolph Wilson, Judge J. C. Crome, W. S. Haydon, Mrs. F. Hull.

Well-Merited Praise Bestowed.

Sonora—Grand President Sue J. Irwin made her official visit to Dardanelle 66 May 21 and was graciously welcomed by President Mary E. Gorgas. Not in years had the Parlor had such a large attendance. Visitors included representatives of all the Tuolumne County Parlors and a delegation from Oakdale 125. The lodgeroom was artistically decorated in a harmonious color scheme.

Grand President Irwin was genial and enthusiastic and bestowed well-merited praise on the officers for their exemplification of the ritual. On the Parlor's behalf she was presented with a pin of "old Tuolumne" gold by Past President Delia Shell. Following whist and social merriment a bountiful spread was served. Dardanelle is keenly interested in all that tends to the advancement of the state and the Order.

SUTTER AT HOCK FARM, SUTTER COUNTY

(ESTHER R. SULLIVAN.)

CAPTAIN JOHN A. SUTTER'S GRANT from the Mexican governor included parts of Sacramento and Placer Counties, the valley portion of Yuba County, all of Sutter County and a portion of Colusa County. Shortly after Sutter's settlement at Sutter's Fort (now in Sacramento City) in 1839, he met two friendly Indians who spoke Spanish. As he was anxious to locate a cattle ranch, they guided him to a place later known as Hock Farm, in Sutter County.

In 1842 a permanent settlement was made at Hock Farm. The next year Sutter, accompanied by John Bidwell, began the erection of the first permanent buildings on the ranch. Bidwell spent a year managing the farm. Previously, he had acted as Sutter's secretary. Bidwell wrote the contract between Sutter and John W. Marshall when they entered into a partnership, before Marshall went to Coloma, El Dorado County, to build the sawmill where gold was discovered. Emigrants who stopped at Sutter's Fort made conditions too crowded there for the Sutter family, so they moved to Hock Farm in 1850 and remained there until their departure for Pennsylvania, in 1865.

An interesting account is given of a picnic party at Hock Farm in May, 1855. Guests were assembled in large numbers from Yuba and Sutter Counties, and one hundred arrived from Sacramento on the steamboat "Governor Dana." A band accompanied this party, and the Indians flocked to the river-bank to listen to their first band music.

At the banquet twenty-two toasts were given, two of which are of special interest: General A. M. Winn, later the Founder of the Order of Native Sons of the Golden West—"California, may it be settled by those who have daughters and sons willing to enjoy themselves in this country," and George Tyler—"Captain Sutter and California, the fame of the former is world wide and inseparably connected with the latter." These toasts seem to have forecast the shadows of coming events brought to a reality by the Native Sons and Native Daughters.

Sutter secured a contract to furnish grain to a Russian colony at Sitka, and began cultivating grain around Sutter's Fort. In 1844 he had extended the planting into Sutter County. Sutter died in Washington after the close of the Senate, where he had made an unsuccessful appeal for financial aid. He was buried in Pennsylvania.

lor's redwood memorial fund a card party and tea were sponsored by Oneonta 71 May 22 at the home of Past Grand President Anna L. Monroe, which was beautifully decorated for the occasion. At cards, prizes were awarded Mms. Francis, Ericcsen, Alford, Bryant, Trainor, and Miss Herman. Special prizes were presented Mms. E. C. Damon and Jacob Rasmussen, the oldest Pioneers present, and also to Mrs. J. A. Shaw and Miss Sybil Walker.

A substantial sum was realized, many contributions to the fund being received from those who wished to aid the worthy project but could not attend the social function. Refreshments were served not only to the cardplayers, but also to the several callers during the afternoon.

Digest This.

Under the heading, "Rules for the Killing of an Organization," the "Byron Times" recently had the following, which should be digested by every Native Son:

1. Never attend any of the meetings.
2. Never take part in any campaign likely to make it bigger.
3. If the weather is bad, cancel your membership until business improves.
4. Never accept any office or responsibility, then it is easy to criticise as a distinterested bystander.
5. Nevertheless, get sore if you are not appointed on a board or on a committee, but if you are, do not attend to any of the duties of the committee.
6. When asked to express your opinion regarding some important matter, appear absolutely indifferent and say nothing; after everything is over tell everyone how things ought to be done.
7. Do nothing more than is absolutely necessary, but when the other members roll up their sleeves and willingly use their time and ability

THE LOST WOMAN OF SAN NICOLAS

(MARGARET ROMER.)

SOME MILES TO THE WEST OF SANTA Catalina Island lies the lonely, windswept island of San Nicolas. This island was once inhabited by a tribe of Indians, but their numbers had grown less and less as they were constantly attacked by more powerful tribes, until there was but a handful left.

In the days when the kind padres cared for the Indians, they found it very difficult to provide for this little band so far away. For this reason, a ship called the "Better Than Nothing" was sent to the island and brought the entire population to Santa Barbara, where both their physical and religious needs might be better met.

A young Indian woman, however, was left behind. Her child had strayed, and she was searching for it when the boat put out to sea. The wind blows so terrifically there that the captain could hardly hold the boat while the passengers were boarding, and while they were waiting for the child-pursuing mother the boat became unmanageable and veered so far from the simple, improvised landing that it could not be brought back.

The poor woman stood on the shore and frantically shouted, "manequauna, manequauna." What this meant, no one knows, but the ship was forced to sail on without her. However the captain's intentions were good. He had to return to the island in a few days anyway to get the remaining possessions of the Indians and he confidently intended to bring the woman and her baby on that next trip.

The other members of the little tribe were taken to Santa Barbara, and later to San Pedro where they fared badly. The sudden change in diet and living conditions did not agree with them. Besides, they felt that they were captives deprived of their liberty, and hence were dejected and homesick. Soon they all pined away and died.

When the captain reached Santa Barbara with his human cargo, he learned that he would have to make a voyage to San Francisco before he could return to San Nicolas. On that fateful voyage, the captain, ship and crew were lost in a storm and with them was lost the whereabouts of the poor deserted woman on San Nicolas. The good padres of Santa Barbara sent a small expedition to the island to search for her, but she was not found, so she was given up for lost and was forogtten.

The woman herself, however, could not forget. She stood on the shore with arms outstretched, crying "manequauna," and watched the vessel sail out of sight. At first, despair gained compiete control of her. The child soon died from want and exposure. And oh, the loneliness of it! The long, long days and the still longer nights when the mad wind howled over the tiny mound of fresh earth. And the gentler nights when it sighed through the branches of the trees. And when it was moonlight and all sorts of wierd figures prowled in the shadows and she heard the calls of the wild beasts! The dreadful days and nights when sickness stalked through her slender form and she lay alone, alone, always alone, with no one to care whether she lived or died; no one to speak to. She never heard the sound of a human voice. Oh, the madness of it! The woman's heart hardened against the race that took her loved ones from her.

But desire to live is usually more powerful than despair, especially in the primitive. The woman began to meet her own needs on the island. She was already well versed in the art of securing food in the apparently barren waste. She knew the roots, herbs and berries that would sustain life. She improvised a fishline from sealskin cut into strips and made hooks from shells and thus caught fish to eat. She caught seals by night and made their skins into clothing. There were many dogs on the island, and these were her friends and companions. She built herself a hut by sticking whale ribs in the sand and covering them with brush. She wove baskets and bottles out of dry grass. Of pottery, she had a good supply left by her people. With all, she lived in a fair degree of physical comfort.

Occasionally otter hunters visited the island, but she feared them, for were they not White men, and had not the White men taken her people away? So she concealed herself from them. These hunters brought back to the mainland stories of the evidences of habitation they had seen.

Good old Padre Gonzales of Santa Barbara had heard that a woman and her child had been deserted on San Nicolas some twenty-odd years before, so he requested Captain Nidever to go and search the island and see if the deserted woman was really alive. The old captain made two trips to the island and searched it carefully, but failed to find the woman. She had seen him both times, but had hidden herself from him because he was white.

Captain Nidever was so sure that a living human being was on the island, that he made a third trip. This time he took enough mission Indians along so that he could string them out, shouting distance apart, clear across the island. He had a system of signals arranged and started his men at one end of the island and they marched its entire length, thus observing every foot of the ground.

The poor lone woman regarded the men as captors and did her best to avoid them. In this last search, however, it was impossible. One man came upon her on a hillside. He raised his hat on the end of his gun as a signal, and the woman was promptly surrounded. When she saw that they were men of her own race, she had no fear, but held out some of her food for them. The Indians, knowing her story, went down on their knees and reverently crossed themselves.

Thus the lost woman of San Nicolas was found and taken to Santa Barbara, but it was too late. Her people had all gone to their last resting-place and no one could be found who could speak her language. She was rescued, yes, but for what? From sheer grief and madness she soon went to join the others of her tribe.

EFFORTS BEING MADE TO REVIVE A CALIFORNIA GIANT.

A California giant, shackled for forty-two years, is beginning to "pick at the coverlets" and to show signs of recovery. The giant is hydraulic mining, shackled by the Sawyer injunction, and the $600,000,000 in gold, estimated to be in the gravels of Sierra, Plumas, Nevada, Placer, El Dorado, Mariposa and Calaveras Counties, is in a fair way toward being recovered.

This is the statement made by Lloyd L. Root, state mineralogist, who reports that efforts are being made to revive hydraulic mining in California in such a way as to protect farmers in the valleys and the other lower stream users from the deluge of debris, which, under the old plan, swept downstream, filling channels and raising river beds, to the detriment of farmers and others.

Monster dams on the Yuba River and tributaries, the Bear and the American, to cost approximately $50,000,000 and to be of such size that the debris carried downstream will fill only about ten per cent of the space provided to revive the game.

CALIFORNIA, NORTH AND CENTRAL, BENEFIT FROM NEW HIGHWAYS.

Summer tours [illegible] to Northern and Central California [illegible] of the year, at the [illegible] says Burton A. Towne, president of the California State Automobile Association, is a fact most pertaining to the fact that the completion of three great highways gives that section of California real reason to celebrate.

The Victory and the Truckee River highways which directly link Salt Lake City, the distributing point of westbound motor traffic, with San Francisco, are complete.

The Yosemite All Year highway will be officially dedicated and thrown open to traffic July 31. Simultaneously California will pay tribute to the brightest jewel in the state's diadem [illegible] Valley, celebrating the [illegible] anniversary of its discovery.

Completion of these three highway projects represents [illegible] years of effort and the [illegible] of considerable sums of money, means that the section of California [illegible] on the map and to reap the [illegible] of motor [illegible] worth millions of dollars each year," declares Towne.

GOOD ROADS INTO HIGH SIERRAS.

Motorists who want to make a trip into the high country from the San Joaquin Valley will find the road from Fresno to Huntington Lake in very good condition this season, the touring bureau of the California State Automobile Association announces. There are two popular routes leading out of Fresno, one via Academy and the other via Auberry. The two routes join about one and one half miles below Pine Ridge.

A Rarity, Indeed!

A publisher, irrespective of efforts expended to please, rarely receive commendation, but complaints are numerous, for most people expect too much from the other fellow. And so, because of its rarity, the following is presented. And, too, the news items of this particular Parlor are given prominence because they always come in presentable form and are newsy in character:

"Editor Grizzly Bear: At its regular meeting June 3, Alturas Parlor No. 159 N.D.G.W. directed its secretary to extend to the editor of The Grizzly Bear the Parlor's vote of thanks for the courtesy received in having news items from Alturas Parlor given prominence in the monthly issues of the magazine.

"The officers and members appreciate the benefits of such publicity in The Grizzly Bear.

"Sincerely and fraternally yours,

WATER ROUTS MITES.

Mites are a constant menace to the poultry flock. One poultryman of California has a remedy he tried, after failing with all those recommended by various authorities. He turned the hose on the chicken house, in the cracks between the boards and in the ground; he used force, by means of water, everywhere he thought a mite might be hiding, and he says he cleaned them out. Just to make sure, he repeats the treatment occasionally, but reports he finds no further trouble from the insects.

PREPAREDNESS AN INSTRUMENT FOR PEACE

(LOWELL E. JESSEN.)

FACTS, AND WHAT PEOPLE THINK are facts, are potent. Both need to be taken into consideration if a constructive program is to be worked out.

Army and navy leaders in the harbor district have studied, with reason, too, several books that have been published recently. The books purport to relate the possible or probable wars on the Pacific; one recently published book, the author of which is an American, attempts to relate conditions in China and what the powers-that-be consider essential policies.

"Pacifico," a novel written by William B. Shearer, civilian expert on naval affairs who attempted to block the sinking of the U.S.S. "Washington" by securing an injunction, is supposed to be a beautiful little love story, but, in actuality, the whole book is taken up with the author's conception of the workings of the Japanese secret service. "String" newspapers recently carried translations of what they claimed to be Japanese secret documents.

The tone of all the literature is war and preparations for war. Characteristic differences of America and Japan, the apathy of the first and the warlike preparations of the latter, are discussed with the idea of arousing the American people to possible dangers ahead.

When the naval and army officers study the books they are able to sift out the true facts of the case because they are trained in such controversies. The public, too, should keep abreast of the times and read similar works, always considering the authenticity of the report and then giving heed to our national problems.

We who have lived in California understand the reason why legislation was passed to keep the Japanese from holding land titles in this state. Easterners, however, fail to realize the situation. They will scoff at the speeches and writings of those who have studied the problem, feeling secure in ignorant bliss, and easily entranced by the peaceful murmurings of the "native yellows, the defeatists of our national life," as Assistant Secretary Hanford MacNider of the War Department would say.

Whatever your attitude toward the Japanese question, you must admit that the writings now being published and the books recently off the press tend to stimulate interest in the Federal Government and two of the greatest institutions in our national life, the army and the navy. Intense individual interest in Uncle Sam and his activities is one of the best indications of a healthy national life.

Sometimes we wonder if Uncle Sam is forgotten in the hurry and blurry of the present, but when national issues are at stake we know that The People will respond with a will that partly makes up for lack of preparation.

Preparedness, however, would be a measure of economy as well as an instrument for peace. We hope that the present agitation will arouse the people to the need for preparedness in cases of national emergency.

SAN PEDRO HARBOR EXPORTS SHOW TREMENDOUS INCREASE.

(BERT S. COLEMAN.)

Foreign exports from San Pedro Harbor have increased from $1,000,000 to $100,000,000 in ten years, according to a statement by J. A. H. Kerr, vice-president of the Security Trust and Savings bank of Los Angeles. The figures for the tremendous increase were produced at a meeting of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce and clearly show the growth of the port, whose foreign business has increased one hundred times in the comparatively brief period of ten years, an increase of ten times yearly.

"In a single day recently more than $1,000,000 worth of gasoline was shipped to Germany alone, and within thirty-six hours another shipment of more than $500,000 went from our port to England," said Mr. Kerr. "An English firm has placed an order with a local manufacturer for $75,000 worth of oil-well machinery, which is going to Mesopotamia. Machinery of this type is being shipped from Los Angeles to the Dutch East Indies, Colombia, New Guinea, Peru, Venezuela, and to virtually every other oil-producing region in the world."

Clarence Matson, head of the trade extension and marine department of the Chamber of Commerce, tendered the data that in 1916 the commerce shipped from San Pedro to foreign countries totaled a mere million in valuation and that the volume of business during the present year will reach a high figure.

Maynard McFie, former president of the chamber, declared that the port has vastly increased the city's commercial field and has brought the Orient as near as possible to the State of California.

RECORD CITRUS SHIPMENT.

Around 23,000 boxes of oranges and grapefruit were loaded aboard a motorship last month. The shipment, requiring sixty cars to handle, is said to be the largest that has been recorded for any one vessel at San Pedro Harbor.

Recently a motorship loaded 20,000 boxes of citrus fruits and a freighter took out 18,000 boxes last month. Most of the product is destined for the British Isles, but a large part of the shipments find their way to continental ports.

NATIVE DAUGHTERS ENGAGE IN SEWING.

The Thimble Club of Rudecinda Parlor No. 230 N.D.G.W. met with Clara Burbridge May 27, and June 10 with Agnes Hruza. It has been sewing for a needy family in the harbor district, the work being accomplished through Past President Mabel Adair, prominent in local Red Cross

The San Francisco Bank, the Crocker First Federal Trust Co. the Liberty Bank and the United Bank and Trust Co. were made depositaries for Grand Parlor funds.

Joseph B. Keenan (Niantic 105) and Arthur E. Curtis (Precita 187) were designated to represent the Grand Parlor on the board of directors of the Native Sons' Hall Association of San Francisco.

A submitted design for a proposed road sign was approved, and in due time the Subordinate Parlors will be communicated with regarding the same.

The amount to be derived from the five cents percapita tax levied for the celebration of Admission Day was allowed the Admission Day Committee of Sacramento City, where the September 9 festivities will be held this year.

Grand Presdient Welch, in outlinning his plans, made many suggestions, one of which—that the visiting ditricts be assigned grand officers residing nearest them—was approved.

A petition for a charter for a parlor in Monrovia, Los Angeles County, was received from Deputy Grand President Albert V. Mayrhofer. A motion prevailed that a charter be granted, "when and if fifty applicants, not members of the Order at the present time, sign this petition."

A motion was made and duly carried, that the selection of Grand Director be postponed indefinitely.

Resolutions referred to the board by the Santa Rosa Grand Parlor were laid over for future attention.

CO-OPERATE, EVERYONE.

Deputy Grand President Albert V. Mayrhofer, engaged in field work for the Order, has mapped out a program for the balance of the year which, if carried out, will make 1926 a record-breaking year in the history of the Order.

He now has under way the organization of three additional parlors in Los Angeles County, at Monrovia, Pomona and Alhambra. He hopes to have these instituted, and a large class of candidates from all the California South Parlors initiated, some time in August.

Following this event, he will endeavor to organize five parlors in the San Joaquin Valley, at Tulare, Visalia, Porterville, Hanford and Madera. He plans to have these instituted at a huge event in the Yosemite Valley, Thanksgiving Day, and at the same time have candidates initiated for all the Parlors in Fresno, Merced, San Joaquin, Stanislaus, Calaveras, Tuolumne, Amador, El Dorado and Sacramento Counties.

Mayrhofer has assigned himself a big job, one which no one person can, single-handed, accomplish. But, with co-operation on the part of the membership at large, it can be done. He points the way; now, let every member of the Order follow his lead, and these two objectives, which are of vast importance, can be attained. Then, forward to conquer other fields.—C.M.H.

Initiation in Historic Town.

Merced—Yosemite 24 had a special meeting at the historic town of Hornitos, Mariposa County, June 19, when a large class of candidates were initiated. Spearkers of the evening included, among others, Past Grand Presidents Walter D. Wagner and William F. Toomey. An entertainment program and dance followed the ceremonies. Robert Cothran was chairman of the committee in charge of the occasion.

Yosemite was represented at a recent meeting of Modesto 11, when several candidates were initiated, by a delegation consisting of Grand Trustee I. H. Reuter, D. H. Stoddard, Dr. G. I. Deane, A. E. Daneri, R. W. Cothran. Officers of the Parlor have been elected, with Byron Hart as president.

Coming, Important Event.

San Rafael—Mount Tamalpais 64 is making elaborate preparations to observe its forty-first institution anniversary in July. Past President

Memorial Day Observed.

Ferndale—Following its usual custom, Ferndale 93 had charge of the observance of Memorial Day, May 30, in this vicinity, which consisted of a parade, literary exercises and decoration of the graves of departed veterans. The parade, headed by the Ferndale united school band, was made up of G. E. Corbett, the sole surviving member of the G.A.R., Boy Scouts of America and the Parlor members.

John W. Trigg, president of the day, presided at the exercises, and the oration was delivered by S. E. Metzler. Other numbers on the program included: Selection, band; prayer, Rev. R. Burrow; recitation, Lester Dedini; song, high-school girls' glee club; vocal solo, Darrel Nielsen; recitation, Hildur Anderson. At the "unknown's" grave, the assemblage sang "America," which was followed by a patriotic recitation by Frank Ferguson. The firing squad,—John Enos, Ambrose Farley, Henry Winther, John Ferguson,—under command of John O'Connell, fired a salute, taps were sounded by John O'Connell and Chaplain Burrows offered a benediction.

The single and married men of the Parlor have concluded a series of three baseball games. The former won the first game, 11-9, but the latter annexed the next two, 16-12 and 25-17. Flag Day was appropriately observed June 21. Ferndale has pledged its moral and financial support to the Native Daughters' proposed redwood pioneer memorial park, promising at least $200.

Baby Grows.

Santa Ana—The Order's baby, Santa Ana 265, under the watchful care of Deputy Grand President Albert V. Mayrhofer, is making rapid growth. May 26 the officers of Ramona 109, headed by President Burrel D. Neighbours, initiated a large class of candidates for the Parlor, and June 23 the officers of Los Angeles 45, headed by President Andrew M. Stodel, officiated at the initiation of another large class.

Occasioned by recent public addresses in favor of the naturalization of Japs, the Parlor at its June 9 meeting declared its opposition to any evasion of the California Alien Land Law and to the "peaceful penetration" program practiced by Japs in this state. A boy was adopted, too. Attention being called to the recent arrival of an eight-pound son at the home of Secretary H. Mell Head, the first native son to be presented to a member of Santa Ana—Danny Mell Head was made an honorary member. He starts his fraternal career with a savings bank account, the nest-egg having been deposited by action of the Parlor.

To Arrange Admission Day Features.

Sacramento—In preparation for the Admission Day, September 9, celebration to be held here in conjunction with the California State Fair, the local Parlors—Sacramento 3, Sunset 26, Sutter Fort 241—have organized a joint committee to work out the details.

Officers of the committee are: Grand Trustee John T. Skelton, chairman; George A. Burns, vice-chairman; Albert W. Katzenstein,

CALIFORNIA HAS DIVERSIFIED CLIMATE

CALIFORNIA HAS CLIMATIC CONDITIONS that resemble practically all the different climatic areas of Europe, and in addition has some others found in Africa. This statement was made by R. J. Russell of the geography department of the University of California, who has just completed a detailed survey of climatic conditions throughout the state.

The study is one of the first of its kind, for, although studies of very large areas and world surveys have been made by the plan, no smaller region has been mapped until this time. The scheme for the study was originated by Dr. W. Koeppen, a German scientist.

"Temperature and rainfall conditions at 208 stations were employed in determining the climatic areas of California," says Russell. "The completed study not only shows the validity of the German scientist's system, but it yields valuable material for study of vegetation."

Temperature and rainfall conditions in California correspond directly with the types of vegetation found here. According to the scientist's classification, there are about eight chief types of climatic conditions in this state.

"We have a dry region of desert and steppes throughout a third of the state; in this region, where water is available for irrigation, there is a remarkable degree of fertility, corresponding to that of the oases of Egypt and Mesopotamia," he says of the natural divisions revealed by this study. "In another region there is snow for at least one month of the year and freezing temperatures; here the greatest source of water and power for the state is found, without which California could not be so fertile or such an industrial center; and finally, there is the region which corresponds to the Mediterranean in its climate."

California's "Mediterranean" climate has four sub-regions, however, according to the geographer's analysis, and these have clearly-defined limits, which are of importance to agriculturalists, since they regulate the type of crop that may be most favorably grown.

The narrow coastal strip which includes San Francisco is the first of the sub-regions. Here artichokes and peas grow best. Russell also says scientific study substantiates San Francisco's claim to "the coolest summer city in the United States" by not exceeding an average of 65-degree temperature.

The yellow-pine forest region, which depends for its existence on a certain proportion of summer rain, is the second sub-region.

The most typical Mediterranean climate, however, is found in a third sub-region, where a great variety of products can be successfully grown, including olives, grape sand many varieties of fruit.

In the fourth sub-region a very hot summer is typical, and here the fruit and citrus belt of the state is located; rice may also be grown here, if grown under conditions simulating those where the cereal is native.

"This climate map of California is probably the first one of a smaller region that has been made in the United States," Russell says. "But, although a new study, many things may develop from it. It points out very definitely a direct relation between climatic conditions and vegetation. This is of importance to agriculture, forestry and citriculture."

Within a few months the newly-made climatic map of the state will be published by the University of California, and will be available in pamphlet form.

SUITABLE WRAPPING PAPERS.

Practical tests to determine suitable papers for wrapping fruits and vegetables, conducted by the Bureau of Chemistry of the United States Department of Agriculture, show that paper for wrapping apples, oranges, lemons, pears and tomatoes should be 10 or 12 pounds per ream of 500 sheets 24x36 inches in size, and that it should have a bursting strength of not less than six points. It should have flexibility and strength to withstand the vigorous twist given the paper in wrapping and to give a smooth appearance to the wrapped fruit.

Wrapping papers of the right kind serve to retard evaporation and thus keep the products in a fresh condition, as well as to reduce damage from motion in shipment, and protect the fruit from the sun and dust.

Peach State—California in 1925 produced more peaches than any other state in the union, according to the Federal Department of Commerce.

Big Walnut Crop—California's walnut crop last year totaled 72,917,232 pounds, an increase of 34.8 percent over the 1924 production; the estimated value of last year's crop is $15,200,000.

boulevards in the state and will be a fine improvement for motor traffic.

During the month of May this year, 577 ships entered Los Angeles Harbor, which averages better than eighteen vessels per day. These ships carried a net of 1,627,462 tons, representing the sum of $76,750,918, as compared with a net of 1,385,093 tons in May 1925, and Wilmington handled the largest percentage of the shipping.

The harbor, as a whole, has shown a growth of 1,700 percent in five years. It exports more oil and imports more lumber than any other harbor in the world. During the year 1925, 1,543,144,044 board-feet of lumber was received. Every hour throughout the year enough lumber is unloaded to build a city block of five-room bungalows on both sides of the street.

Wilmington can safely and proudly boast of its wonderful new schoolbuildings, five in all, its school system, churches, library, chamber of commerce, lodges and clubs, which are second to none.

Feminine World's Fads and Fancies

PREPARED ESPECIALLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR BY ANNA STOERMER.

SMOCKS HAVE MADE CLEAN SWEEP

THE TRANSPARENT COAT AS PART of a frock or as half of an ensemble is very smart. When it is a coat, it is made of georgette or crepe roma, but when it is a coat dress, silk voile is added to the list. It is often combined with taffeta and is very lovely when worn over a print with the color and design blurred softly by the veiling of the thin material which is sometimes plaited from shoulder to hem, sometimes gathered and sometimes flared in the skirt. It makes an ideal summer costume for the busy woman about town.

The silhouettes of summer refuse to be standardized. The newest are the hip flare, sometimes called the page boy, the tiered and the bouffant, with the foreshortened front edged with lace or tulle. They are used for dinner or party dresses, but the hip flare overshadows all others for daytime modes. The tiered is used in connection with the narrow skirt. Tiers offer a cross section in dress that is new and smart. Usually they take the form of double circular frills placed across the sides and are made in georgette and other transparent fabrics.

Skirt fullness finds new ways to make itself wearable for those who need straightening out and thinning down. The long lines of shoulder-to-hem plaits keep the slim effect, and tucks hold the costume in at the hip and let it fly at the hem. Shirring softens the shoulder, the sleeve top and the upper edge of the soft skirt. Smocking is done in bright colors, while gathers are frankly free and full and somewhat billowy. Smocking and smocks,—alike in name only,—continue to add their quota of gaiety and color to midsummer styles. The so-called sports type of dress, with smocking at the hip, at the yoke line and below the shoulder, is used a great deal. It is made of crepe-de-chine, heavy georgette, cotton voile, cotton crepe and pongee in chartreuse, green, lemon, yellow, hydrangea, pink, the new pastel sky blue and white, and is smocked in the same or contrasting color. It is very smart, simple and exquisite.

Smocks have made a clean sweep of the country. Women have found a dozen reasons for wearing them. They protect the long sleeves of a dress, they look better than an apron, and they come out of the kitchen with better grace. In flowered chintz and prints, they make charming garden coats and bring some of the garden into the home, office or shop.

Jackets, cut like a man's tuxedo and worn with plaited skirts, are made of black velvet with collar faced with self-colored satin and are worn with plain white flannel skirts. Worn in the evening, with light frocks, they are made of metallic fabrics such as silver, gold, steel or copper, or of any of the lovely brocades lined and faced with contrasting color. Tailored suits are made of light-weight covert cloth, in pastel blue, pink or mauve. The pastel shade has a grayed tone, which softens it and takes away something of the boudoir effect of the more delicate color.

Scarfs, one yard square, are worn with tailored costumes most smartly, in one of these two ways: folded on the bias and knotted casually upon the shoulder, or wrapped closely around the throat once and tied at the side with one short upstanding end and with one long end falling down the front of the frock or suit. These scarfs are preferred in soft silks printed with plain borders, or in plaided taffeta or surah.

A second square scarf of this type is often worn as a belt folded diagonally and tied about the low waistline of a sports frock.

Separate skirts are essentials in the summer wardrobe. If silk, they are most frequently of crepe-de-chine or flat crepe; if wool, they are of kasha or wool crepe. The shade of the skirt may match that of the sweater. It may be of a blending lighter shade, of a darker beige, or of white, to harmonize with most of the sweaters. Skirt lengths are at their highest—a point that barely conceals the knees.

The motor coat should be smart in its own right, and as easy and companionable as the car itself. A raglan shoulder coat in camel's hair fleece is the sort that is thoroughly at home in any car.

The new dolman cape coat is casting a long shadow ahead toward fall and winter fashion. It is right for motor wear, because it follows the rule already mentioned. The motor coat must be smart in its own right and free-fitting and comfortable.

It is only necessary to say that the knitted coat is still smart. Everyone who has had one, or knows anyone who has, knows that there is no coat more long-serving or less-perishable than the knitted one. The newest is knitted in shell or some other rough uneven stitch and collared with clipped wool.

A sweater costume for smart golfing consists of a golf coat, a circular skirt and a vagabond hat. The costume may be developed in many smart colors. The square sports scarf is a smart accessory.

Sleeveless silk sports dresses, in pastel or poster shades, are equally attractive at all resorts. A costume tailored of flannel adapts itself to many vacation demands.

Compact, light luggage is in line with the modern woman's wardrobe. A very small bag is all that is necessary for an over-night and a slightly larger one for the week-end trip. They are smart according to their colors and sizes, in red, blue, green, gray or brown, and in many leathers, including suede and lizard. They are chosen for traveling clothes and chic women select a hatcase and suitcase in matching sets.

Modern luggage has even provided for dres ing on the train a case which has a large mirr fitted in the lid, trays and compartments, and little powder table underneath. These compar ments have spaces for a generous change clothing.

Georgette [illegible] the newest shade for georgette frocks embroidered in a striking manner with self colored silk thread on the jumper.

A red frock is of flat crepe, with blouse separate. The blouse of white georgette, embroidered in a gay colorful effect, is worn with a white hat embroidered to match.

Extremely swagger is the sports oxford of imported novelty alligator, trimmed effectively with russian calf. Another is of gray snake-skin, daintily trimmed in matching kid. Ultra smart is the oxford of white kid, trimmed with white lizard.

A dainty white satin pump may be a delightful selection for the bride or most attractive for the sheer frocks of summer.

Novel in the extreme is the graceful sandal of genuine cobra snake, trimmed with parchment kid.

White kidskin shoes have finely grained reptile trimmings. Parchment kid is chosen wisely for shoes to complement hot-weather frocks. Black patent shoes are chic with navy-blue and black costumes.

The large, dark hat, the soft dark fox fur and the shoulder cluster of white gardenias appear together, a trio not only flattering to the wearer, but very chic.

With a flower printed frock, a shoulder flower to match is worn. Flesh-colored and white crepe frocks are worn with dark woolen coats.

The smartest hair cuts are known by these points: Close shingling at the back, sufficient length at the sides to frame the face becomingly and the ears, usually, only partly uncovered.

Warm-weather coats are of lightweight wool-crepe, kasha, broadcloth, rep, moire and brocade or corded silks, and are often seen without fur.

The sheer silk crepe cape, hip length and unlined, is worn over a jumper frock to compose a costume for warm summer days.

MARK AND WATCH ALL HOME-CANNED FOOD PRODUCTS.

In connection with your home canning this season, the United States Department of Agriculture advises that all finished products be marked so that those in each batch may be distinguished. That is, make labels giving not only the name of the product and its variety, if more than one, but the date on which it was canned and the time and temperature of processing. For example, the label on a quart jar of string beans might read: "String beans—Kentucky Wonders, 7-15-26; packed hot, processed at 240° F. (10 lbs.) for 40 minutes."

If canning in tin, watch for leaks when the cans are plunged in cold water to cool as they come from the canner. Air bubbles will indicate imperfect sealing. Or, if using glass jars, invert them immediately after processing and look for signs of leakage. All leakers should be opened at once and the contents used on the table or heated, repacked in other jars and processed again as at first. Hold all canned products at room temperature for a week or ten days, where they can be examined at least once a day to be sure that they are keeping.

If the contents of any jars or cans show signs of spoilage, examine all of that lot carefully. After this observation period, store the canned goods in a cool place. A short storage at rather high temperature serves to bring out quickly defects that might not be noticed if the products were stored at a lower temperature. Results can thus be checked up and methods improved.

Landscaping—

Older residents of California are familiar with the fact that Howard & Smith have created many of the most beautiful gardens in the State. With the vast development which has recently taken place in Southern California, however, it may be that some of the newer residents are not aware of the fact that Howard & Smith have a landscape department capable of rendering the very highest service in the treatment of their grounds. ¶In the development of a property, confidence can only be placed in those having a thorough understanding of landscaping in its entirety. A full comprehension of this subject, from the minutest detail to the placing of the house itself, is essential if beauty and harmony are to be the ultimate result.

If you are contemplating the development of your grounds we will be pleased to have you confer with us.

N. D. GRAND PRESIDENT HONORED

FOUR HUNDRED MEMBERS OF THE Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West gathered at luncheon in San Francisco June 5, to pay deserved homage to Grand President Sue J. Irwin. The affair was arranged by a committee composed of the local district deputy grand presidents, with Supervising Deputy Mae Himes-Noonan as chairman, May C. Boldemann vice-chairman, Agnes M. Curry secretary, May L. Noble treasurer. The decorations, in blue and gold, were elaborate; at Miss Irwin's table was an immense basket of flowers, which was presented to her. The placecards featured the California poppy and the Order's emblems.

Guests of the occasion, who were introduced by Chairman Noonan, were: Native Daughters—Junior Past Grand President Catherine E. Gloster, Grand President Sue J. Irwin, Grand Secretary Alice H. Dougherty, Grand Treasurer Susie K. Christ, Grand Marshal Louise C. Heilbron, Grand Outside Sentinel Evelyn Carlson, Grand Organist Estelle Evans, Grand Trustees Vida Vollers, Sallie Thaler and Josephine Johnson, Founder Lily O. Reichling-Dyer, Miss Katherine Gillies, Mrs. Etienne Schier, Mrs. Emma O'Donnell. Native Sons—Junior Past Grand President Fletcher A. Cutler, Grand President Hilliard E. Welch, Grand First Vice-president Charles A. Thompson, Grand Second Vice-president James A. Wilson, Grand Third Vice-president Charles L. Dodge, Grand Secretary John T. Regan, Grand Organist Henry G. W. Dinkelspiel, Grand Trustees Frank I. Gonzalez, John T. Newell, Alfred H. McKnew, John T. Skelton, Emmet Seawell, Seth Millington, Isadore H. Reuter.

The luncheon began with the singing of "The Star Spangled Banner" by the assemblage and an invocation by Past Grand President May C. Roldemann. An orchestra, directed by Lillian B. Troy (Genevieve 132), rendered selections during the feast. Toasts were responded to as follows: "Native Daughters," Grand President Sue J. Irwin; "Native Sons," Grand President Hilliard E. Welch; "Homeless Children," Grand Second Vice-president James A. Wilson; "Native Daughters' Home," Past Grand President Emma Gruber-Foley; "California," Junior Past Grand President Fletcher A. Cutler. Vocal solos were rendered by Miss Sara Hagan (Genevieve 132), R. R. Dinnigan, Mrs. Lillian Murphy, Miss Alma Cella and Mrs. B. Bennett (Buena Vista 68), and Mrs. J. Emmett Hayden (Oro Fino 9) gave a reading.

The luncheon was unanimously declared one of the most colorful and successful gatherings in the history of the Order in San Francisco.

REDWOODS TALKED ABOUT.

Winfield Scott, representing the California Redwood Association, delivered a lecture on the redwood forests, illustrated by a hundred slides, before a large assemblage of Native Sons and their friends in the library of the Grizzly Bear Club, Native Sons' Building, June 18. The talk was most interesting and greatly enjoyed.

TO PREPARE FOR ADMISSION DAY.

Early in July all the Native Son Parlors of San Francisco will organize a joint committee to arrange for participation in the Admission Day festivities at Sacramento.

Much interest is manifest in the approaching September 9 celebration—the seventy-sixth anniversary of California's admission to statehood—and a large crowd will go from San Francisco to the Capital City.

HISTORIC DOCUMENT.

A facsimile edition of the original town journal of Wm. A. Leidesdorff, treasurer of the Town of San Francisco, is now in course of preparation by Fred M. DeWitt of Oakland for early distribution to subscribers.

This historical official record will show receipts and disbursements as ordered by the town council, October 7, 1847, to May 2, 1848. Among the names that appear in the journal are Samuel Brannan, Jasper O'Farrell, Wm. H. Davis, Wm. F. Swasey, Wm. Toler, John A. Bigler, Wm. Pettit, Dr. Leavenworth, Wm. A. Leidesdorff, Nathan Hawk, Henry F. Dalton, Basil Hall, Thos. Kittleman, Geo. Hyde, B. R. Buckelow and Mellus & Howard.

SURPRISE FOR DEPUTY.

La Estrella Parlor No. 89 N.D.G.W. celebrated its institution anniversary with a dinner at which D.D.G.P. Helen Mann and Alma Buhr Crispini were honor guests. The latter, a recent bride who will make her home in Shanghai, China, was presented with a gift of silver.

May 24 a surprise was tendered D.D.G.P. Mann, who was the recipient of many gifts. The table was beautifully decorated with seasonable blooms and a delicious supper was served. Dancing and games were indulged in and a merry time was had. The first meeting of each month the Parlor celebrates the members' birthdays; those residing out of the city are sent greetings.

JOINT PUBLIC INSTALLATION.

James Lick Parlor No. 220 N.D.G.W. made noteworthy strides forward the past six months, due largely to the carrying out of the suggestion of D.D.G.P. May S. Barry to promote social features. Those in charge of the sociables were Past President Anna Ipswitch, May Bastable, Elizabeth Richards, Hilda Barbalegata, and Re-

N.S. FEDERAL JUDGE DEAD.

Federal Judge John S. Partridge, one of the West's foremost jurists, died May 20. He was a native of Susanville, Lassen County, aged 56, and was affiliated with Golden Gate Parlor No. 29 N.S.G.W. Three years ago he was appointed a federal judge for the Northern District of California, and administered justice without fear or favor.

"The passing of Judge Partridge," declares John P. Coghlan, a close personal friend and prominent Native Son, "is a loss to the Order, to the state and to the nation, all of which he served with high courage and outstanding abil- ity."

CALIFORNIA TO BENEFIT FROM FEDERAL HIGHWAY APPROPRIATION.

With the signing by President Calvin Coolidge of the Federal Aid Highway Act authorizing appropriations of $165,000,000 for federal aid in highway construction during the two fiscal years 1928 and 1929, the continuation of inter- state highway building in the West is definitely assured, says the California State Automobile Association.

California will receive approximately $2,- 500,000 annually from this appropriation for expenditure on the federal-aid highways within the state. In addition, the United States Forest Service will receive approximately $680,000 annually for the construction of major road projects in the national forests of California. An additional $345,000 will be available annu- ally for the building of forest roads and trails used primarily for forest administration and fire protection purposes.

ELLEN RICHARDS.

Whereas, The angel of death has again descended into our midst and conveyed to the great beyond our beloved sister and friend, Ellen Richards, and while we bow to the Divine Will of Him who marks the sparrow's fall and does all things for the best, Ampola Parlor No. 80 N.D.G.W. deplores the loss of an esteemed member, and the still greater loss to her family of a kind and loving wife and mother; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we extend to her bereaved husband, daughters and son our heartfelt sympathy and trust that time may console and lessen their grief.

"Sweet be thy rest and peaceful thy sleeping,
God's way is best, thou art in His keeping.
O blessed sleep! where ills ne'er molest thee,
Why should we weep, since Heaven hath blessed thee?"

Therefore, be it further resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the records of our Parlor, that a copy be sent to the sorrowing family, and that a copy be sent to the "Amador Ledger" and one to The Grizzly Bear Magazine.

SPLENDID GIFT

Gift of a research library, observatory and park valued at approximately $5,000,000 from William A. Clark Jr. to the University of California Southern Branch was acknowledged by Director E. C. Moore at the annual commencement exercises held on the southern campus June 11.

The property is located in Los Angeles City and occupies almost an entire square block. Upon it is located the private home of Clark, and a newly-constructed library which was erected at a cost of $750,000. There is also an observatory with a six-inch glass, for which Clark intends to substitute a ten-inch glass. In the library is one of the finest collections of early editions of English and French literature.

Clark's gift to the Southern Branch is to be used as a research library for the university's students. The property surrounding the library is to be perpetually kept as a park, as one of the conditions of the gift. Clark plans to increase the collections of the library, and will also maintain and supervise the real property personally.

SHOVELS SPECIFIED FOR FOREST VISITORS' EQUIPMENT.

The public is again reminded that the last great stand of timber in the United States is here on the Pacific Coast, and that the concerted effort of the public at large together with those directly interested is necessary to the intelligent conservation of this great resource.

Forestry in California, due to the natural fertility of the soil and the favorable climate is, it is stated, ninety percent forest fire prevention, as with protection the lands of the state will reforest without the artificial assistance found necessary in other countries. Forest fire prevention rules suggested by the conservation department of the California Development Association are as follows:

1. Carry a long-handled shovel for use in burying your camp fire and for preparedness in meeting any forest fire emergency, as a few shovelfuls of dirt in time used on an incipient fire may prevent a costly holocaust.
2. When using matches, first, blow out the flame; second, hold until you can pinch the burnt end between your fingers to make sure there is no longer a spark; third, break the match before throwing away.
3. Leaving a camp, pour water upon the burning embers of the camp fire and cover with dirt; if water is not available, bury the embers under at least a foot of dirt.
4. Be positive that there are no smouldering sparks from cigar, cigarette or pipe flung on the ground or caught by the breeze.
5. In building a camp fire, seek a sheltered nook away from strong winds capable of carrying sparks and burning embers.
6. Clear a space of fifteen-foot radius of twigs, dried grass or other inflammable material when building a camp fire.
7. Upon discovering fire in the forest, if unable to immediately check it single-handed, lose no time in getting help.

DEATH SUDDENLY CALLS PROMINENT ALAMEDA NATIVE SON.

Oakland—Mervin Daniel Cooney, affiliated with Brooklyn Parlor No. 151 NSGW., which he represented at the Santa Rosa Grand Parlor in May and also at many previous Grand Parlor sessions, died suddenly May 23. He was a native of San Francisco, aged 26, and is survived by a wife, Evelyn Cooney (Brooklyn 157 N.D.G.W.)

Cooney was one of the most active Native Sons in Alameda County. His end came immediately following the pitching of a winning baseball game. He was a district deputy grand president, a past president of Brooklyn Parlor and the incoming governor of Past Presidents' Assembly No. 3 N.S.G.W. The latter organization and also the joint Alameda County Parlors N.S.G.W. and N.D.G.W. Homeless Children Committee, in the work of which he was greatly interested, have adopted resolutions deploring his untimely death.

work and vice-president of the San Pedro Social Agencies Council. Under the supervision of Second Vice-President Gertrude Riepe the Parlor has been sewing for the homeless children, furnishing night gowns for the Allen Junior Home in Los Angeles. May 28 memorial services were held, with Marshal Alma Werner as soloist.

June 9 President Charlotte Bennett, Rudecinda Dodson and Marshal Alma Werner of Rudecinda visited Long Beach Parlor. A program was presented and a supper served, the hostesses being those having June birthdays—Kate McFadyen, Bertha Hitt, Rose Ford, Lenora Dodd. Flowers were presented Mrs. McFadyen and Mrs. Hitt. Much merriment was created by the "I Remember" talks.

June 11 Rudecinda had a card party in the afternoon, Mrs. Ellen Jones getting the first prize. In the evening, following the Parlor's business session, Katherine Dodson had charge of a Flag Day program. Refreshments were served by the June good of the order committee, which also had charge of the card party: Gertrude Buchanan (chairman), Florence Schoneman, Leota Brucker.

NATIVE SONS' NUMBERS INCREASE.

Many visitors from neighboring Parlors were in attendance at the June 9 meeting of Sepulveda Parlor No. 263 N.S.G.W., when committees were announced to arrange for the Grand Parlor next year. James W. Mee was made general chairman and, believing in taking time by the forelock, has appointed the sub-committees. Support in its undertaking were pledged Sepulveda by all the visitors. Two candidates were initiated. Among the speakers of the evening were Burrell D. Neighbours, Andrew M. Stodel, Edgar C. Crowell, Ralph Dorsey, Sidney Witkowski, Ralph Harbison, William G. Newell, Richard Fryer, D.D.G.P. Ronald M. Ross, Deputy Grand President Albert V. Mayrhofer, Andrew Beazell. A "feed" was served under the direction of Cosmo Arcy, steward.

June 23 officers of the Parlor were elected, Edwin E. Baldwin being selected for president. Seven candidates were initiated. The Grand Parlor banner, for the best membership gain in the state, was presented. Secretary J. V. Carroll, at the Parlor's request, has sent a letter of thanks to the San Pedro Chamber of Commerce for the support given Sepulveda in obtaining the 1927 Grand Parlor for San Pedro. He particularly referred to the chamber's declaration that it stood back of the Parlor.

south trying to bring about a peaceful settlement of affairs, and aided Larkin greatly in learning of the feelings of the property-holders of that section.

Abel Stearns kept Larkin informed of the meetings and actions of the "assemblea" in the south. As sub-prefect, he was in a position to obtain all such information. July 8 he wrote to Larkin telling him of the colonization scheme of MacNamara which, if accomplished, would have been a serious menace to the United States.

MacNamara was an Irish clergyman who wished to establish an Irish colony in California. He told the Mexican government that such a colony would act as a buffer state between Protestant America and California. He applied for two thousand leagues of land in the interior and on the River San Joaquin, commencing north at the Arroyo "Concomnes" and south or southeast as far as the interior of San Gabriel. He obligated himself to bring two thousand families and a total number of ten thousand souls. The "assemblea" recommended favorably his plan of colonization, but the grant had to be confirmed by the national government, as all grants over forty-four leagues had to be confirmed by it. MacNamara urged his request, saying that it would resist the encroachment of the Yankees. The Mexican president cynically replied that he thought that the Irish were much more likely to join the Yankees, and he refused to confirm the grant.

In June 1846 Stearns was appointed sub-prefect of Los Angeles by Governor Pico, and was thereby responsible for the collecting of the troops in Los Angeles for the Mexican government. June 21 orders were sent to him from the governor of California for the defense of Los Angeles. The order was for Stearns to defend, with other authorities, the city by every means possible against anarchists and suspicious persons. The 23rd an order was issued to him to collect fifty men to drive off the invaders, and the 28th and 29th letters were sent urging him to send the men asked for. June 30 Stearns sent fourteen men under the command of Juan Gallardo.

July 11 Stearns was informed by the Mexican government of the taking of Monterey on the 7th of July by the American squadron, and in consequence the governor ordered that the sending of forces which were asked for in the circular of the 8th of July from Santa Inez be suspended, and he ordered Stearns to place Los Angeles in the best possible state of defense. Besides that, he should put in place of safety the archives of the sub-prefecture and courts, and warn the citizens to do the same with their property and persons.

Meanwhile, Stearns assisted Larkin in the south and was able to avoid detection by the Mexican government, but their combined efforts were defeated by the acts of Captain John Fremont and his associates and by Commodore Robert Stockton's perversity.

Taking all of Don Abel Stearns' political activities into consideration, it can truly be said that his greatest service to California was that rendered Thomas O. Larkin. Without the appointment of Stearns, it would have been impossible for Larkin to have gained any headway in the south, as Don Abel was one of the most influential men of that section and a leader to be followed.

CIVIC ACTIVITIES IN LOS ANGELES.

Arriving in California, Abel Stearns took an interest in the material and political welfare of the community in which he lived. Before settlement in Los Angeles, in 1834, he was interested in the internal conditions in California. May 1, 1830, he signed resolutions with others at Monterey urging the importance of sending convicts back to Mexico on the same ships that brought them. The suggestion was subsequently approved by Echeandia. Stearns saw the evils resulting from such a system of colonization, and the harm being done to the settlers who came to California to make homes.

Upon settlement at Los Angeles Stearns immediately took an active interest in the material and political welfare of the community, of which he became an enterprising member. The title of "don" was bestowed on him by the Americans as well as the Californians. He became so thoroughly identified with the Spanish populatio through marriage to Arcadia Bandini and bu iness relations, that he seemed to later-come to be one of the early Spanish settlers. He w a man who would have made his mark at a time and in any community. "He was a war politician, something of a surveyor, and a ph sician man of the village," who officiated almost any capacity which he was called up to fill. In whatever manner he served, it w always beneficially for the people.

The first harbor improvement at San Ped was undertaken by Stearns, in 1834, when h headed a subscription for the improvement a road from his warehouse at San Pedro beac This subscription list contained the names many of the early Californians who took an active part in the making of California history.

It was not until 1850 that the next important move was made by the people for the improvement of San Pedro Harbor. In that year, May 30, Stearns was instrumental in having filed a memorial of the inhabitants of the County of Los Angeles to the members of the United States Senate and House of Representatives in Congress assembled, petitioning for the establishment of a port of entry and custom house at the port of San Pedro. It also set forth the commercial conditions existing in Southern California at that time.

In 1834 and early in 1835 Stearns was a leader in the fight to remove the capital of California from Monterey to Los Angeles. This was accomplished by the national decree of May 23, 1835, whereby Los Angeles was made a city and the capital of California.

In 1835 Stearns was one of the committee, appointed to obtain a house for occupation by the government offices, which reported February 24 of the following year. In 1836 he was elected "syndico" or fiscal agent of the town to the "ylustre ayuntamiento." He held the office for several years and was lauded for the zeal with which he discharged the duties thereof. From time to time he made suggestions concerning the matters of the town. January 28, 1836, he indicated to the ayuntamiento that hydrophobia was spreading and he felt the necessity of killing dogs, as they were very numerous. The president agreed with the suggestion to the extent of recommending an ordinance limiting the number of dogs to two for each person, and these were to be tied. February 25, 1836, Stearns offered a room in his house for the use of the city government meetings of that year. April 10, 1836, he was in favor of forming a company of the best citizens, who would choose their own officers and hold themselves in readiness to aid the authorities. It was about this time that Prudon's vigilance committee was in action.

Stearns was the advocator, April 28, 1836, of allowing another person to denounce any agricultural land that had been granted, but not occupied for a term of two years. He felt that this would make for agricultural progress in the community. The idea was incorporated into a law by the ayuntamiento. April 8, 1837, he reported that grape-brandy was being sold at the Santa Gertrudis ranch without duty being paid. Evidently, as city attorney, he was interested in having others, at least, pay their just dues into the public treasury.

Stearns was appointed on a committee by the ayuntamiento of Los Angeles, May 15, 1838, to consider a petition concerning the non-recognition of Carrillo as governor. The committee later in the day handed in a report recommending that Alvarado be recognized as governor, and the report was approved by the ayuntamiento. He was one of those petitioning, August 5, 1838, for the removal of the cemetery beyond the city center, for fear of insanitary conditions arising. The petition was approved by the committee to which it was referred, and by the ayuntamiento August 13, 1838.

In April 1839 a committee was to be appointed by the ayuntamiento to draft a map of the city and its jurisdiction and to mark off its municipal lands, and Stearns offered his services as surveyor to the ayuntamiento. At the time of the arrest of foreigners in 1840, Stearns was one of the exceptions. According to Davis, he escaped because he had come to the country so early, was a wealthy merchant and was "highly respected by the officials."

In 1844 Don Abel was elected to the junta at Los Angeles. In that year there was an epidemic of smallpox, and June 28 Jose Antonio Carrillo, Jose F. Mora and Stearns signed a declaration stating what must be done about it. During the year 1845 Stearns began to enter more into political affairs, and February 3 was among the commissioners appointed by the junta to urge Micheltorena to respect the universal desire of the people by complying with the agreement of Santa Teresa, and October 6

A BIT O' FARMING

MANY PROBLEMS STILL CONFRONT THE FARMER

WITH THE HARVEST SEASON here, predictions of yields in field and orchard are borne out by the yields being gathered by the farmers of the state. Production, it would seem, has been brought to a stage fairly nearing perfection. While there are many problems to be worked out yet, the practices in field and tree crops appear to have gone far beyond those others necessary in agricultural production. And these must be worked out before the farmer attains ultimate prosperity in his industry.

One of these is the cost of production. It is not difficult to produce large crops, if money is spent liberally in the doing of it. But the farmer who makes money is he who not only raises big crops, but does it at low cost. Again, large crops mean nothing if the quality is not good. Better fruit, better grain, better truck crops must be sent to market.

Standardization is not to be neglected. The produce shipped must be of uniform quality, as well as being good; it must be ripe, but not overripe, if it is fruit; it must be of the kind that will sell itself. Last, but by no means least, the markets themselves must not be neglected. Perhaps it is under-consumption and not overproduction that is hurting the specialty crops of California; but if this is so, then new markets must absorb more of the offerings. Gluts must be avoided and ruinous competition stopped.

The farmer is not done when he raises a big crop. He is not even done when he sees to quality and pack, and does it all economically. He must follow through until the consumer gets his produce, and he must strive always to see that the consumer gets only the best available, and that as cheaply as possible.

SHEEP BUSINESS GOOD.

That the sheep business still is good, was evidenced by the annual ram sale held by the California Woolgrowers' Association at the University Farm at Davis early in June. Including all breeds, 898 rams were sold to improve the flocks of California woolgrowers, at an average price of $50.13. The top price paid was by A. T. Spencer, president of the woolgrowers' association, who bid in a Hampshire buck offered by Frank Brown and Son of Carlton, Oregon, for $625. The H. O. Harrison Stock Farms of Woodland paid $600 for a buck sent down by the Mount Haggin Land Company, Anaconda, Montana. Both these sales indicate the continued favor in which the Hampshire breed is held. Other breeds sold well, though, and the prices paid throughout the two days of the sale indicated the belief of the sheepmen in their industry.

MACHINE WIPES APPLES.

A machine to wipe apples, introduced by the Okanogan Apple Growers' Union in Washington, has attracted the attention of orchardists in California. By this wiping all traces of spray residue, dust, etc., will be removed and the improved appearance of the fruit quite likely will pay for the process. Modification of the machine, it is believed, may make it adaptable for pears; and recalling the troubles of a few years ago when California pears were dumped into Boston harbor because of arsenate of lead residue, growers here believe they may be able to fight the codling moth to the last minute and still have marketable fruit.

RECORD PEACH CROP.

Cling peaches in California will reach the peak of production this year, the crop being estimated at 270,000 tons. The pack is estimated at 12,000,000 cases, which also will be a new record. Prices set by the canning peach association are $40 a ton on the basis of No. 1 fruit; and growers will find a fair profit, it is believed, in this figure.

MORE HOGS NEEDED.

Despite the decline of the hog industry in California, the repeated predictions that it would return, and the accompanying collapse of swine booms, it now appears that California may be on its way toward the very desirable goal of producing its own pork. In 1910, with a human population of 2,377,549, California had 790,000 hogs, or about one hog for every three persons. Today we have one hog for every ten, and we spend $50,000,000 annually buying pork from other states. A few hogs on every farm, the feeding of more barley to swine and the breeding of better animals are three factors that will be prominent in the revival of the hog industry.

CARE OF FRESH MILK.

All milk contains bacteria. If carefully produced and cared for, however, the number of bacteria may be held far below the danger point. Rapid cooling is most necessary. Just as quickly as possible the milk should be reduced in temperature to 50 degrees, at which point the development of the bacteria is checked. Water may be used for the preliminary cooling, but if that source is not sufficient to reduce the temperature quickly, ice should be used in the final operations.

CARE FOR THE COW.

Be careful of the cow at calving time. For the first twenty-four hours, feed sparingly, if at all. Perhaps a bran mash, but nothing more, should be given. There are dairymen who believe a bucket of slightly warmed water is sufficient for the first day, gradually increasing the first light feed for a week, or perhaps two. Underfeeding is better than overfeeding at this time, although there is a middle ground that should be occupied in this matter.

BURYING ORANGES FOR STORAGE.

A simple method of preserving citrus fruits that may become popular with the small producer, at least, and with those who buy their supply early in the season, has been found by a California grower. He simply buries the fruit in the ground. Wet sand is packed around the fruit in a box, which is covered with earth and left untouched until it is desired to eat the oranges. They will keep for three or four months, perhaps longer. For a small quantity of fruit, this is said to work as satisfactorily as a storeroom with artificially controlled temperature, and it has practically no expense attached.

BREEDING YOUNG HEIFERS.

Don't breed heifers too young. They will give better returns through the production period of their lives if they are not put on the paying row too early. Breeding too young stunts the growth and hinders later development. When a heifer grows out early and shows a disposition to put on fat, she may better be bred; but ordinarily it is wise to delay the period of motherhood.

CULL NON-PRODUCING HENS.

Don't be too charitable if you are producing eggs for the market. Don't feed hens that don't help to feed you. The beautiful hen with lots of color in her legs, with unruffled feathers and a disposition to retire early and arise late, may be fine for decoration, but for business purposes she is not profitable.

HUMUS IN THE SOIL.

Some farmers notice that some soils take water more easily and hold it better. Heavy, black adobe almost refuses water. Sandy soil takes it readily but does not hold it. The answer, generally speaking, is lack of humus. Add manure, barnyard manure, as first aid. Consistently plant and disc under cover crops. Minerals and non organic fertilizers may help, but for certain results nothing ever has been found as surely satisfactory as barnyard manure. It lightens heavy soils, it gives body to light soils, it keeps good soils good, and makes poor soils better. It is not always easily obtainable, it is true, but when the farmer finally discovers that a few cows, a few sheep, a few hogs and a few hens always add profits to any farm, this difficulty will not be so acute.

DRAINS PAY DIVIDENDS.

Nothing pays better dividends than drains. Tile drains may be used profitably, it is safe to say, on nearly every acre of land in the state. If irrigation is practiced, drainage must be if the agriculture is to endure beyond a few years. Because the land is hilly and apparently well drained on the surface, is no assurance that the subsurface waters are adequately cared for. In many parts of the state, particularly in Northern California, soursap has been troublesome. With drainage it has not been a problem. In the southern and central parts of the state, the rising water table has ruined thousands of acres of valuable farm land. With proper drainage this land today would be as productive as ever. Irrigation and drainage go hand in hand; and drainage often is needed where irrigation never will be.

MILDEW ON ROSES.

Be careful of the water on your roses, if you don't want mildew. It always has been the practice to water plants and flowers in the evening. On most plants, this will do very well; but roses wet heavily going into the cool of the night are pretty liable to get mildew. Water in the morning, and soak the soil down where the roots will get it. Sulphur the bushes if mildew does appear.

PUREBRED SIRES ADD BEEF.

The cost of purebred sires for beef herds may be greater in the start than if scrub bulls are used. But in the analysis of profit and loss at the end of the season, a different story will be told. Good bulls will put about 200 pounds more meat on their sons than will scrubs. One experiment showed a profit of about $6.50 per head for the steers sired by good bulls, as against a loss of 50c a head where scrubs were used. Whether in meat, milk, eggs, wool or any other livestock product, purebred sires will pay for themselves many times over with the added increase of the produce.
and production a little.

EFFICIENT MOTIVE POWER.

Whether the tractor is relegating the horse to the things of the past is not a question of real concern to the farmer who uses either or both. His problem is: which is the most economical for my purpose? Having determined this, he must be alert to see that his motive power, whether horse or gas engine, functions efficiently. The horse, perhaps, is as near foolproof as motive power may be. The tractor is daily becoming more and more dependable; but the wise tractor operator will keep his tractor in repair, overhaul it when he has nothing more important to do, and keep abreast of the times by reading bulletins on tractor care and in attending schools given by the College of Agriculture to this same end.

HENHOUSE NO PLACE FOR VISITORS.

At the risk of appearing unhospitable, entertain your visitors somewhere else besides in the henhouse. It is well known that roup, chickenpox and other poultry diseases may be transmitted by human agency. Further, strangers never are welcomed by the lighter and more nervous breeds, and egg production invariably falls following a scare in the flock. Keep visitors and sick birds from the flock, cull carefully, give plenty of ventilation in hot weather and cold, feed carefully and watch the physical condition of your birds, and your disease troubles in the flock will be held to a minimum.

CALIFORNIA AT PHILADELPHIA

The Sesquicentennial, commemorative of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the independence of the United States, is now in progress at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. One of the features is a United States pageant, the several states being represented by dolls. The California Federation of Women's Clubs approved of this pageant, and delegated to Miss Grace S. Stoermer of Los Angeles, chairman of the federation's California history and landmarks division and also a Past Grand President of the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West, the responsibility of creating an idea which would be representative of California.

The illustration shows Miss Stoermer and the result of her efforts. The period depicted is that when California became one of the Sisterhood of States, September 9, 1850. In the courtyard of a hacienda home, a senorita and caballero are dancing, to the strains of the latter's guitar. The flowering plants are typical of those brought from Spain by the mission fathers. The exhibit was executed by disabled war veterans at the California Hut, 1028 South Figueroa street, Los Angeles City.

The California Hut is one of three organizations in America specializing in creating a business commensurate with the disabilities of each individual and making it possible for all veterans leaving the hospitals to find a means of self-support during that period of readjustment to a business world to which many of them have not even had a first introduction. It combines vocational training in the hut shops or permits disabled ex-service men or women to utilize the workshop to pursue pre-war trades and to market their wares through the hut salesrooms or through traveling sales. Wholesale as well as retail business is carried on.

The California Hut is the only organization of its kind supported entirely by civic bodies. There is no list of cotnributors, nor has it ever been before the public for donations or with entertainments for raising funds. Instructors are supplied by the board of education, rent by the city council and community chest, heat and light by the municipal power bureau, and the grounds are maintained by the park department. All city departments co-operate to place the men in positions when they apply with recommendations from the hut.

The California Hut is one hundred percent co-operation. All thought of charity and sentimentality is eliminated. The men create a revolving fund for purchasing materials by paying fifteen percent commission. Strict business principles are adhered to. In 1925, out of a total business of $24,051.98, $19,063.85 was paid to the men for their work. Every disabled ex-service man or woman is welcomed.

N. D. GRAND PARLOR PROCEEDINGS

Contra Costa County, November 3, 1925; Santa Ana 235, Santa Ana, Orange County, December 19, 1925; La Dorada 236, San Francisco, April 29, 1926; Pleasanton 237, Pleasanton, Alameda County, June 14, 1926; Betsy Ross 238, Centerville, Alameda County, June 15, 1926; El Tejon 239, Bakersfield, Kern County, June 17, 1926. Several additional parlors are ready for institution, and many other places have requested the formation of parlors.

That the Subordinate Parlors in the central portion of the state are making the greatest gains. That Alameda is the only county in the state showing no loss. That Twin Peaks 185 (San Francisco) had the largest increase of any Parlor.

THANKS TENDERED.

"To our Heavenly Father, for the health and strength and guidance through the year. To the Native Daughters of the Golden West, for their expression of confidence in me and loyalty and support during the year. To the loved ones at home, whose thoughts and prayers have followed your Grand President over the state. To all my friends, for courtesies and considerations shown.

"To all grand officers, and officers of Subordinate Parlors, whose co-operation and assistance willingly given are truly appreciated. To all Past Grand Presidents, for encouragement and fraternal advice. To Past Grand President Ema Gett, for her motherly guidance and untiring efforts that the members of this Grand Parlor might be comfortable and happy during the Grand Parlor session. To Past Grand Presidents Ariana W. Stirling, Addie L. Mosher and Dr. Victory A. Derrick of Alameda County, who were ever ready to respond to the call of the Grand President. To the faithful followers of the home-Parlor and other Alameda County Parlors, and especially to Grand Trustee Sally R. Thaler, whose loyalty never failed, though often the rays of morning light were appearing over the Berkeley Hills when the official party reached home."

SUMMARIZED PROCEEDINGS.

Most of the reports of grand officers and committees dealt with matters heretofore given publicity in The Grizzly Bear, so no reference is here made to them, nor is attention given tc proposals which failed to receive the Grand Parlor's sanction. A summary of the proceedings follows:

GRAND OFFICERS' REPORTS.

Grand Secretary Alice H. Dougherty reported the cash balance June 1, 1925, $10,723.93; year's receipts, $15,610.86; year's disbursements, $14,318.02; cash balance June 1, 1926, $12,016.77. The financial gain for the year was $1,292.84.

Grand Treasurer Susie K. Christ reported the condit'on of the several funds as follows: General—receipts, $15,610.86; disbursements, $14,318.02; balance, $12,016.77. Death Benefit—receipts, $2,788.98; disbursements, $5,550; balance, $507.44. Home—receipts, $9,662.47; disbursements, $3,000; balance, $25,270.81.

LEGISLATION ENACTED.

Article VI, section 10, Grand Parlor Constitution, amended to provide for the appointment of supervising district deputy grand presidents—instead of district deputy grand presidents-at-large—and defining their duties.

Article VIII, section 1, Grand Parlor Constitution, amended to add a new subdivision providing for the creation of a board of control of three members, to supervise the investment of Subordinate Parlor funds.

Article VIII, section 2, Grand Parlor Constitution, amended to limit appointment to standing comittees to Grand Parlor members.

Article VIII, section 1, subdivision first, Grand Parlor Constitution, amended to provide for rotating finance committee of three members.

Article XI, section 7, Grand Parlor Constitution amended to provide for the payment of expenses incurred by an organizer.

Article XI, section 16, Grand Parlor Constitution, amended to make possible the creation of additional parlors in a community, irrespective of population.

Article XI, section 18, Grand Parlor Constitution, amended to provide that specified circulars shall not be presented to any Subordinate Parlor unless approved by the Grand President, and that "No communication referring to candidates for public office shall be read or considered."

Article XI, section 26, Grand Parlor Constitution, amended to provide that a Subordinate Parlor shall respond to the Grand Secretary's request for information within ten days or be penalized.

Article II, section 2, Constitution Subordinate Parlors, amended by reducing the minimum age of applicants for membership to 16.

Article IV, section 2, Constitution Subordinate Parlors, amended to provide that only benefit paying Parlors must elect a physician.

Article VI, section 12, Constitution Subordinate Parlors, amended to provide for physician's examination of applicant for membership in benefit paying Parlors only.

Article VII, section 4, Constitution Subordinate Parlors, amended to provide that in non-benefit paying Parlors an applicant for reinstatement need not be required to pass a physician's examination.

Article VIII, section 1, Constitution Subordinate Parlors, amended to provide "that benefits shall not be paid until a fund of $5 per member has been accumulated in the Parlor's treasury."

Article XIII, section 5, Constitution Subordinate Parlors, amended to provide that only benefit paying Parlors must require a physician's certificate from the holder of a withdrawal card.

Article XIII, section 6, Constitution Subordinate Parlors, amended by adding "No member out of her Parlor on withdrawal card shall attend meeting of any Parlor."

BUSINESS TRANSACTED.

Modesto, Stanislaus County, was designated as the meeting-place for the Forty-first (1927) Grand Parlor.

The budget, approximately $12,000, was adopted and the percapita fixed at $1.50, 50 cents per capita of which goes toward the support of the Native Daughters' Home.

Alice H. Dougherty, retiring after fifteen years as Grand Secretary, was made a permanent member of the Grand Parlor.

Fifty dollars was donated toward the restoration of Franciscan missions in Santa Barbara County.

The Grizzly Bear was re-endorsed as the official organ of the Order, and provision was made for publishing the official directory of Subordinate Parlors therein.

A special committee was authorized, to revise the constitutions of the Grand Parlor and the Subordinate Parlors, the manual of instruction, the institution and the installation ceremonies and directed to report at the next Grand Parlor.

The action of the Grand President in issuing charters to new Parlors—Auburn 233, Carquinez 234, Santa Ana 235, La Dorada 236, Pleasanton 237, Betsy Ross 238, El Tejon 239—was ratified.

Sacramento City was endorsed as the place for holding this year's general Admission Day celebration, September 9.

A cablegram of greetings was ordered sent Past Grand President Dr. Mariana Bertola, traveling in Europe.

Five thousand dollars was set aside in a fund for education. The amount is to be invested, and the interest devoted to the establishment of two scholarships, of $150 each, in any university exclusive of Mills College. Beneficiaries must be daughters of members of the Order. A rotating committee of three, to administer the fund and pass on qualifications of applicants for the scholarships, was authorized.

Ten thousand dollars was set as the amount to be raised for the proposed Pioneer Memorial Redwood Grove in Humbolt County. Five per cent of the percapita tax was ordered placed in the fund. The incoming Grand President, Pea amb, was added to the committee in charge of ie project. Past Grand President Anna L. Monie chairman. Subordinate Parlors may purase trees in the grove at $100 each, the trees be marked with the names of Pioneers of note Johnson (El Carmelo 181) of Daly City, San Mateo County; Estelle Evans (Antioch 223) of Antioch, Contra Costa County; Anna Thuesen (Alta 3) of San Francisco.

Following installation there were numerous presentations, retiring Grand President Irwin receiving, among many other gifts, an emblematic diamond and ruby ring from the Grand Parlor, Past Grand President Olive Bedford-Matlock making the presentation adress, which was eloquently responded to by Miss Irwin. A team from the Sacramento Parlors delighted with a drill.

ON THE SIDE.

The entertainment program was carried out as outlined in The Grizzly Bear for June. At the Grand Parlor banquet Monday the Sacramento County Parlors sprang a surprise, presenting to Grand President Sue J. Irwin, through Past Grand President Ema Gett, a diamond and platinum brooch, and to Mrs. Gett, the chairman of the Sacramento Parlors' joint entertainment committee, through Ethel Miller (Victory 216), a diamond and platinum bracelet.

Following the banquet there was a public reception, over which Past Grand President Ema Gett presided. The welcoming adresses of Mayor A. C. Goddard and E. C. Porter, secretary-manager chamber of commerce, were responded to by Grand President Sue J. Irwin, who invited visiting delegates from various sections of the state to tell of the Order's activities in their localities. Grand President Hilliard E. Welch of the Native Sons extended greetings from that Order, and Grand Trustee John T. Skelton urged co-operation in Sacramento's Admission Day celebration.

At the luncheon at Courtland Tuesday, Grand President Sue J. Irwin introduced Superintendent of Public Instruction Will C. Wood, who spoke on "The Value of Civic Organizations to the Advancement of Education."

At the grand ball that evening the Grand Parlor N.S.G.W. was represented by the following: Grand Secretary John T. Regan, Grand Trustees Frank I. Gonzalez, John T. Newell and John T. Skelton.

PAST GRANDS' REUNION.

The Past Grand Presidents had their annual reunion around the banquet board in the empire room of the Sacramento Hotel Tuesday, Past Grand President Dr. Eva R. Rasmussen being in charge. The table was elaborately decorated with a wealth of flowers, and at each Past Grand's place was a souvenir of the occasion—a red, white and yellow doll bearing the year she served as Grand President—the gift of Dr. Rasmussen. Responses to the subjects assigned were made as follows:

"Tender Memories," Carrie Roesch-Durham; "Absent Members," Minnie Coulter; "Friendship," Cora B. Sifford; "Happy Days," Ema Gett; "Sterling Women," Ariana W. Stirling; "Toastmistress," Dr. Eva R. Rasmussen; "Past Presidents," Emma Gruber-Foley; "California Giants," Anna L. Morton; "Mormon Bells," Emma W. Humpe- [illegible] Pepper; "Mamie G. Peters, [illegible] Olive Bedford-Matlock; "The Mother Lode [illegible] West"; Golden Golden Dore; "Mary [illegible] Pioneer"; Margaret Grace H[illegible] Maria Pierce Carmichael; "Our [illegible] Angels"; Grace S. Stoppani; "[illegible] Jane L. Mesher; "The Diamond Jubilee"; Alice L. Bell; Pinnacles"; Bertha A. [illegible] Victory A. Derrick; Flavia [illegible] Mary M. [illegible]; "Colors of Our Order"; Ada V. McAvoy; "Northern Lights"; Catherine L. Gloster.

It was before the fortieth Grand Parlor attended by Past Grand Dorcas, she was presented with a silver vase by Past Grand President Sterling making the presentation address. And it was the twenty-five years since Past Grand Gett presided over the Grand Parlor at her home city, Sacramento, she, also was remembered with a silver vase, Past Grand Sifford making the presentation address.

THE "MAGIC CITY"—LOS ANGELES

LOS ANGELES, THE NAME OF THE city now the metropolis of California, is abbreviated from the much longer name first given to the little stream passing through it by Padre Crespi with Governor Portola on his first trip north in search of the Port of Monterey, August 1, 1769. September 4, 1781, Governor Filipe de Neve founded El Pueblo de Nuestra Senora la Reina de Los Angeles with eleven families of settlers brought up from Mexico as colonists. From the original forty-four souls it grew slowly, until in 1810 the population was 365. At the time of American occupation in 1850 the population was 1610. The population now, based on school enrollment, directory count, water and gas meters, telephones in service and building statistics, is estimated at 1,211,333. It was the last place to surrender to the United States, being at the time capital of the Mexican province.

Oranges were first grown in 1850 on the Wolfskill ranch. The first newspaper, "The Star," was published in 1851. Between 1850 and 1870 Los Angeles was one of the most lawless places in the West. The Southern Pacific Railway came to Los Angeles from San Francisco in 1876. The harbor breakwater was completed in 1912.

The "Magic City" is the county seat of Los Angeles County, which is more than three times as large in area as the State of Rhode Island, stands eighth in assessed wealth in the United States, first in agricultural wealth, contains forty-four separate incorporated towns and cities and has now a population estimated at more than 2,000,000. Increasing during the last 25 years almost 1,000 percent until now the largest city in the Western Americas, Los Angeles has justly earned the name of "Magic City."

Here are some interesting facts, revealed in statistics compiled by the research department of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, pertaining to the "Magic City":

PREPARING FOR GRAND OPERA SEASON.

With a company of great artists, famous alike on the continent and in America, signed to sing the leading roles in eleven performances, plans for the third annual season of the Los Angeles Grand Opera Association, which opens October 4, are being perfected. Applications for tickets are being received at opera headquarters, 424 Philharmonic Auditorium.

The operas, all of which will be given in the new Shrine auditorium, probably the finest opera house in the world, with perfect acoustics and splendid arrangement of seats for unobstructed vision, are to be sumptuously mounted.

The artists who will appear include: Rosa Raisa, Claudia Muzio, Claire Dux, Anna Fitziu, Louella Melins, sopranos; Tito Schipa, Charles Marshall, Paul Althouse, Antonio Cortis, tenors; Louise Homer, Kathryn Meisle, contraltos; Georges Baklanoff, Gracomo Rimini, Richard Bonelli, Desire Defrere, baritones; Virgilio Lazzari, Edoward Cotreuil, bassos. Richard Hageman will conduct, with Gaetano Merola, director of the San Francisco company, as guest conductor.

METROPOLITAN COLLEGE U. S. C.

The summer quarter of Metropolitan College, the evening school of the University of Southern California, opens Tuesday, July 6, in the Transportation Building, seventh and Los Angeles streets, according to announcement by Dr. T. W. MacQuarrie, director.

Evening business courses in accounting, business law, business [illegible] accounting, economics and [illegible] geography are scheduled. Adult beginners may take freshman college courses in English, advanced composition, economic history, accounting, business speech, general psychology and Spanish.

At the June commencement of the University of Southern California this year, eight-seven evening earned college degrees were conferred on adult students who completed their required college work at Metropolitan College. Summer quarter classes will meet twice a week from July 6 to August 27.

DISABLED VETERANS ENTERTAINED.

The four Los Angeles Parlors of Native Sons—Los Angeles No. 45, Ramona No. 109, Hollywood No. 196, Vaquero No. 262—joined with Los Angeles Parlor No. 124 N.D.G.W. in entertaining disabled war veterans at the California Hut June 3. Over 100 veterans enjoyed the Spanish supper, prepared and served by the Native Daughters.

Mrs. Boyle Workman, president of the hut, was the toastmistress and the topic of the evening was "I remember." Responses were made by Mrs. Florence Dodson-Schoneman, Miss Kathryn Ronan, Burrel D. Neighbours, Andrew Stodel, Gabriel Ruiz, John W. Topham, Judge Louis P. Russill, Walter Baskerville, Councilman Boyle Workman, Judge R. M. Widney, Mrs. A. S. C. Forbes. California songs were rendered by Mary Belle Chapman, accompanied by Miss Agnes Hall, and selections were read by Mrs. Rees Wallis.

The committee in charge of the evening for the Native Daughters consisted of Mrs. Mary K. Corcoran, Miss Grace Norton, Mrs. Adele White, Miss Grace S. Stoermer.

JOINT PUBLIC INSTALLATION, JULY 10.

Officers of Los Angeles Parlor No. 124 N.D.G.W. and Los Angeles Parlor No. 45, Ramona Parlor No. 109, Hollywood Parlor No. 196, Pasadena Parlor No. 259, Vaquero Parlor No. 262 and Glendale Parlor No. 264 N.S.G.W. are to be jointly installed. Grand Trustee Marvel Thomas will officiate for the Native Daughters and D.D.P.G. Ronald M. Ross for the Native Sons.

The ceremonies will be public, and will be held Saturday evening, July 10, in Glendale, at the Tuesday Afternoon Club, 400 North Central Avenue. Dancing will follow the installation.

WIENE BAKE JULY 24.

The good of the order committee of Los Angeles Parlor No. 45 N.S.G.W. is sponsoring a gala event for the evening of Saturday, July 24—a "wiene" bake. This is the first of many outdoor activities planned for the summer months. Los Flores Canyon, seven miles north of Santa Monica on the coast highway, is the place selected. From the highway to the exact spot of the bake the road will be posted.

All Native Sons, their families and properly-sponsored eligibles are invited. There will be many surprises in the way of novel entertainment, and it is well assured that all who attend will have an enjoyable and long-to-be-remembered evening. Howard Bentley is chairman of the arrangements committee.

July 10 a class of candidates will be initiated. Officers of the Parlor, with Andrew G. Beazell as president, have been elected. The jinks of June 17 was well attended, and following a program directed by Sid Witkowski all went "uptown" to enjoy a lunch. There, there were numerous responses to Toastmaster Beazell's calls.

CHINESE NIGHT, JULY 16.

Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W., in the interest of increasing attendance, has devised a mystery box, which is to be opened at each meeting commencing July 1. Leon J. Leonard heads the corps of officers elected for the new term. Nearly $12,000 is in the fund for the Parlor's new home, and it is expected the required sum will be forthcoming in the very near future.

Ramona's program for July includes initiation the 9th, and a Chinese night the 16th. On this latter occasion something extraordinary in the way of entertainment is promised. Charles Gassaigne and Gus Alvarez will direct the gaieties of the occasion.

LOS ANGELES COUNTY FAIR.

Expansion plans for two major departments of the Los Angeles County Fair at Pomona this fall have been divulged following a conference of A. D. Thorburn, superintendent of the industrial department, with fair officials.

The space for the industrial department will be enlarged 35 percent, and the automobile show will be separated from the industrial show. Prospects for the biggest automobile show in the history of the fair and increasing demand for space in the industrial section have made this expansion program imperative.

"The increasing sphere of information offered in this department of the fair is remarkable," Thorburn says. "We expect representative exhibits from over the entire state. Several northern pump and machinery manufacturers have already reserved space. There is an increasing interest in and an increasing demand for heavy machinery for many different purposes."

The poultry show will have an industrial exhibit in connection, showing all incubators, brooders and miscellaneous poultry equipment and feeds. Likewise, the rabbit department will hold the usual fur exhibit.

HIGHJINKS, JULY 19.

The dance sponsored by Hollywood Parlor No. 196 N.S.G.W. at El Patio ballroom June 21 was a decided social success. Henry G. Bodkin was chairman of the committee of arrangements. Several candidates were initiated during the past month and officers were elected, Floyd G. Riley being selected for president.

Hollywood's program for July includes a smoker and highjinks the 19th, and initiation of several candidates the 26th. The nature of the entertainment for the jinks will not be revealed, but President John W. Topham says "any Native Son who fails to be on hand will regret his absence."

FLAG DAY OBSERVED.

Vaquero Parlor No. 262 N.S.G.W. had as its guests a delegation from Sepulveda 263 (San Pedro) June 16, when Flag Day was observed. W. H. Trollinger, chairman good of the order committee, extended a welcome, which was responded to by President William Reuter of Sepulveda. The address of the evening was delivered by Sheriff William I. Traeger, Past Grand President, whose subject was "Our Flag." Short talks were made by State Senator Harry Chamberlin, Grand Trustee John T. Newell, William Grisby, Andrew Stodel, Ralph Harbison, Willard Buchanan. Glen J. Packer sang "The Star Spangled Banner" and President Gabriel Ruiz recited "Our Pledge."

Vaquero's July program includes a dance the 14th, card party the 21st, and initiation, with Los Angeles Parlor as guests, the 28th. The Parlor is progressing in every way. It plans to change its meeting-place to the Civic Center Club headquarters in the Tajo building, and its meeting-night to Tuesday. Gabriel Ruiz has been re-elected president for another six months.

BAZAR SUCCESSFUL.

Los Angeles Parlor No. 124 N.D.G.W. had a most successful bazar, in charge of Mrs. Grace Haven, May 26. Over $215 was netted. Several candidates were initiated during June.

ABEL STEARNS

he was selected as second substitute member to the departmental assembly at Los Angeles.

In 1846 Stearns was elected sub-prefect and worked earnestly, both as a foe of Mexico and as a friend of the United States. He served as sub-prefect for a time before the American occupation; and municipal affairs, except as interrupted by the military rule of Gillespie in August and September of 1846, and of Fremont in January 1847, were managed by an ayuntamiento with Juan Gallardo and Jose Salazar as successive alcaldes. While serving as sub-prefect, he discharged many important acts. At this time he was also confidential agent for the United States; he did not neglect his duties as sub-prefect, however, but worked for the best interest of Californians.

January 23, 1847, when the new alcalde and officers for Los Angeles were to be elected, Fremont invited Stearns to a conference to advise him as to what officials to choose and what steps to take. Fremont wished to appoint the officers according to the wishes of the citizens. The meeting was to be held in the executive council-room on Tuesday, the 26th.

In 1847 Stearns was again elected "syndico" or city attorney and tax collector, and with Stephen Foster, who was alcalde, ran the government for several months. Foster and Stearns seem to have conducted the city's affairs very successfully. A chaingang was established and put to work on the dam, or headworks on the river, and on the irrigation ditch, both of which had fallen into disrepair. Several small Indian settlements within the pueblo, which were haunts of vice and filth, were demolished, and their inhabitants driven out. Vagrants were brought to time, and some regulation of the liquor traffic was attempted.

The failure of Congress to provide any form of territorial government for California, and evidence showing in the debates that statehood was not to be gained without a hard struggle, roused the people of American birth who had come to live in the region to the necessity of acting for themselves. It was decided to take the unusual, but emphatic, course of forming a state constitution, electing officers and starting off the whole machinery of government exactly as though the state had been admitted, and then demanding of Congress that it be allowed a place in the union. As early as December 1848, before the second failure of Congress to act, meetings were held in San Jose and San Francisco to agitate this plan, and when General Bennett Riley, who had been appointed by President Polk to succeed Colonel Mason as governor, arrived in Monterey, in April of 1849, the people were ready to act. General Riley wisely determined to make the movement an official one, and June 3, under instructions from Washington, issued a proclamation to the people of California to elect delegates to meet at Monterey September 1, 1849, to form a state constitution. Stearns was elected as one of the four representatives from Los Angeles, and was one of the signers of the first constitution of California, in 1849. He also served as a member of the State Legislature in 1849. He was instrumental in fixing the boundary of California as it is at present.

In 1850 Stearns was chosen first alcalde of Los Angeles County. The depositions taken before him that year concerning the Indian depredations on the Colorado give the most correct account of them in existence. These gave rise to the first Indian war in which the Americans were engaged after the conquest of California.

In July 1850 the court of sessions was active in looking after the county property, and by proper citation called upon Stearns to turn over to the sheriff, as officer of the court, the muskets and the ammunition that were in his hands for the defense of the people. For some time he made no reply, but in the fall reported that he did not believe the guns belonged to the county; that there was no mention of them in the treaty of Guadaloupe Hidalgo, and that there was nothing in the constitution of the new state to compel their surrender; that, in fact, under the constitution, he could not be compelled to give them up. This was the first constitutional question before the courts of Los Angeles County. The court avoided deciding the issue on the constitutional question. Afterwards such of the guns as had not been sold by Don Abel while in his possession were returned to the county. Stearns retained interest in the civic activities of Los Angeles until his death, in 1871. He was always interested in the welfare of the Californians, and gave his best services for them in whatever capacity he was called upon.

RANCHOS AND CITY BLOCKS.

Soon after his arrival in Los Angeles Stearns, in December 1834, acquired his first real estate in California. It was the tract on which the Arcadia and Baker blocks were built. A small adobe structure was constructed, from which he conducted his merchandising business until 1858, when he built the extensive Arcadia block which, it was reported, cost $80,000.

In 1840 Stearns married Dona Arcadia Bandini at the mission of San Gabriel. She was a daughter of Don Juan Bandini, one of the most important figures in the making of California history. After the marriage, Don Abel went into partnership with his father-in-law, in the ownership of their ranchos in California. Bandini, being a poor business manager and interested in politics, left the management of the ranches to Stearns, who was very capable in that capacity. The ranches were carried in his name.

Dona Arcadia was fourteen years of age when she married Don Abel, a man older than her father and whose features were considered by the people of the time to be unusually homely. Mrs. Stearns was as beautiful as her husband was ugly, and became the acknowledged social leader of Los Angeles and vicinity. The marriage was a happy one, and Mrs. Stearns was fond and proud of her genial and clever husband. Stearns' herders made up a little song over which their master often chuckled; translated, it was something like this: "Two little doves sang in a laurel, how lovely Dona Arcadia, how homely Don Abel."

Their home was on the side of the Baker block, at the southeast corner of Main and Arcadia streets. Here Stearns erected a substantial, wide-spreading adobe surrounding a large courtyard. The house was built under his own direction, and combined all the advantages of the native buildings with many of the comforts of modern houses. Because of its dimensions, it was called by the natives "el palacio de Don Abel." When the gates of the courtyard were closed, it was a citadel of itself, capable of withstanding a siege.

The "palacio" was the social center for Southern California, and a place of resort for the Americans who occasionally visited Los Angeles. It was here that the beautiful daughters of Don Juan Bandini entertained their wide circle of acquaintances from San Diego, Santa Barbara, etc., at grand balls and other charming social functions characteristic of life in Spanish countries. Here Commodore Jones, in 1842, Captain Fremont, in 1846 and 1847, and other distinguished historical characters, at various period were hospitably entertained.

November 22, 1842, Stearns sent the first gol from California to the United States Mint Philadelphia. It was carried in a sailing vesse by Alfred Robinson and consisted of twent ounces, California weight (eighteen and three fourths mint weight), which was deposited i the mint July 8, 1843. Being assayed, it wa found to be worth $344.75, over nineteen do lars to the ounce. The placer mines from whic the gold was taken were first discovered b Francisco Lopez, a native of California, in th month of March 1842 at a place called Sa Francisquito, about thirty-five miles northwes of Los Angeles.

C. C. YOUNG

Candidate for the Republican Nomination for Governor

(Compiled from Men of California, 1925 edition)

C. C. YOUNG, Lieutenant-Governor of California (Republican). Born April 28, 1869. Is of old New England ancestry, being the great-grandson of Joseph Young, Revolutionary soldier who served under Captain Ebenezer Webster, father of Daniel Webster. Educated in the grammar schools of Butte County, in the high schools of San Jose and Santa Rosa, and in the University of California, graduating in 1892.

Taught in Lowell High School, San Francisco, for fourteen years (1892-1906), serving as head of the English department and becoming joint author of a text book on English still used in most California high schools. Resigned from school work in 1906 to enter business career devoted to real estate development work in San Francisco and Berkeley.

Married in 1902 to Lila J. Vincent of San Francisco, at that time a junior at Stanford. Two children, Barbara, aged 16, and Lucy, aged 12; member of First Congregational Church of Berkeley. Was elected to the Assembly from Berkeley in 1908, and re-elected in 1910, 1912, 1914 and 1916. Elected delegate to the Republican National Convention in 1912. Chosen speaker of the Assembly for three consecutive sessions, 1913, 1915, 1917, the only speaker in the history of the State to have been chosen for so long a time as six years. Elected Lieutenant-Governor November 5, 1918, and re-elected for that office on November 7, 1922, by a vote of 597,349, the largest ever given to a candidate for that office in California. The only Lieutenant-Governor in California who has served so long a period as eight years. Elected Republican presidential elector in 1920 and made chairman of the California electors who cast their votes for Harding and Coolidge on January 10, 1921.

As presiding officer over the Assembly for six years, and the Senate for the following eight years—an unbroken service of fourteen years in one or the other legislative house—Mr. Young held the unanimous respect of the ever-changing membership of that body by his ability, knowledge and absolute fairness. It is a matter of historic record that no other man in California has ever had the same sure grasp of legislative routine, or contributed so largely to the upbuilding of the legal structure of the State.

During this entire legislative career he has consistently stood for the big constructive measures that have made California politically the most progressive State in the Union, and for those forward-looking and humanitarian policies which have become models of social conduct for the entire nation. Among his associates he is known and loved for his candor, his honesty and his sincerity. With these are combined untiring industry, mental quickness, and great physical energy.

Not only is C. C. Young the one clear cut unequivocal advocate of Colorado River development in the public interest among the candidates for Governor, which means so much to the future welfare and prosperity of California, but he is eminently qualified in other respects for the position to which he aspires.

¶ The Order of the Native Sons of the Golden West is founded upon the same broad patriotic principles that have been the inspiration of similar organizations in older States of the Union. Each State has its history. Into that history is interwoven a narrative of deeds performed by a mighty race of men who frontiered and pioneered the pathway for the countless thousands to follow. They transplanted the spirit, the life, the institutions of the Colonists, and wherever a State was erected there were established the ideals of the Fathers of the Republic.

¶ Therefore, the membership of our Order is limited to those born within the State, because we believe that pride of nativity is inherent in the breast of every person and moves that person to a consecrated loyalty to his native land. We do not maintain that birthplace alone confers any special privilege; rather do we teach that this casts upon the citizen an increased obligation to become interested in all material matters affecting its development and progress. National strength and national greatness have been commensurate with State strength and State greatness.

¶ California was the thirty-first State to be admitted into the Union. She contributed a citizenship and a golden treasure at an opportune time in the affairs of the nation. The many events connected with its settlement and organization as a State played a prominent part in shaping the destiny of the American people, and geographically she occupies a strategic position in the world-wide problems of the present and the future.

¶ We have taken an active interest in the conservation of our natural resources; the preservation of our scenic wonders and making them accessible to all; the retention of the State and its soil for the White race; all legislation, Federal and State, affecting the State and its interests.

¶ In our Fellowship endowment at the University of California we have expended over fifty thousand dollars in the preparation and preservation of the history of California and the Pacific Coast, and it has become the incentive for the Student Body of that institution and of the high-schools throughout the State to learn and teach that history. In this work we have laid the foundation for a text-book to be used in the public schools.

¶ We visit places where important events transpired and we have identified and marked the same with tablet and monument. Responding to the patriotic objects of our Order, we observe each recurring anniversary day of the Admission of California into the Union by public ceremonies in the various cities of the State. We actively participate in public dedicatory ceremonies of grammar-school and high-school buildings, on which occasions the students and citizens are addressed by officials of our Order on patriotic subjects.

¶ We maintain a "Homeless Children" Bureau and have placed in the childless homes over twenty-six hundred homeless boys and girls, insuring their development into a splendid citizenship amid elevating environments. In this activity we have expended over two hundred thousand dollars, contributed generously and voluntarily by the membership of the Order.

¶ It thus appears that the work of our organization appeals to every citizen of the State, irrespective of place of birth. It matters not where we were born in this land of ours; we are all citizens of a common country, we pledge our allegiance to one flag, and we are best evidencing our love of country and our loyalty to that flag by deservedly wearing the badge of public service wherever we exist and have our home.

¶ We welcome to our Membership the sons of California, and we promise nothing in return, save that compensation which comes to the citizen who conscientiously endeavors to perform his part in the cause of a greater and better civilization.

HILLIARD E. WELCH,

Grand President, Native Sons of the Golden West.

VOTE!

TUESDAY, AUGUST 31, IS PRIMARY election day. Perform your duty as a citizen—vote! But before you vote, study carefully the RECORD, not the pre-primary promises, of every candidate for each and every office, and then vote for those who, in YOUR opinion, uninfluenced by the political propaganda with which the mails and the papers are flooded, will honestly and efficiently serve The People, not any particular class, in the public positions for which they seek nomination; those who will impartially carry out all the duties of office, and those who will have always first in mind the welfare of the nation and the state.

Look carefully into the records of those seeking membership in the coming State Legislature, for, unless we are sadly misinformed, several Jap-Japs are among the candidates and if they are successful in their aspirations they will repeal, or so amend as to make worthless for California's protection, the Alien Land Law.

Do not vote to retain in office the district attorney of any county in the state where Japs are holding land of any nature contrary to the provisions of the Alien Land Law. And do not give your vote to any United States senator candidate who favors this county's affiliation with the League of Nations or the so-called "World Court." Getting this country into the latter means saddling upon the United States Japan's "racial equality" program which, when put into practice, would wreck California.

Lest you forget, attention is directed to the forty-fifth Legislature, in the Senate of which a bill, modeled after laws in effect in Oregon and Washington States, was introduced to regulate fishing in California by aliens ineligible to citizenship. The bill was defeated because of the influence brought to bear by the Japs and the canning interests. It was openly charged in the daily-press at the time that the victory for the White- and the yellow-Japs was fittingly celebrated at a sumptuous banquet in Sacramento, paid for by the "interests" and attended by many of the senators voting against the bill, sorely needed to protect the White fishermen of California and the state's coastline.

The senators recorded as voting against that bill were: Allen, Boggs, Breed, Burnett, Chamberlin, Creighton, Dennett, Eden, Gates, Dr., Gates, E. J., Handy, Hart, Hughes, Hurley, Johnson, A. B., Johnson, M. B., Lewis, Lyon, Nelson, Powers, Rominger, Rush, Sample, Swing, West. If any one of them is seeking re-election to the State Senate, or is a candidate for any other office, swat him with your ballot, and thereby do a "good turn" for California.

In an address at Atlanta, Georgia, July 19, United States Senator William E. Borah, referring to the numerous attacks upon "prohibition," said:

"If the eighteenth amendment was an injudicious distribution of power between the state and national governments, the people can take it out of the constitution by the same process they wrote it in. If a mistake was made the people can be shown that it was a mistake, and they are wise enough and brave enough to take it out. There is no possible excuse to invoke nullification. To preach nullification is to preach lawlessness—the ancient and persistent enemy of all republics."

Take the prohibition law out of politics and give enforcement half of an honest chance, and the booze question will be speedily settled, to the perfect satisfaction of a great majority of the citizenry.

State Controller Ray L. Riley released the other day some statistics bearing on taxes which should cause the taxpaying public to look carefully into all proposed future bond issues before sanctioning them.

Riley says that at the close of the fiscal year June 30, 1926, the total bonded debt of all forms of government in California was $609,-49,227.92, an increase of $76,349,975.66 over the bonded debt at the close of the fiscal year June 30, 1925, and an increase of 519 percent over 1911.

At recent memorial services in the United States Senate for the late Senator Robert M. Lafollette, this quotation from his sayings was instanced:

"I am not bound to win, but I am bound to be true. I am not bound to succeed, but I am bound to live up to what light I have. I must stand with anybody who stands right, stand with him while he is right, and part from him when he goes wrong."

A good rule for any man to live by. And what a grand old world to live in this would be, if it was the general rule governing humankind.

News comes from Japan that a United States consular employe there was found guilty of photographing fortifications and sentenced to pay a fine. Japan's course is commendable, for it is contrary to law there for a foreigner to trespass upon or near fortifications.

But, what a difference in this country. Here, the Japs are not only permitted, but invited, to inspect fortifications, and no objection is raised to their photographing and mapping them. They are even permitted to colonize in strategic positions near fortifications.

Time will prove that Japan, and not the United States, has the safe and sound fortifications' policy. And still the authorities sleep on!

Just think of it, not a single one among the numerous candidates for public office has been kidnaped and autoed away to a desert shack! Surely the publicity-men have overlooked an opportunity for front-page publicity. But election-day is yet in the distance, and who can fortell what will happen nowadays?

---

The Commonwealth Club of San Francisco recently discussed compulsory automobile liability insurance, and the astounding fact was brought out, after careful consideration, that there are over 600,000 autos in California from the owners of which the public has no guaranty against the consequences of serious injury.

In other words, 600,000 autos are being driven upon the public thoroughfares of this state by persons who are not financially liable for any injury they may inflict. They carry no liability insurance and in most cases have no real or personal property. A great percentage of them do not even hold title to their cars, the autos being bought on contract.

It certainly is time for California to protect its citizens by compelling every owner and operator of an auto to carry liability insurance. The shylock companies dealing in auto sales contracts would howl, to be sure, but the number of injuries inflicted, many of them fatal, would undoubtedly be materially lessened. And something must be done to curb the activities of the injury-inflicting and death-dealing autoist.

Urging freedom of speech, Professor Clyde A. Duniway of the history department of the University of California Summer Session well says:

"Any effort to curb feedom of the press or freedom of speech becomes a folly under modern conditions. Freedom of opinion should be unlimited on any religious, political, economic or social issue. But it is true that when the private activities of individuals not holding public office are assailed and dragged before the public this freedom degenerates into license.

"If certain newspapers violate the decencies of life by the exploitation of criminals and by the exposure of unsavory episodes in the lives of individuals, the only recourse is an educated public opinion which will not make such things pay. Limitation of freedom of speech is wholly undesirable."

If the reading-public did not scramble for the dailies whose front pages are given over to exploiting scandal, the papers would not feature such filth, served in the guise of "news." That is what the professor means by, "an educated opinion which will not make such things pay."

The Grizzly Bear is delighted to have received from Secretary Henry L. Byrne of the Society of California Pioneers a complete file, to date, of the Quarterly being issued by the society with Byrne as the chief editor.

The Quarterly overflows with California history material, most of it obtained first-hand from those Pioneer members of the society—nearly all of whom have now gone to their reward—who builded the substantial foundation upon which this glorious state rests. May the Quarterly be continued until the story of every member of the Society of California Pioneers is recorded therein.

THE TEST OF A MAN

(Author Unknown.)

The test of a man is the fight he makes,
The grit that he daily shows;
The way that he stands on his feet, and takes Fate's numerous bumps and blows.
The coward can smile when there's naught to fear,
And nothing his progress bars;
But it takes a man to stand up and cheer,
While some other fellow stars.

It isn't the victory, after all,
But the fight that a human makes;
The man, who, driven against the wall,
Still stands erect and takes
The blows of fate with his head held high,
Bleeding and bruised, and pale,
Is the man who'll win in the by and by,
For he isn't afraid to fail.

It's the bumps we take and the jolts we get
And the shock that our courage stands,
The hours of sorrow and vain regret,
And the prize that escapes our hands,
That test our mettle and prove our worth;
It isn't the blows we deal,
But the blows we take on this good old earth
Which prove that life is real.

THINK IT OVER!

The Order of Native Sons of the Golden West is, we believe, with the exception of the Order of Native Daughters of the Golden West, the only organization that limits membership exclusively to NATIVE-BORN AMERICANS.

Knowing the serious conditions in this country today, this fact alone should impel every Native Son of California to immediately SEEK AFFILIATION with that American-born and American-operated institution, the man-power and wealth of which are pledged to the protection of American institutions in times of peace as well as in times of war.

EARLY DAY CALIFORNIA STATE FAIRS

Charles W. Paine

(SECRETARY-MANAGER CALIFORNIA STATE FAIR.)

The accompanying article, which comes to The Grizzly Bear from Charles W. Paine, secretary-manager of the California State Agricultural Society, which conducts the annual State Fair, is highly interesting and instructive. It deals with the history of the development of California, and embodies the whole state. Incidentally, Paine is affiliated with Sacramento Parlor No. 3 N.S.G.W. Read this story and learn something new of California's past, and attend the 1926 State Fair at Sacramento in September and learn more of the state's present.—Editor.

GATHER TOGETHER, AT ONE PLACE, all the workable devices and theories of social and industrial life for demonstration or experiment; then gather there a grand assembly of people of all tastes and all requirements, and you have the basis for the most successful of fairs.

Nowadays, even with our marvelous transportation system of railroad and trucks, the work of getting all the exhibits together annually at Sacramento is a great task full of intricate and complex detail. Today we have as aids the railroad express, the telegraph, the telephone, the radio and the speedy motor car and truck; we have stenographers, efficiency systems and time-savers, and still we call for more speed. That is the modern fair.

But those first early fairs, how different! Everything had to be transported long distances in great freight wagons, with mules or oxen. None of those early drivers ever dreamed, as they urged their weary animals along day after day through the dusty roads and hot sun,—often two weeks or more making the trip,—that there would come a day when there would be a twenty-four-hour service over that same road with refrigerator cars delivering at the very doors of the exhibit building their produce in the same excellent condition that it left the ranch. I am going to lift the curtain of the past and let you see how those early pioneers got up their first fairs, where they were held, and some incidents connected with their development.

For the first five years of the great gold rush, mining was the main consideration. Most of the overland immigrants arrived late in the summer. Their first impression of California was one of dried-up grass and vegetation, absolutely unfit for agriculture. But in that great horde of red-shirted men were many young farmers, energetic, enthusiastic, optimistic. The exorbitant price of fruits and vegetables tempted some of them to till the soil and plant. The results were amazing.

But it was an isolated country. It took months to get an answer to a letter sent East asking for information or seeds; so, these early agriculturalists got together and talked it over. They decided to band themselves together in a little society for mutual help. They were ambitious, they would make it a state agriculture society, and they did. They put it up to the Legislature, the governor signed the bill May 13, 1854. That day was born the society that is now known as the California State Board of Agriculture. The state appropriated $5,000 cash annually to be used for premiums. The society was empowered to hold fairs and buy land for that purpose, if they wished.

A few months later, October 4, they opened their first fair at San Francisco, in Musical Hall, with the cattle show out at Mission Dolores. It was a revelation to the general public. Captain John A. Sutter was elected vice-president of the society; probably that is why we find the Second Annual Fair opening at Sacramento in the State House, September 25, 1855. These early pioneer ranchers did things on a big scale, and the soil co-operated. Look their records over and compare them with the present-day products of like nature in your own locality. Can you equal any of them?

Among the exhibits were a bunch of fifty carrots, each carrot thirty-nine inches long and over ten pounds in weight; a seventy-three-pound beet seven and one-half feet long; a corn stalk twenty-four feet high; fifteen and one-half-inch apples; a 129-pound pumpkin; 2,000 pounds of strawberries from one acre; 100 dozen cucumbers per day per acre during the entire season; twenty tons of tomatoes from one acre; forty-five tons of beets from another acre; 600 bushels of potatoes dug from one acre; while Charlie Green, on the Q ranch at Ione Valley, Amador County, raised watermelons that netted him $8,000 per acre. William Wolfskill, at Los Angeles, netted $700 from his seven orange trees there. Last season's crop of oranges brought $79,200,000 to the California growers. So great was the interest aroused by this fair that the newspapers of the East, and even of Europe, carried detailed accounts of the almost unbelievable products of California soil.

San Jose, Santa Clara County, drew the Third Annual Fair, beginning October 7, 1856. The committee noted that the natural history section had two exhibits, a stuffed road-runner and a stuffed Albino teal. The largest sugar-beet was only 103 pounds; pumpkins were still growing well, Sacramento leading off with two, 240 and 210 pounds each; turnips were healthy, at 103 pounds each; cabbage headed the list, at 50 pounds per head.

Curiously enough, no dried fruit was exhibited at this fair. H. C. Hudson of San Francisco secured first prize for "sallad oil," which the jury praised as perfectly sweet and pure. It was made from wild-mustard seed. Don Andreas Pico, from Los Angeles, won out on olive oil, while William Wolfskill, also from there, took several awards on citrus fruits and for the best vineyard. The committee observed, "That we believe that ere long our southern counties can furnish us with all the oranges needed, thus no longer necessitating their importation from Central America. We believe that the central counties of California could also grow citrus fruits and recommend that they try." Among the awards was one to John Frohling of Los Angeles for port wine made in 1855. The jury praised its taste very highly. It was then one year old. It would be very interesting to know what it would taste like now, seventy years later. M. Keller, also from the south, raised the best California grapes.

Stockton, San Joaquin County, captured the Fourth Annual Fair, beginning September 29, 1857. For the first time the value of alfalfa as a forage crop was brought out. Pinney and Cameron had planted 300 acres on their Yuba County ranch. So good was it that they charged double rates for pasturage and could accommodate but a few of the many wanting to pasture their cattle upon it. It seems strangely prophetic that this was the first fair at which the mechanical exhibits should have been featured. Judge Eno of Calaveras said, "In 1849 there was scarcely a grist-mill in California outside of the one at Sutter's Fort, but now (1857) we have 131 grist-mills; 373 saw-mills; 17 tanneries; 133 quartz-mills and one sugar refinery." The Stockton fair was a huge success.

Marysville, Yuba County, came in for the Fifth Annual Fair, in 1858. It was notable for the large exhibit sent up from Los Angeles. Apparently most of the records of this fair were lost in the Sacramento flood three years later.

The Sixth Annual Fair was held at Sacramento, September 13 to 23. The secret of why that city has retained it ever since is revealed in the report. The largest membership in the society from any county was from here, and those members determined to have a fair far greater than any ever held in the state. They talked it over, interested some of their public-spirited citizens, raised money, bought a site for a pavilion right in "the center of town," at Sixth and M streets, erected a large pavilion, and had it ready by fair time. It was the first time that the society had ever held their fair in a building especially built for them. The interest in this particular fair was intense. From all over the state came the exhibits, 4,635 separate ones from 754 exhibitors. It was an overwhelming success.

B. S. Fox of Santa Clara County ranked all others in variety. His orchard and nursery contained over 1,000,000 trees, including 263 sorts of apples, 324 sorts of pears, 89 sorts of peaches and 86 sorts of gooseberries. The ram, "Crystal Palace," was sold at this fair for $1,500.

It was at this time that the society seriously took up the question of maintaining a museum and library in the pavilion with permanent exhibits of mechanical models, paintings, stuffed birds and minerals. They also initiated a system of sending various kinds of seeds to Eastern growers, including over seventy packages to Europe. These seeds were later shown to be far superior to the native product. This year they also urged the establishment of an agricultural school, "A school where the sons of agriculturists may receive just such an education as their future avocations most require—where science shall hold no secondary station, while the practical application of knowledge to labor shall stand in the front rank." Today we have that school at Davis, Yolo County, on the very property then owned by a member of the society, J. C. Davis.

As the great flood of '61 destroyed most of the records, library and museum of the society, there is little data available on the Seventh Annual Fair. The Eighth began September 16, 1861. The year previous, after a very stormy debate, the society had selected Sacramento as the permanent place for all future fairs. Now that another fair was approaching, the citizens of Sacramento and the members of the society living there again dug down in their pockets and bought six blocks of land on E and H, between Twentieth and Twenty-second streets and donated it to the society. The Legislature appropriated $15,000 for improvements, the society added $10,000 more, and all the buildings were ready by fair time. For the first time the members held their combined stock and exhibition of products upon the same grounds. A flagpole 180 feet high was erected in the center of the grounds and an American Flag, forty-two feet in length, presented by J. C. Davis, president of the society, floated from it.

In 1862 a number of Sacramento men, realizing that the half-mile racetrack at the fair grounds was not large enough for a state track, subscribed and bought six blocks more of land lying directly north of it, fenced it in, lengthened the track to one mile, and had it ready for the Ninth Fair that opened August 31, 1862. Later, when the society could afford it, they bought these additional six blocks. The California Agricultural Society was now pretty well established.

A FEW SIDELIGHTS.

Now, for a few sidelights on some of these fairs. In view of the exhibit to be made in 1926 of historical and early-model plows, the plow question of 1856 is decidedly interesting. The committee not only examined every plow, but watched each exhibitor use his own plow in the field, then each member of the committee tried out each plow for a furrow in both stubble and sod ground. D. S. Mattison of Stockton got the first award, though S. Marshall of Sacramento almost tied in points. The Peoria clipper plow, costing $50.00, cutting twenty inches deep, drew a prize. A centrifugal churn, a horse yoke, a set of iron prison locks, a sign casting, a May Queen washing machine, were among the prize-winners. Jenner's rifle, made in California, one of the most powerful of rifles, when tested by the jury sent a bullet through sixteen inches of solid dry timber and kicked up the dirt over half a mile back of the target.

B. F. Smith brought up a pair of light-weight oxen, and when he announced that he was going to enter them in the pulling contest against the heaviest oxen in the state, they gave him the "ox laugh," loud and long. The day of the tests Smith asked that his yoke be tried last. One by one the various great ox teams were eliminated as the loads were increased to where they could no longer be budged. Then Smith brought out his pair of lightweights. The jury was compassionate. They started with an extra small load and the oxen walked away with it. Heavier and heavier they made the load, until it had reached the stalling point for all the others, yet Smith's pair walked away with it. The crowd went wild with delight. And when yet a still greater load was piled on and the game animals still moved it, the excitement rivaled any race ever held at that fair. The moment the test was completed the crowd stampeded the proving grounds and swarmed around the two young animals like a hive of bees. There was but one explanation, skillful driving of the highest order and oxen that were in the pink of condition.

Probably at no other fair in the world was there ever such an unique exhibit as that made by Flush, Bixby & Co. of San Juan, San Benito County, in 1859. When the jury passing on wool came to it they were "stumped." That it was wool, there could be no question; that it was the largest amount of wool from any one animal, could not be denied; that there was no other wool of its kind exhibited, made comparison impossible. Under all the rules of the society it was entitled to the gold medal; yet, that jury had been carefully selected to pass upon sheep's wool, and this was not sheep's wool. There was nothing to do, however, but award the prize to Flush, Bixby & Co. for their exhibit of the fleece from one grizzly bear, forty-two pounds of it.

That year saw the first public marriage at a State Fair, when O. C. Wheeler united two willing hearts and sent back to Camptonville, Yuba County, Mary Jones and Richard Williams as man and wife, along with a wagonload of gifts contributed by the generous exhibitors. One of the feature exhibits was that of buckskin suits for men, finely made, fully fringed, as soft as velvet and guaranteed to wear for a lifetime, all for $75. One set of false teeth won an award under milling equipment. The announcement caused much hilarity until it was discovered that they were made of steel and used on large circular lumber saws. It would be cruel at this time to publish the lauditory reports of the wine jury on California wines.

In these old reports we learn a few details of one of the greatest collections of early California scenes, painted by G. H. Goddard, grandfather of Mayor Al Goddard of Sacramento. All were of historical places, and they were valued by the artist at over $40,000. In his later years he had them transferred to San Francisco for safekeeping and they were destroyed by the fire of 1906. He refused to sell any of them, consequently there are none of his historical scenes in existence so far as known. A search is now being conducted by Mayor Goddard for a possible specimen for Sutter's Fort.

The value of irrigation was particularly emphasized by the society in an award to F. S. McGin of Santa Clara County. He had planted seventy-five acres to oats, but May 12, 1859, a hot sun blasted the grain to the ground. It looked hopeless, but McGin refused to be licked. He managed to bring water onto the field, with the result that the grain grew at the rate of two inches a day until it reached a height of seven and one-half feet, and a record crop was produced. It was A. Lansdell that convinced the jury this same year that the finest butter came from the Pajaro Valley, in Monterey County.

In 1856 it was decided that the society would award prizes for the best orchards, farms and nurseries. As these various articles could not be brought to the fair for the jury to pass on them, there was but one thing to do, and that was to send the jury to the exhibits. The various sections were visited by members of the jury, traveling much of the time horseback and covering the main valleys of the state.

They commenced at the Mission Dolores, San Francisco, where Henry A. Sontag and John Center each had large gardens of both flowers and fruit, with several large greenhouses to their credit. After visiting several others there they took the boat to Sacramento and A. P. Smith was the first to be honored with a visit. Grasshoppers had destroyed part of his peach crop, but otherwise Smith's Gardens, as it later became known, was very highly commended by the jury. The Rev. O. C. Wheeler, on Tenth street, Sacramento, had a little over two acres of ground, but on it he had growing 4,000 apple, 3,000 peach, 6,000 pear, 300 cherry, 500 plum, 200 apricot and 500 quince trees, also 2,000 grapevines, and small fruits and berries of all kinds. Here also were 6,000 pine, 3,500 elm and 3,000 maple-sugar trees and a great variety of ornamentals. The jury, in its report, neglected to say whether all these trees were matured or in their infancy.

The report of a visit to the farm of J. C. Davis, now the site of the State Agricultural College at Davis, Yolo County, gives an insight into the conditions there in 1856: "His farm contains 8,000 acres, 1,000 enclosed by a good fence; the water is raised by steam from the bed of the creek in such quantities as to enable him to irrigate a large portion of his lands. He has a large peach orchard, an extensive variety of other fruit trees and several thousand vines, all producing very abundantly. His barns, stables, corrals and arrangements for stock are all on an extensive scale and admirably arranged. He has 3,000 cattle and 3,000 sheep; has now planted 400 acres of wheat and barley."

The jury then visited the ranches of Gen. Hutchinson, C. E. Green and John Wolfskill on Putah Creek, thence went to the nurseries of Beach & Shephard, near Marysville, Yuba County. The year before the grasshoppers had almost cleaned them out, but in 1856 everything was growing fine. The jury credits them with having, in good condition, 40,000 peach, 5,000 pear, 5,000 apple, 3,000 cherry and 2,000 plum trees, also 40,000 grapevines, with a large amount of ornamental trees and shrubbery.

Three miles above Marysville was the G. G. Briggs nursery, with 200,000 peach, 16,000 plum, 5,000 cherry, 15,000 pear, 5,000 apple and 20,000 nectarine and apricot trees. The jury were headed for the farm of General Sutter, at Hock Farm, a vice-president of the society, for here they knew they would receive such a welcome as only the general knew how to give. Despite all the injustice that had been done him by the people of California the past five years, he nevertheless was as optimistic and as hospitable as ever and showed the visitors his 10,000 grapevines and peach orchard of 2,000 trees. At that time he was digging for artesian water for irrigation purposes. Major John Bidwell's place at Chico, Butte County, came next, with a most cordial welcome from the major himself. "Upon this stream he has an excellent grist mill, an extensive garden, an orchard of very superior peach trees, with the garden and orchard both enclosed by a very high and beautiful willow hedge. Here we saw a locust tree, planted from the seed three years ago, that today measured twenty-five inches in circumference six inches from the ground. Most of his labor is performed by Indians."

Santa Clara County was next visited. The committee complained of the trouble they had there; they found so many wonderful orchards, even in that early day, that they could not give to each one the amount of space in their report that it deserved. For three years previous there had been little rain, necessitating attempts at irrigation. L. Prevost was listed with 47,000 trees in gardens and nursery, including 25,000

SHERIFF

LOS ANGELES COUNTY

ACTIVE IN THE COUNCILS OF THE NATIVE SONS OF THE Golden West for many years, Sheriff William I. Traeger is asking his many friends in the vicinity to continue him in office at the August 31 primaries, that he may consummate constructive policies he has initiated during his regime.

As Grand President of the Native Sons in 1922, he was selected for the highest honor the organization, at that time of 167 Parlors, had to bestow. At the present time he is a life member of Ramona Parlor of the Order and of the history committee of the Grand Parlor, which for more than fifteen years has co-operated with the University of California in invaluable historical research work.

A native of Porterville, a Spanish War veteran and a Stanford University law student, Sheriff Traeger started his career as a peace officer in 1903, when he was appointed a deputy United States marshal. In 1907 he was named a deputy sheriff of Los Angeles County and in 1909 was admitted to the bar by the California courts.

Appointed sheriff of Los Angeles County in March, 1921, in the five years he has held the office the organization has grown from a personnel of 135 to what is believed to be the largest sheriff's office in the United States, with more than 460 men under his command.

WILLIAM I. (BILL) TRAEGER

From his earliest days as a peace officer, it is stated by those associated with him that Traeger has made a study of police work from the angle of crime prevention as the most effective means of combatting the criminal, a principle he has put into practical use in his organization.

He has constantly sought to increase the efficiency of his department by following the same principles of organization that characterize big and successful business firms, his associates say.

Sheriff Traeger is asking the voters to continue him in office on the strength of the record already made in his administration, and his sponsors are pointing to the following as achievements of his regime:

Established honor camps for trustworthy prisoners, relieving jail congestion, helping prisoners morally and physically and saving money for the taxpayers.

Instituted new plan of purchasing food for prisoners, obtaining more and better food at less cost, and saving expense to the county.

Perfected one of the most thoroughly equipped, scientific identification bureaus of any police organization in the world.

Inaugurated a bureau of records patterned after the most efficient plans in use by large and successful business corporations.

Established a department of economy, research and statistics, which studies all technical problems scientifically and promotes organization efficiency.

Solved problem of effectively policing 2,500 square miles of the county by establishing substations and districts and organizing the county constabulary.

Instituted a public relations campaign to induce the public to take precautions against crime and co-operate effectively with the officers.

Established a rifle and revolver school under expert instructors and made sharpshooting a necessary qualification for all deputies who serve under him.

ABEL STEARNS: CALIFORNIA PIONEER

STEARNS, IN SPEAKING OF THE DISCOVERY, states: "The circumstances of the discovery by Lopez, as related by him, are as follows: Lopez, with a companion, was out in search of some stray horses, and about midday they stopped under some trees and tied their horses out to feed, they resting under the shade; when Lopez, with his sheath knife, dug up some wild onions, and in the dirt discovered a piece of gold and searching further found some more. He brought these to town and showed them to his friends, who at once declared there must be a placer of gold. This news being circulated, numbers of the citizens went to the place and commenced prospecting the neighborhood, and found it to be a fact that there was a placer of gold. After being satisfied, most persons returned; some remained, particularly Sonorenses (Sonorians), who were accustomed to work in placers. They met with good success. From this time the placers were worked with more or less success, and principally by Sonorenses, until the latter part of 1846, when most of the Sonorenses left with Captain Flores for Sonora. While worked there was some six or eight thousand dollars taken per annum." The mines became known as the San Fernando mines, as they were on a ranch that once belonged to the San Fernando Mission.

Stearns, in writing to Thomas O. Larkin May 3, 1842, speaks of the gold mines that were discovered near the mission of San Fernando, saying that "they bidded to be very good and very extensive," that "some forty or fifty persons were at work and each hand got from one to two dollars per day in gold" and that "the placer was some thirty or forty miles in extent."

In July 1842 Stearns purchased the Los Alamitos rancho of six leagues and its livestock for $6,000 from Francisco Figueroa, as a foundation for his future landed wealth. The livestock included 900 head of cattle, 1,000 sheep and 240 head of horses and mares. The cattle were worth three dollars per head, the sheep from seventy-five cents to one dollar, the mares from two dollars to two dollars and fifty cents, and the horses seven or eight dollars. The site of the Long Beach of today was but a small part of the Alamitos rancho. A portion of that city also includes some of the Cerritas acres of John Temple.

For nearly half a century the one great commercial industry of the southland had been cattle raising, first for hides and tallow for export, and later to supply beef to the miners in the goldfields. To make it profitable, the cattle industry required the land devoted to it to be held in large tracts. The first rush of miners to the goldfields stimulated the cattle industry, as the only source from which the goldhunters could obtain fresh meat was from the ranchos of Southern California. The rapid rise in cattle values forced wealth on the rancheros and they spent it lavishly. The importation of cattle across the plains from Western states coupled with the settlement of the valleys in the central and the northern parts of the state which were nearer the mines, brought decline in the prices of cattle on the southern ranchos. To compete with the northern producers, the rancheros of the south had allowed their ranges to become overstocked, hoping to make up by quantity for the decrease in value.

In 1851 the assessed valuation of the property of Abel Stearns was $70,000, for 1,400 acres of land. In 1858 it was $186,000, which gives an idea of his rapid acquisition of property. In 1856 he purchased whatever right Senora Josefa Serrano had to the Temescal rancho, for 200 head of cattle. Previous to this, Daniel Sexton claimed to have discovered tin mines in the Temescal Mountains, having been told of the tin by an Indian. Stearns seems to have had great faith in the value of this tin deposit. In 1864 he disposed of his rights in the Temescal rancho to J. H. Ray of San Francisco.

In 1859 Don Bandini died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Stearns, in Los Angeles. Stearns continued to control the two vast estates, and by 1860 was one of the largest landowners of California. Among his ranchos were the following: Las Alamitos, 23,027.17 acres; Jurupa, part of, 33,819.11 acres; La Laguna, 13,338.84 acres; Los Coyotes, 48,806.17 acres; La Habra, 6,698.57 acres; La Bolso Chico, 8,107.46 acres; San Juan Cajon de Santa Ana, 35,970.92 acres; Las Bolsas, 33,460.04 acres; San Juan Caxon de Rio, 19,000 acres; Los Bolsas Grandes y Chicos, 44,440 acres; Sierra, 17,786.89 acres; Guadalupe, 43,681.85 acres; San Rafael, 36,403.32 acres.

At the same time, Stearns was also owner of several thousand acres in Lower California, which he lost at the time of the French intervention under Napoleon III, in 1862. He was never able to recover these lands. He secured his ranchos by loaning money on mortgages to impecunious rancheros, by the purchase of equities in encumbered estates and by foreclosure.

One of the last pieces of property that Stearns acquired was the Laguna rancho of 10,000 acres, part of the old San Antonio grant. He purchased it from Ancerera Ballesteros Lugo and wife for $3,125 in 1859. On the northwest side he obtained 1,000 acres of government land. He stocked the rancho with cattle, horses and sheep, and gave it to his wife.

In 1857 Stearns engaged Henry Forbes to superintend his various ranchos in Southern California. Forbes was born at Mission San Jose, near San Jose, California, and was but twenty-two years of age at this time. He proved an excellent aid to Stearns, and in 1866 became his business manager, with a small office on the ground floor of the Arcadia block. Stearns branded some twenty thousand calves annually, which indicated that he owned as high as 60,000 head of cattle.

During 1863 and 1864 not enough rain fell to start the green feed, and a million animals—cattle and horses—starved to death in California. Stearns was much the greatest sufferer from the drought, as he lost from forty to fifty thousand head of cattle. After the famine years he found himself the owner of several hundred thousand acres of land, mortgaged for $50,000. The ruling rates of interest then were from fifteen to twenty-four percent per annum. Without income from his acres and indebtedness piling up, he found himself on the verge of bankruptcy.

After the American occupation of California there had been a change in the government of California. Under the Mexican regime there had been no land tax, but under the new regime there was one. Although the taxes were small, the returns were small, too. A steer was worth from five to ten dollars, a horse fifteen dollars, and a sheep from one to two dollars. The means of communication between Los Angeles and San Francisco was by sea, and freights were high. The remuneration from the ranchos was small, so many of the ranchos were mortgaged.

In 1864 all of Stearns' landed possessions were advertised to be sold at sheriff's sale for delinquent taxes, the total amount of which was only about $4,000. The ruling prices of land in Southern California after the famine years were twenty-five to fifty cents per acre. As a result, he was compelled, about June 1865, to mortgage Los Alamitos rancho, with its 28,000 acres, to Michael Reese of San Francisco for $20,000. Even this sacrifice did not save him from still greater financial distress. A few years before he had refused an offer of $30,000 for a thousand head of cattle made him by a San Francisco butcher; he did not need the money at that time, however.

In 1867 the Arcadia block, one of the finest pieces of property in Los Angeles, was sold under foreclosure by the sheriff for $30,000 on a debt of $22,000 and costs. It was said by many at the time that the sale was rushed through with much haste by those having the matter in charge, and that a few days would have enabled Stearns to have taken advantage of arrangements already made to raise the money. Fortunately for him, he was able to redeem the property in the time allowed by law, due to the sale of six of his ranchos in 1868.

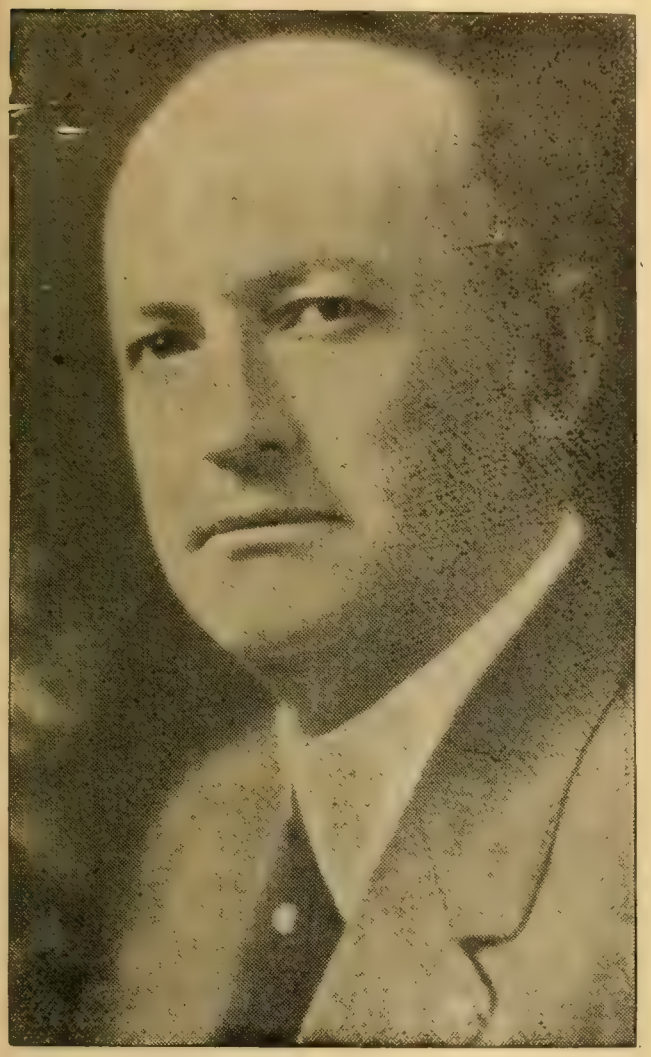
The Stearns ranchos which were sold in 1868 to a syndicate of San Francisco capitalists were located in Los Angeles and San Bernardino Counties. Included in the transaction were Los Coyotes, La Habra, San Juan Caxon de Rio, Los Bolsas Grandes y Chicos, Jurupa and Sierra. The total number of acres was 176,000. The original members of the syndicate were Samuel Brannon, Edward F. Northam and C. B. Polhemus. Don Abel retained one-eighth interest in the land. The price paid per acre was $1.50. The partners in the deal incorporated under the title of the Los Angeles and San Bernardino Land Company. Alfred Robinson was made trustee for Stearns and signed all transfers. Henry Mellus, whom Stearns had helped in getting a start in California, also greatly aided him during his financial crisis.

The Stearns ranchos which were sold in 1868 were used prior to that time only for grazing. With their purchase by Brannon, Northam and Polhemus they were immediately subdivided and placed on the markets of the world in tracts of forty acres and up, on easy terms at prices ranging from two to ten dollars per acre. The Southern Pacific railroad passed through the largest part of the lands, and the Los Angeles and San Pedro railroad, which was completed in 1869, also tapped a large portion of them.

The ranchos which Stearns parted with to the Los Angeles and San Bernardino Land Company are worth today over $100,000,000. The Laguna, one of the Stearns ranches lying southeast of and adjoining Los Angeles City, but not included in the syndicate deal, sold for $8,000,000 after the death of Mrs. Baker, in 1912. The subdivision of the Stearns ranchos marked the beginning of a new era in California history, as it saw the commencement of the subdivision of the large landed estates in the state.

In 1858 Stearns built the Arcadia block, naming it after his wife. The structure cost about $80,000 and was talked of for some time as the most notable business block south of San Francisco. The newspapers hailed it as an ornament of the city and a great step toward providing what the small and undeveloped community then regarded as a fireproof structure for business purposes. Because, however, of the dangerous overflow of the Los Angeles River in rainy seasons, Stearns elevated the building above the grade of the street to such an extent that, for several years, his storerooms remained empty. But the enterprise at once bore some good fruit. In order to make the iron doors and shutters of the block, Stearns started a foundry on New High street and soon created some local iron-casting trade. The Arcadia was the largest business block in town, and around it centered the interests of the city for many years. In its second story was Stearns hall, where took place many social and political events of interest in the history of the pueblo.

In elevating his new store above the grade of the street, somewhat regardless of the rights of others, Stearns caused the surplus water to run off into neighboring streets and buildings. Following the great storm of 1861 and 1862 the city sued him for damages, but he won his case. More than that, the overflow was a Godsend to him, for it induced a number of people to move from Mellus' row to Arcadia block, at a time when Stearns was beginning to feel the effects of the alternate dry and overwet seasons.



After the death of Don Abel Stearns in 1871, his widow married Colonel R. S. Baker of Rhode Island, April 28, 1875. He had large sheep interests in Southern California. In 1877 the old adobe home of Don Abel at the corner of Main and Arcadia streets was torn down, and in its place the Bakers built the Baker block, which was a model of substantial construction for its time. A correspondent of the "Daily Alta California" of San Francisco, writing from Los Angeles about the new building, clearly expresses the feeling of many of the early settlers of the passing of the landmarks of the early days, when he writes:

"My heart is filled with anguish and sealding tears course down my furrowed face, as I witness the demolition of all those former landmarks of this town. There is nothing left on Main street, from the old Catholic church to, and a long way southerly of, the court house, except the old residence of Dona Bosila, which can be recognized as a part of Los Angeles of the year of grace of 1850. The residence of the late Abel Stearns, unpretending but hospitable old adobe mansion, into which, some thirty years ago (more or less as conveyancers express an undetermined quantity), he led his young, beautiful and blushing bride, and under the roof of which, until his earthly remains were removed therefrom to their last resting place, and since his demise, by his widow, friends, acquaintances and strangers were most hospitably treated, is being returned to that state of dust and earthy form in which it existed when, by those noble redmen, it was converted into adobes and formed into strong and massive walls. Even the woodwork of that house, as I see it riven, broken and shivered under the blows of axe and pick, produces feelings in my mind reaching to a degree almost sacred. It brings up to my remembrance, in a vivid manner, the scenes and events which transpired in this southern part of California between the years 1835-1846. I can almost bow down and reverence the broken fragments

(FROM SMYTHE'S COPYRIGHTED "HISTORY OF SAN DIEGO.")

IT WAS IN THE YEAR 1769 THAT SPAIN finally got ready to reap where her explorers had sown generations before. Carlos III. was king, the Marquis de Croix, a man of great energy and enterprise, was viceroy of New Spain, Don Joseph de Galvez was visitador-general. The royal order came for occupation of the ports of San Diego and Monterey. And it was high time. Spain could not hope to hold vast territories indefinitely by mere right of discovery, and both England and Russia had eyes upon the Pacific Coast of North America. It was the latter's aggression which was most feared and which probably gave the specific impulse to the new movement.

It is not, however, the name of king or statesman which survives in the popular imagination when the early settlement of San Diego, and the coast line which stretches north of it, is recalled, but the name of an immortal missionary. And it is a fine tribute to the quality of mind and heart which finds its expression in unselfish and loving service that this is so. But as I study the records of the past it seems clear enough that it was the lust of empire far more than religious zeal which led to the pioneer plantings in California. This judgment is no reflection on the missionary fathers, who simply availed themselves of a favorable political situation to accomplish designs unquestionably born of a high conception of duty to God and to man. But if we seek the motive behind the movement, we find it when we ask ourselves the question:

If the Spanish king had not wanted to hold California for the advantage of his empire, would it have been within the power of the Franciscans to found a line of missions from San Diego northward, and thus to lay the foundation-stones of an enduring civilization? The question must be answered in the negative, for the missionaries could not have supplied the necessary ships and soldiers nor the other provisions essential to the great undertaking. Put the question in another way and ask:

If there had been no missionaries, and if the Spanish king had still desired to occupy the California coast, could he have done so with the men and the money at his command? Unquestionably, he could; but he was wise enough to utilize the enthusiasm and capacity which he found ready to his hand in the shape of the Franciscans and who were the more necessary because the Jesuits had but recently been expelled from their mission holdings in Lower California.

It is important to note the influences which led to the founding of San Diego, and it is the simple truth of history to say that the most vital of these influences was the need of Spanish statecraft to exert itself in order to hold valuable possessions gained in previous centuries by exploration and discovery. If this motive had been absent San Diego would not have been settled in 1769, nor perhaps by those who spoke the Spanish tongue. Its history might have been entirely different. It might have been settled by Russians, or by Englishmen, or it might have slept on until a new nation—almost at the hour in travail on the Atlantic Coast of North America—sent its pioneers across the plains and mountains to give a new and a strange flag to the breeze.

It is true, of course, that for many years the missionaries had urged the king to lend his assistance to the conversion of the Gentiles of the North, and that a Catholic nation like Spain, always influenced by the Papacy, would naturally give heed to the claims of the faith. But while this was doubtless taken into account, it was clearly secondary to considerations of empire. Nevertheless, when the time for action came, a great man, garbed in the cassock of the priest, stood ready to sow the seed of a harvest which men are now but beginning to reap. Junipero Serra was fifty-six years old when the opportunity came to him.

With the arrival of Father Serra, the great project of Galvez scored its historic success, a fact which reflected the highest credit upon the man who had planned it to the last detail. He never saw the country himself, but he set the forces in motion which saved it for his king and his flag, at least for a time, and thus he deserves lasting remembrance among the fathers of California. The success of his plans in uniting the four branches of the expedition at San Diego furnished a base from which the larger scheme of settlement could be carried along the coast.

The work of establishing a real settlement began with the least possible delay. The place selected was "a point of middling height," as Costanso called it, a hill overlooking Old Town, now known as Presidio Hill, on the site of an Indian village called "Cosoy." Standing there today upon the ruins, one can well understand why this spot was chosen and cannot fail to admire the judgment which dictated the choice. It is conveniently located both as to the harbor and as to the indispensible water in the river, and it commands the valley on one hand and the shore of the bay on the other, so as to be reasonably safe from attack from either of those directions. It was easy to fortify, and it has a sightly outlook upon land and sea. The soil is deep and rich, and therefore well adapted to support the gardens and orchards which are always a part of mission establishments.

Here, in the space of little more than two weeks, rude earthworks were thrown up as the nucleus of a presidio or fort, houses that were little more than huts were hastily constructed, and the largest one set apart as the mission building. Everything was ready on the 16th of July for the dedication of the first mission on the soil of California. It was named the Mission of San Diego and the old record declares that it was built at the expense "of the Catholic monarch, Don Carlos III., King of Spain, whom God prosper, defrayed under most ample authority from his Excellency, Don Carlos Francisco de Croix, Marques de Croix, present Viceroy, Governor, and Captain-General of this New Spain, by the most illustrious Don Joseph de Galvez, the Council and Chamber of his Majesty in e royal and supreme of the Indies, Intendent the Army, and Visitador General of this New ain, by the religious of said Apostolic College, n Fernando of Mexico."

The ceremonies attending the dedication were elaborate and pompous as circumstances permitted. The military and naval officers were hand with their troops, who strove to make in dignity what they lacked in numbers. ther Serra and his priests performed their rt with the utmost reverence and solemnity, aying that they might "put to flight all the sts of hell and subject to the mild yoke of our ly faith the barbarity of the gentile Diegnos." The cross was raised, the royal standd thrown to the breeze, incense sent up from temporary altar and, from the branches of a nvenient tree, the mission bell rang out upon e stillness of the valley.

This was the true natal day of San Diego— ly 16, 1769. The life of the settlement dates om the moment. Presidio Hill, with its ouldering, tile-strewn ruins, is historic ground d should be preserved as such, forever. It the birthplace of civilization on the Pacific oast of the United States.

With the dedication of the presidio and the ission, the first institutions had been estabshed in what is now the State of California. hese institutions were typical of Spanish civiliation—the soldier and the priest working side side, but always with the sword above the ross in point of authority. It was essentially military government, and the commandant as empowered to deal out justice, civil and riminal. The San Diego garrison was always tiably weak and could never have protected e Spanish title to the country against any rious attack. In fact, the whole military tablishment along the coast, after the four istricts of San Diego, Santa Barbara, Monterey nd San Francisco had been organized, was a ere shell, with less than two hundred soldiers. here were, in addition, a few mecnanics and umerous native laborers. Each soldier had a roadsword, lance, shield, musket and pistols, gether with six horses, a colt and a mule. As ttlement increased, the carrying of the mails etween the missions was the most arduous and seful service the soldiers performed.

Father Serra and his associate minister, ather Parron, found it very difficult to make ndian converts. It was no task to assemble he natives, for they swarmed to Presidio Hill such large numbers as to become a nuisance. hey had well-developed bumps of curiosity and ere persistent beggars, but, fortunately, they ere afraid of the strangers' food. They would ave none of it, for they imagined it was the od the Spaniards ate which made so many of em sick. It is dreadful to think what would ave happened to the White men if the Indians ad liked their food as much as their cloth and inkets—they would have been eaten out of ouse and home! As it was, the Indians beame so obnoxious that trouble could not be voided. They tried to plunder the "San arlos," and it was necessary to keep a guard onstantly on board to protect the ship.

The trouble reached its acute stage August 5th, when the new settlement was a month old. was a feast-day and Father Parron was saying mass on the ship, with a guard of two oldiers. During his absence, the Indians burst nto the mission and proceeded to strip the lothing from the beds of the sick. Four soldrs rushed to repel them, but they were greeted ith a volley of arrows. A boy was killed—he as Jose Maria Vegerano, the first person of White blood to die a violent death in San Diego —and the blacksmith was wounded. Serra and is fellow-priest, Viscaino, had just finished lass and were sitting together in the hut. Visaino rose to shut the door and received an arow in the hand at the moment when the boy taggered in and fell dead at Serra's feet. The our soldiers gave the Indians a volley of usket-balls and the blacksmith fought like a emon. The Indians ran away, notwithstanding eir superior numbers, but they had the assurance to return soon and request medical aid r their wounded.

The Indians had made the acquaintance of unpowder and it did them good, for they beaved much better after that adventure. Nevertheless, the good fathers had the wisdom to erect a stockade around the mission and to make a rule forbidding the savages to come inside without first depositing their weapons. The Indians continued very neighborly, yet none embraced the faith. This does not seem remarkable in view of the fact that the missionaries could not converse with them intelligibly, having to rely wholly upon sign language at first. Even when one of their men had mastered the savage tongue sufficiently to act as interpreter, they were still unable to enroll a single neophyte. So far as known, this was absolutely the most discouraging experience the missionaries had ever had, for nearly a year had passed without one conversion. But that was not the worst of it. Converts could wait, but mouths must be fed. The supplies were dwindling, while sickness increased.

Those were gloomy days on Presidio Hill—the summer and fall of 1769—in spite of smiling sky and genial atmosphere. No converts, no progress toward cultivating the soil, no white sails on the horizon to tell of returning ships from Mexico—nothing but sickness and death and the chill portent of coming disaster. Of the forty whom Portola had left when he marched away, nineteen died before he returned, and the survivors were heartsick with the sad work of laying them in their graves. Of those who died, eight were soldiers, four sailors, six Indians and one a servant. No wonder the savages wanted none of their food!

January 24, 1770, the disheartened party of twenty souls living within the stockade on Presidio Hill was startled by a discharge of musketry. It was Portola and his men, returning from their futile search for Monterey. But they brought small comfort for Father Serra. Portola had accomplished nothing in the north; he could not see that Serra had accomplished anything in the south, and he declared that San Diego ought to be abandoned while there were yet supplies enough to enable the party to get back to civilization. Poor Junipero Serra was heartbroken at the decision. He was not a soldier of the flag, seeking to win territory for his king, but a soldier of the cross, seeking to win souls for his God. He could not abandon the Gentiles of California to the fate of the heathen, and while he acknowledged the worldly wisdom of Portola's advice, there is every reason to believe that his own private decision was to stay at every cost and, if need be, to offer his life as sacrifice on the altar of the Mission of San Diego. For Portola spoke from without, and Junipero Serra only obeyed the voice within.

Nevertheless, preparations were made for the abandonment, and March 19th was fixed as the day for the formal ending of the work which had been so auspiciously begun in the previous July. But one thing could save San Diego now—not only San Diego, but California as well, for Galvez had planned the conquest of the whole coast. This one thing was the timely return of the "San Antonio," which had been so long awaited in vain that no one now expected it—ho one, save the immortal priest. He went up o the hilltop on that fateful morning and turned is eyes to the sea as the sun rose. All day ong he watched the waste of waters as they lay here in the changing light. It was a scene of narvelous beauty, and, as he watched and rayed, Junipero Serra doubtless felt that he rew very close to the Infinite. So devout a oul, in such desperate need, facing a scene of uch nameless sublimity, could not have doubted hat somewhere just below the curve of the sea ay a ship, with God's hand pushing it on to arving San Diego. An as the sun went down he aught sight of a sail—a ghostly sail, it seemed, n the far distance. Who can ever look upon he height above the old Presidio, when the vestern sky is glowing and twilight stealing ver the hills, without seeing Father Serra on is knees, pouring out his prayer of thanksgiv-ng:

Captain Perez had made a quick trip to San Blas, but had been long delayed in his prepara-ions for returning. His orders were to proceed o Monterey, where it was supposed Portola's ien would be found in need of help, and it was he merest accident which sent him to San Diego t the last moment when his arrival could save he colony. This accident was the loss of an nchor in Santa Barbara Channel and the con-equent need of seeking a safe harbor. He had een told by the natives at Santa Barbara that he land party had passed south, but he would ave gone to Monterey, nevertheless, in accord-nce with his strict orders, except for the loss f the anchor. Thus it happened that he reached he Bay of San Diego four days after the mis-ionary had caught the first glimpse of his lessed sail.

The arrival of supplies and recruits changed he whole face of the situation. Portola thought o more of abandoning the settlement, and de-ided to renew the northern exploration and the uest for Monterey. Father Viscaino went to ower California to obtain livestock and other ecessaries. Father Serra proceeded with his ork of mission-building with a glad heart and enewed vigor.

Presidio Hill was not destined to be the per-anent seat of the mission establishment. The tory of the two or three years immediately suc-eeding the return of Captain Perez cannot be old with any fullness, since all sources of in-ormation are barren on this period, and since he early mission records were destroyed by fire, ut the fact that the mission was removed sup-lies convincing evidence that it was not pros-erous. However, some progress was made and here is good authority for the statement that n 1773 seventy-six converts had been enrolled nd some material progress made.

There was now no thought of abandoning the ettlement. It had begun to take hold both of he natives and the soil, but there were evidently mperative reasons for changing its location. One important consideration was the fact that he presence of the soldiers seriously interfered rith the work of interesting the Indians, both piritually and industrially. A removal had been uggested by Commandant Fages in 1773, but erra opposed it. Father Jaume, however, who as in charge of the mission, threw his influence n favor of the removal. He desired an atmos-here which should be wholly free from the dis-raction of the military, yet not so far removed rom the presidio as to deprive him of protec-ion. In his walks about the country he had iscovered the ideal location. In fact, it must ave suggested itself, for he had but to follow he river a few miles up the fertile valley to ee where nature pointed with unerring finger o the very place which seems to have been reated for his purpose.

Standing now among the relics of that historic ettlement, one can easily imagine the joy which ust have filled the old missionary's heart as e took in each detail of the scene and roughly utlined the work which his followers were to lo. Junipero Serra was not himself the builder f the San Diego Mission, nor did he personally rganize the work which was done there for a eriod of more than two generations. His was he genius which could conceive great projects, hen set others at work to carry them out, in-pired with his own confidence in the beneficent onsequences of the work. there was but one great leader who saw the end from the beginning. When any important work is accomplished, all who have a part in it are entitled to their share of credit; but it is the man of bold conceptions, the man endowed with the creative instinct to initiate great undertakings and to set forces in motion to secure their execution, who changes the face of his times and takes high rank in human history.

COMMERCIAL AVIATION FIELD FOR SAN DIEGO

(W. S. CARSON,
San Diego Chamber of Commerce.)

"With the rapid development of commercial aviation, as well as extension of the air mail lines, the time is not far off when every city must make provisions for handling air traffic by providing suitable landing fields. The problem has been taken up in numerous communities already and in some of these it is proving a serious one, because available sites are so far from the business center.

San Diego, long acquainted with aviation through the activities of the Federal Government, which has fields for both the army and navy here, is now taking steps to provide a place for commercial planes. As a result of investigations made by Major T. C. Macauley, a veteran in aviation, the outlook for this city having one of the best fields on the Pacific Coast is bright. Not only will provisions be ample for handling air planes equipped with landing gear, but sea planes having pontoons may find equal facilities for landing and taking off, as the field is to be located on the shores of San Diego Bay.

After considerable study of the needs of aviation and a survey of the available sites, a plot on the tidelands only a few blocks from the heart of the downtown section was found which should be admirable. There is ample space for the safe landing of any type of land plane, as well as quiet water on which seaplanes may come to rest or hop off for journeys through the air. At the same time there is direct communication with the business section, which may be reached in five minutes by automobile or ten minutes by street-car.

Some preliminary work has already been accomplished toward the preparation of the site for a landing field and under the plans mapped out the work will be completed in a few months and San Diego will offer to commercial aviation as fine and safe a field as it is possible to find anywhere on the Pacific Coast.

MILLION DOLLARS TO BE SPENT UPON CALIFORNIA FOREST ROADS.

California will receive $1,089,386 as its share of the $7,500,000 appropriated by the Federal Congress in the Department of Agriculture bill, to be expended during the fiscal year beginning July 1 in the development of roads within and immediately adjoining the national forests, according to District Forester S. B. Show of the San Francisco headquarters, United States Forest Service. Of the amount allotted the state, $681,222 will be expended in the construction of major forest highways, and $408,164 on minor roads and trails necessary for the protection and development of federal forest resources. Ten percent of the revenues from the national forests of the state, or about $100,000, will also be available for expenditure on roads and trails of the latter class. The bureau of public roads will supervise the construction on all major road projects.

California will also receive approximately $2,484,706 as its apportionment of the $73,125,000 authorized by the Post Office Appropriation Act of February 12, 1925. This fund will be expended by the State Highway Commission in the improvement of projects on the 7 percent federal aid highway system, many miles of which lie within the national forests.

Under the minor road and trail program, the forest service will construct 139 miles of simp mountain roads and 174 miles of trails duri the next fiscal year, in addition to maintaini 2,518 miles of roads and 7,004 miles of tra now in use within the national forests.

WILMINGTON'S GREAT INCREASE IN TRAFFIC

H. A. Hanson

(WILMINGTON CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.)

LOS ANGELES HARBOR, WHICH EMbraces what was formerly known as San Pedro Bay and the Port of Wilmington, was discovered in 1542 by Juan Rodriguez Cabrillo, fifty years after Columbus discovered America. The port is, therefore, one of the oldest in the United States and second only to San Diego on the Pacific Coast.

The first development of the harbor did not take place until Congress, in 1871, made an appropriation to build jetties and deepen the harbor entrance. At that time there was about eighteen inches of water at the entrance to the present main channel.

In 1896 work was started on the breakwater, which cost the Federal Government $3,100,000. Sixteen years lapsed before the task was completed. This breakwater is two miles long, two hundred feet wide at the base and twenty feet wide at the top. Since the completion of this project additional appropriations have been made by the government, until at this time a total of over nine millions of federal funds have been expended in dredging operations and other improvements.

In 1909 the cities of Wilmington and San Pedro consolidated with the City of Los Angeles and municipal funds, raised by bond issue, became available for dredging and construction of facilities for handling cargo. Since that time $23,000,000 of municipal funds have been spent to make this the best man-made harbor possible. A bond issue of $6,000,000 has been authorized for further improvements.

As a result of this vast expenditure of money there have been constructed over ten miles of modern wharves and transit sheds. The main channel is now 1,000 feet wide and at the entrance, where in 1871 it was only eighteen inches deep, we now find better than thirty feet at low tide.

While this improvement has been in progress the commerce of the port has increased until now, in the United States, it ranks second only to New York in point of all tonnage handled. In foreign commerce the port takes fifth place, but in intercoastal traffic it ranks first, exceeding in tonnage the Port of New York. Forty-four percent of the intercoastal traffic passing through the Panama Canal westbound is discharged at Los Angeles Harbor.

It was not until the end of the world war that the increase in traffic became noticeable, but when the real movement started the increase was astounding. In the fiscal year ending June 30, 1920, only 3,528,280 tons of freight were handled and only 2,886 ships called. In the six years following this traffic increased 600 percent until, in the fiscal year just closed, the records show the arrival of 6,410 ships handling a total of 21,157,846 tons of in- and outbound commerce.

Thomas R. Jones

(COMPILED EXPRESSLY FOR THE GRIZZLY BEAR.)

A REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION was held in San Francisco August 9, 1876, to nominate presidential electors, and the following were named: General John F. Miller, M. M. Estee, John B. Felton, John H. Jewett, H. J. Ostrander and D. A. McKinley. As the Democrats had put their ticket into the field, the 1876 fall political campaign in California now formally opened with vigor.

Wool production in California for the year to September 1, was 26,000,000 pounds, nearly all of which had been shipped East.

Great excitement prevailed on California street, San Francisco, August 1, due to a sudden and high rise in the prices of the Comstock mine shares. James R. Keene was the center of the disturbance and he was bidding for large blocks of stocks at increasing prices as the day passed along. This caused other brokers to follow suit. The "bears" became panicstricken and joined in the buying furore. An immense business was done, and during the next few days a half-dozen failures of brokers who were short followed, to the consternation of many investors.

The Southern Pacific opened its line south to Mojave, Kern County, August 8. The San Fernando tunnel was so nearly completed that an engine passed through August 12. At the end of the month but a fourteen-mile gap existed on the line between the two points and preparations were being made for driving the last spike during September with the usual ceremonies.

GOOD COAL VEINS UNCOVERED.

The sub-treasury in San Francisco advertised to redeem $50,000 in currency with silver at par August 10, and the announcement brought a motley crowd of investors, who began forming a line the evening before. When the redeeming began, most of those in line got left, as the fund was exhausted before they reached the cashier.

The biggest fire that had occurred in San Francisco for some years broke out August 26, in a furniture factory on the corner of Fourth and Brannan streets. It burned for several hours, destroying a dozen other factories and over fifty cottages and tenements, and rendered hundreds of people temporarily homeless. The next day, while a number of lads were investigating the ruins, a large brick chimney fell and killed two of them, George Roden and David Godalin.

Edwin Booth, the great tragedian, was to open an engagement in San Francisco and other cities during September. An auction sale of seats August 29 brought $100 each for first choice.

August 29 there were thunder showers in Sonoma and adjacent counties, much to the surprise of the oldest inhabitants.

Three veins of good coal were uncovered near Corralitis, fifteen miles from Santa Cruz City, and development work was begun upon them.

A Mrs. Meyers, claiming to be an agent for a shirt factory, was taking orders in different cities of the state. She was inveigling men to her room to take their measurements and, at an opportune moment, her husband would appear and a cash settlement, with nothing to be said about it, would be made. The couple came to grief in Napa City, where an intended victim had them arrested.

Payne Shafter and Miss Nelly Jackson were to be married in San Francisco August 28. As the bridal party were ready to depart from the bride's home the bride approached her father, Charles Jackson, to kiss him good-by, when he staggered forward and dropped dead of heart disease.

There were at this time 9,230 schoolchildren in Los Angeles, according to the census of that county.

"VACCINATION DAY."

The San Francisco Mint coined $4,696,000 during August. It was the largest month's coinage on record in the world.

To draw an audience a theater in Los Angeles distributed $25 in prizes among the audience. The money proved to be a greater attraction than the play.

Harry Senate, a perfomer in a Los Angeles theater, in turning a somersault August 1 fell and broke his neck.

A performer named Zerano fell from a trapeze in the Bella Union theater of San Francisco August 6 and broke his back, dying a few days afterward.

The fruit-growers of California held a state meeting in San Francisco this month to discuss their interests, and the shipment of fruit to Eastern markets under refrigeration was a topic discussed pro and con.

The bee-keepers of Southern California held a meeting August 9 in Los Angeles to discuss their industry.

August 2 could be termed "vaccination day" in San Francisco, for a gathering of men, women and children—at the behest of the San Francisco board of health to prevent the spread of smallpox—to the number of several thousand, extending for several blocks, surrounded the board's headquarters all the forenoon. Screaming children, weeping women and swearing men predominated. The supply of virus gave out at noon and the crowd dispersed, many being disappointed.

The epidemic of smallpox began to abate and the number of cases reported developing daily declined to less than a dozen. It slightly increased in Stockton but did not make its appearance elsewhere in the state. A woman, broken out with the desease, got aboard a streetcar in San Francisco and caused an exodus and much excitement.

R. R. Hays, riding in a phaeton with a woman on the Cliff House road near San Francisco, was stopped by two masked men and robbed of $200.

DISASTROUS EXPLOSION.

The stage from Oregon State was stopped on Siskiyou Mountain August 11 by two masked men who took the express-box, containing only $40, and many registered-mail bags, from which they obtained several thousand dollars.

A disastrous explosion occurred August 14 in the Mariposa Mining Company's tunnel in Mariposa County. Edward Hunt, M. McNally, C. Boyle, Andrew Heally and Charles Enass, miners, were killed and a number of others were injured.

Near Arbuckle, Colusa County, Dominick Durny, working on a hay bailer and thresher August 12, was thrown into a separator, feet foremost, and had both legs cut off, fatally injuring him.

Patrick Duffey, living in South San Francisco, while crossing the bridge over the Potrero road on his way home saw, floundering in the slime of the ebb tide, what he thought was a drowning hog. Reaching home his wife informed him that their 8-year-old son had not been there since morning. Returning to the bridge with misgivings, he found the body of his boy in the slime. The lad had fallen off the bridge.

Paul Fisher, a San Francisco shoemaker 23 years of age, crept, unseen, under the bed of his sweetheart August 4 and, after she had disrobed, shot himself through the heart. He went there intending to suicide.

A Emery, who had been married a week, entered the dining-room of the Etna, Siskiyou County, hotel where he and his wife were stopping and, without saying a word, shot his bride and then killed himself. No cause for the act was discovered.

Willie Malloy, a 10-year-old lad playing on the college grounds in San Francisco, fell into a cesspool and drowned August 16.

LONG BEACH SKYLINE—SIGNAL HILL IN BACKGROUND

FISHING OFF LONG BEACH

E. D. Blake

THE FAME OF LONG BEACH AS A SUMmer tourist resort and city of miracle growth in an industrial way bids fair to be eclipsed by another attraction which is bringing lovers of the rod and reel from all sections of the United States. For the game fishing season is on in full swing off the beautiful long strand of beach which gives that city its name. Yachts, small fishing dories by the hundred, launches, passenger pleasure craft and even the homely blunt-nosed tugs are churning the waters between Long Beach and Santa Catalina Island, all loaded with eager fishermen who are bringing in daily the most gigantic catches of game fish ever taken in the Long Beach sector.

Much has been written by Zane Grey and other noted fishermen about the marvelous combats waged with tuna and swordfish off "Catalina", but their viewpoint has been entirely that of the wealthy fisherman who either owns or hires a cruiser yacht for his own individual use, and they neglected to write or state that these same marvelous fish were caught almost entirely in the channel waters of Long Beach. But, such was the case. Whereas a fringe of wealthy fishermen go out from Catalina each day, the real headquarters of this fishermen's paradise is Long Beach, for there all of the passenger boats center which ply the waters, either going from the various long piers or leaving from the local harbor.

A line drawn south from Long Beach reaching out eight miles toward Catalina Island would strike the best fishing spot, known as the Horseshoe kelp bed. The waters at that point are about sixty feet deep and the flooring there of the beautiful Pacific consists of huge kelp fronds which reach from the bottom upward from ten to twenty feet. These kelp beds make ideal hiding places for the game fish, which rush forth for food into the schools of sardines or herring which extend acres wide nearly all the year around near the entrance of Long Beach Harbor. Just so long as those kelp beds exist, just so long will the game fish in their yearly migrations continue to make them their home, thus insuring the avid angler with a never-failing spot of combat.

At present, Long Beach waters are experiencing the greatest run of yellowtail known in their history. These giants of the deep arrived from Mexico early in April and have made the Horseshoe kelp their permanent camping ground. The new law which curtailed the activities of the purse-seine boats has been responsible for the yellowtails' continued presence, and thus brought joy to added thousands of fishermen. But gamy and ferocious as is the yellowtail, its prestige soon waned, for the albacore were in Long Beach waters before June had passed.

The albacore is known among fishermen as the greatest fighter of its inches in the world. It is a cousin of the tuna and although it does not grow as large, has more combat to the square inch in its beautiful body than an entire ringfull of Jack Dempseys. In addition, its meat, which is white, is called "chicken of the sea," and well does it deserve its name. Uncounted thousands of these beautiful fish arrive each year in Long Beach waters and remain in the channel between that city and Catalina Island until nearly the last of September. The tremendous forays made upon their flashing silver ranks by the market fishermen seemingly have no effect on their numbers, and year after year they return to smash rods and fuse reels and to bring aching backs and joyous hearts to those who have the courage to pursue and capture them. The albacore are the tuna of the average man, for they do not require the big money outlay to capture, which is required if the fisherman wishes to fish from Catalina Island for the big blue fin.

As an underlying strata to the yellowtail fishing, there are thousands of huge and savage barracuda rushing through the waters off the Long Beach Harbor frontage and even down as far as Huntington Beach, a nearby resort. These game fish come up the coast from Mexico in schools of uncounted thousands, driving the smaller fish before them like foam in a gale. The waters are often filled with chopped-up sardines and herring, mute proof that the barracuda have been among them. These fish are striking most readily upon the trolling boat spinners and lures, preferring seemingly the battle to the more prosaic pursuit of seeking their natural food. Barracuda weighing as much as twenty pounds are being taken as an ordinary occurrence, and they are in such numbers that they can be counted upon yearly from March to the latter part of September.

Should the fisherman tire of tussling with the yellowtail and the barracuda during the summer months, he can enjoy some magnificent bass fishing without taking the trouble to seek a different spot. The big hooks and heavy leaders are removed from hand line or rod and reel, smaller hooks and leaders are substituted, and then the bass get into their full swing. Rock- and sandbass, surfacebass, bass of every description, literally make the water boil as they rush at the small live bait used for their destruction. Each passenger, should he so desire, can catch a hundred-weight of them after "getting the knack", and they make wonderful eating. Should the fisherman desire still more sedate pursuit of the underwater denizens, there are four giant barges anchored a few miles off the Long Beach waterfront. These big barges are fitted with restaurants, rest- and eating-rooms, and tackle also is supplied for the tourist who has not yet secured his own.

Seated at ease on these big barges, the fisherman drops his line down among what is literally acres of big mackerel and barracuda. Light tackle enthusiasts get an especial thrill from this, for there is no gamer fighter for its size on very light tackle than the mackerel which, like the albacore, is a little cousin of the tuna. Whereas the albacore ranges from fifteen to fifty pounds of savage silver beauty, the mackerel on this part of the coast will range from one to five pounds. Often the ordinary variety is replaced by the succulent Spanish mackerel, which runs as high as ten pounds in weight. In addition to these fish, there are always a few bonita in the waters and their number will become legion in August and September. Thousands of tons of these game fish are being taken this season off Long Beach coast, and thousands more will be taken by the local market fishermen without perceptible diminution of their vast numbers.

The huge jewfish, or black seabass as it is properly called, is now stealing lines and walking through nets as though they were made of paper. The jewfish is one of the laziest fishes that swims the seas, but one of the most powerful. Subsisting almost entirely upon bass, mackerel and other fish weighing from one pound to three pounds, the skulking denizen lurks in the dense fronds of kelp all along the Long Beach coast. It is especially plentiful, however, on the Horseshoe and Huntington kelp beds. When it is hungry, which is often, it waits until the unwary fish swims in among the kelp. Then it is engulfed. If there happens to be a hook attached to the object seized, the jewfish first gives a surprised but mighty tug and then starts leisurely away. The real battle is on. Back and forth in a huge circle the giant bass slowly swings, its weight and strength being exerted in a most leisurely fashion. It is impossible at first to lead it by "pumping" on the pole, but its spirit is as small as its size is great and if carefully handled the fish can finally be headed for the boat where, eventually, it is gaffed and hauled inboard to make meals enough for a regiment. Jewfish weigh from fifty to one thousand pounds. Scores are brought in each summer to Long Beach piers.

The jewfish has a cousin, however, that while it runs up to fifty pounds in weight in this section, is not the slacker its black brother has become. This is the white seabass. They are now running off Long Beach shores in great numbers. From May to the end of June they first appear each year. They stay until September and strike on trolls of live bait indiscriminatingly, fighting hard against rod or reel to the last minute before they are gaffed. They add life and color to the yellowtail and albacore fishing and are not as hard to hook or land, although a sturdy armful for the amateur.

After the albacore have left for other waters in late September or early October, the all-year resident does not put away his rod and tackle as is done in Eastern ocean waters, but simply draws a long breath for the winter sport awaiting him. Three, six and nine miles off the Long Beach coast lie three huge reefs hiding deep beneath the surface of the sea. On those reefs where the bait and sea life drift the giant rockcod and the numerous members of the grouper family lurk. Their flesh is rather soft in the summer, but in the winter they are seafood supreme. From October until April they strike in great numbers on the angler's deep-sea lines. A four-pound weight with a line from four hundred to eight hundred feet long is used for such work. A dozen or more hooks are attached above the weight and then, after cut mackerel is applied for bait, the contrivance is let down to the bottom. There the rockcod and groupers leap on the bait like long-starved wolves. They really hook themselves, and kick and struggle until the angler is sure he has a line full. Then up comes the entire backbreaking load, time after time, until the boat is loaded to the gunwales. It is great sport for those who like quantity in their fishing, and wonderful eating and healthful exercise of the most strenuous sort.

Giant sharks of the non-man-eating variety enliven this kind of fishing, biting lines and leaders like cotton thread, and occasionally getting hooked and being dragged up to swift doom by means of an axe or rifle bullet through the head. Huge halibut, splace, sheephead, whitefish and other winter food fish are also taken in great numbers during these winter forays, and this fishing sport lasts until well into the spring, making a complete circuit of the months of the year when it is possible for the devotee of the rod and reel to exercise his art.

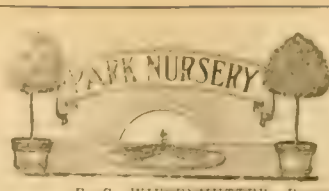
articles to the giant tuna and swordfish, the sport of kings, but it requires infinite patience and the most expensive tackle and supreme skill to land them. They are present in great numbers in the channel waters between Long Beach and Catalina and hold forth a thrilling dare to the man who would capture them. The swordfish lie on top of the waters on sunny days and wallow like giant pigs, contemptuous of boat or man or anything that swims the seas. They are confident of their own strength and fighting prowess, and well they may be. They are usually taken from the deck of a swift cruiser yacht, whereon only one man fishes at a time. The best quality reel and pole and mighty 18-strand tuna line are imperative for this work, and the boatman must have known his business from childhood.



The bait used is a flying fish wired to a giant hook on the line held by the reel and pole angler. Two other "lure lines" have flying fish wired to them and they trail astern of the vessel, while the angler keeps his own bait and line on board waiting for the proper time. When the swordfish is sighted, the boat heads around in front of it and the lure lines with bait attached are drawn in front of the fish's hungry nose. Should it notice them, the swordfish at once submerges, rising suddenly to slash at the flying fish bait with its long sword. Then it sinks back waiting to see if it has killed its prey. The angler immediately tosses over his line with bait attached, the side lure lines are drawn in and then the swordfish grabs the only bait available. Its mouth is so horny and tough that it first must "chew" the bait, working it and the giant hook way down into its throat before the angler braces himself and gives a giant tug. Then the fight is on. Five hours later the angler may bring his fish to gaff, but the chances are ten to one that the big fish will finally make its escape. It is as dangerous at all times as a maddened bulldog in a nursery and must be played accordingly.

Pier and surf fishing lasts for the six summer months at Long Beach. Long Beach's many long piers are especially favored spots. Giant spot-fins, tomcod, corbina and a host of smaller fish greet the angler hungrily when he goes after them from these piers. The surf caster hooks giant seabass and has a generally busy, happy and sealy time. Hundreds of fishermen who formerly went to Florida for a short season of fishing now make their permanent homes in Long Beach for this all-year-round fishing sport, and they are never disappointed. As long as the ocean does not dry up, their favorite sport is assured. They might even catch a whale if they so desire, for the huge mammals are often seen spouting and blowing in the channel waters. Indeed, every now and then one of them is harpooned and anchored off Long Beach for exhibition purpose. From the tiniest sea minnow to the greatest mammal that swims—they all make Long Beach their home, and great are its anglers.

Another sport which attracts hundreds to Long Beach during the flood tides and the full moons from April through September is the grunion fishing. This tidbit of the sea comes in on the breaking waves at these times, usually for three consecutive nights. They are washed up on the shore to be picked up as the water recedes, or are caught in small nets just as the waves break. The fish are about the size of smelts and make delicious food. Many grunion parties are staged during the runs and great wood fires are built on the beach and the fish cooked there.

Another fishing ground of inexhaustible scope is the water off San Clemente Island, which lies

PREPARE AUTO BEFORE STARTING TOUR

WITH EVERY INDICATION THAT motor touring, particularly long-distance traveling, will exceed all previous records in volume this year, the American Automobile Association sounds a note of warning about the importance of keeping the car fit while on tour. The time to take precautions is before the tour starts, otherwise the motorist is liable to let himself in for hurried repairs and incidental delays, which are liable to mar the tour.

The warning stresses the necessity of three preparatory precautions—a thorough cleaning of the water circulation system, the assurance that the brakes are in perfect order, and the marshalling of good rubber. The tires should be either new or in first-class condition, all cuts and abrasions having been filled with cement, and a reliable gauge to keep the pressure at a proper level should be tucked into a side pocket. A daily five-minute inspection will prove a mighty influence against tire trouble. The statement continues:

"A thorough inspection and overhauling of the car will pay handsomely in freedom from vexatious delays and breakdowns.

"Upon the lubrication will depend at least 80 percent of the car's service. Either determine definitely that the oils particularly suited to your car may be obtained enroute, or take enough with you to last until you return. The same applies somewhat to gasoline. Always insist on a reliable, dependable brand. To insure continued efficient operation, go over the grease cups and other points of lubrication before starting each day's trip.

"The wise tourist carries at least two new spare tires complete, with at least two spare tubes in waterproof and dustproof bags."

A comprehensive tool kit and a complete set of chains to prevent skidding and to help extricate the car from mud holes also are essential. The tool kit, it is suggested, might include a large monkey wrench, a small monkey wrench, two sizes of screw drivers, a set of socket wrenches, a set of open end wrenches, a pipe wrench, a machinist's hammer, a set of punches, cold and cape chisels, two sizes of files, a pair of pliers, a knife and possibly a small vise. A good jack, preferably of the long-handled variety, a powerful hand pump if the car is not equipped with a power pump, a lug wrench and a small block of wood to go under the jack in soft ground also are a part of the equipment.

"If you want to be the acme of efficiency," the statement adds, "take along a small supply of extra bolts, nuts, copper pins, wire, rubber tubing for the windshield wiper and possibly emergency repairs to the gasoline line and other small items of the kind. A set of substantial tire irons might at a critical moment prove the most valuable part of your equipment."

The new gasoline strainer and an air cleaner will increase the efficiency of the car, and some sort of light to illuminate the righthand ditch at night when passing other cars also is desirable. An extra roll of wire and electric light bulbs will not be amiss, and, if there is room for it, a bottle of distilled water for the battery will eliminate frequent stops to "give the battery a drink."

"There is one more accessory of tremendous importance," the A.A.A. concludes. "That is a large and prominent bump of commonsense. If you have that, your days a-wheel should be pleasant and untroubled, and your car will carry you there and back without complaint. But the care of the car should begin before the tour starts. If you overlook this, you overlook the best bet for successful motoring."

ACQUIRE HABIT ASKING FOR OIL BY BRAND OR TRADE NAME.

Fourteen convictions in the courts have been obtained since the state-wide drive against substitution of motor oils that has become a practice in California.

Although it would appear that motorists are being imposed upon quite generally by substitution of inferior oil when highgrade oil is paid for, the public need not become panicky, according to statements by the Automobile Club of Southern California and other organizations active in the campaign against substitution. A careful check shows that the vast majority of dealers are honest and give the public the brand requested.

One safeguard, it is suggested, is for the motorist to acquire the habit of asking for oil by its brand or trade name. Many motorists merely ask for Eastern or Western oil. The word "eastern" may describe oil produced only one mile east of the service station, and for this reason prosecution cannot be maintained, even though substitution has actually occurred.

AN IMPROVISED FUSE.

If a fuse is burned out and no spare ones on hand, wrap a piece of tinfoil around an old fuse and replace it. Be sure, however, that there is no short circuit to drain the battery or do other serious damage.

KEEP PISTON SURFACE SMOOTH.

When scraping carbon from the pistons use a putty-knife or some tool with a smooth edge. Never use emery cloth, a file or any instrument that will scratch the smooth surface of the piston. Carbon will accumulate much quicker on a rough surface.

KEEP BRAKES ADJUSTED.

Brakes should be adjusted every thirty days. If they are not equalized the result will be rattle, chatter and squeak, the wheels will lose their alignment, the treads of one or more tires will soon wear, and the frame of the car will be distorted.

GREASE HEADLIGHT RIMS.

Quite often a headlight lens is broken, or a cold chisel and hammer become necessary to remove the rusted headlight rim when necessary to replace a lamp or clean a reflector. This can be avoided easily if a little grease is rubbed on the rims the next time they are removed.

TIGHT SHACKLE, HARD RIDING.

In tightening the spring shackle bolts, care should be taken not to get them too tight. Tight shackles will make the car ride hard. They may also strain the top leaf of the spring and break the spring and shackle bolt.

BOOK REVIEWS

(MARGERY BOYD.)

"THE CONQUEST OF BRAZIL."

By Roy Nash; Harcourt, Brace & Company, Publishers, New York; Price, $5.00.

The open sesame of South America, the gem of its lofty crown,—Brazil! Ever a fascinating, live subject, economically, socially and commercially, is the history of a country, past, present and future.

Mr. Nash, in preparation for the writing of this book, traveled in every state of Brazil, except Piauhy and Goyaz, and visited Portugal. With such a background, it is no wonder that "The Conquest of Brazil" holds one enthralled in the charm of the never-ending picturesque, with the vivid presentation of the author.

The book is divided into four big sectors. Book I deals with the peopling of the country, covering the period from 1500, when Brazil was discovered by the Portuguese, to 1924. Book II, "The Essential Facts of Human Geography," is devoted to the landways and waterways, the herds, flocks and dairies, etc. Book III has as topics "Freedom in Trade," "Domestic Relations," "Education," "Co-operation" and "Health." Book IV, "Looking Ahead," discusses the great future of Brazil and the conquering of the Amazon.

Besides this splendid first-hand information, the book is illustrated with eight maps and seventy-seven illustrations. With South America our next-door neighbor, our sister-continent, assuredly knowledge of her is essential. "This book," as the author says, "is a narrative of the interaction of land and people—too much land and too few people. It is not a book of travel. . . . My field-glasses are focused upon the man on the land."

"RANCHING WITH ROOSEVELT."

By Lincoln A. Lang; J. B. Lippincott Company, Publishers, Philadelphia; Price, $4.00.

"Ranching With Roosevelt,"—the title alone is guarantee enough of good reading to follow. Add to it an intimate picture of those wild, western acres, "The Bad Lands of Dakota," peopled in the days of the late '80s by the real, true, "hell-raising" cowboys, and your expectations have promise of complete fulfillment.

Probably no one living today is better qualified to give this particular slant on Roosevelt, his private, holiday life, than Lang. He knew the Roosevelt of the out-of-doors, of the buffalo hunts and the "buck-shooting," of the round-up and the range. Fortunate, indeed, are we to have this intimate picture of one of the country's greatest men.

The pioneer days in the "Bad Lands"—God's own country, as interpreted by the writer,—the strenuous life of the open range, the fatal winter of '87, the Indian and his murderous, dare-devil cowboy—these are just some of the subjects which this "ranching" book has to tell about.

The only regrets to register are, the briefness of the autobiography (the book is, in part, autobiographical) and the appearance of these two joy-killers, unescapable villains, "The End."

"CODE OF MEN."

By Homer King Gordon; Thomas Y. Crowell Co., Publishers, New York; Price, $2.00.

If "Smiling Jim" had not played the good samaritan, all would have gone well. But we would have had no romance. As it was—and thereby hangs the tale.

Prospects were not bright at the Box L. To begin with, the Rio Guadla was the main water supply of the rancho, keeping green its grasses and watering its cattle. Therefore, if Sully Lewis, posing as an Eastern engineer, succeeded in his scheme to divert the waters of the Rio Guadla, the Box L was ruined,—unless Jim accepted Lewis' offer to buy, an altogether ridiculous supposition. And to complicate matters, there was Patricia.

In those days of hardy living, fights were looked upon as needful diversions. Nor did it take long for this one to break. Through adventures and perils, Jim "goes smilin' through," to victory, and Patricia.

The "Code of Men" is a cowboy story of the open plains. It has all the six-shooting, "cowboy stuff" of the wild west fiction. As such, it has certain appeal.

PICKLED BEETS.

Pickled beets, which contain a high proportion of vinegar, are easy to can and may be processed in the water-bath canner. For pickling, select young, tender beets of uniform size; cook and peel them, and pack in a mixture of hot vinegar and brown sugar in the containers. Process the pickled beets in the water bath for 30 minutes. Beets canned without vinegar should be processed in the steam-pressure canner at 240° F. for 40 minutes if packed in quart glass jars, or for 35 minutes if in pint glass jars or No. 2 and No. 3 tin cans.

California's Population—The State Board of Education estimates the present population of California as 4,827,728, being the estimate on the elementary schools' enrollment, 704,332. The census of 1920 gave the state a population of 3,426,861 and at that time the elementary schools' enrollment was 500,357.

Canned Fruit Sauce—Gooseberries, plums, rhubarb and apples may be cooked as sauce with sugar and then canned while boiling hot. They need only 5 minutes' processing in a water bath.

Egg Day—The annual egg day celebration of Petaluma, Sonoma County, will be among the August attractions.

SAN FRANCISCO

THE BIG CITY  THAT KNOWS HOW

THIRTY MILLIONS IN NEW SAN FRANCISCO BUILDINGS

THERE ARE FEW PLACES IN SAN Francisco that are not associated in one way or another with the romance and traditions of the Pioneers, says "San Francisco Business" for July, and though it may be difficult at times to connect these great modern monuments of concrete and steel with those hard-fisted souls of the roaring forties, it can be done if you but find the thread that holds the present to the past. Mr. Peters found it by asking questions.

That night, in a court room of his small hotel, long after mother and the children had turned their tired faces to the wall, Peters pounded his little portable. He was writing the first of a series of monthly letters to the 'Daily Trombone' back home, and working fast to crowd into it all of the things he had learned during the day ere they would be shunted out of his mind by wonders yet to come.

At last he collapsed the little machine into its case and stretched the kinks out of his aching back. A morning cable car rattled by and the young Peterses leaped from their beds, ready for another day. Here is Peters' story:

"Today I saw $30,000,000 worth of buildings going up at once. And I didn't see everything. I saw one that will cost $5,000,000 occupying a piece of ground that was bought for $12.50. It will be thirty stories high when it's finished. That's the Russ building.

"Away back in 1847 Adolph Gustav Russ came to San Francisco in a sailing transport called the 'Loo Choo.' She was a little vessel of some 600 tons, and the first thing Russ did when he landed here was to buy this piece of land on Montgomery street. Then he went back to the ship and bought the cabin. I think the cabin must have cost him more than the property. Anyway, he chopped it down and brought it ashore, and with its wood he built his home. It was the first Russ house. He lived in it with his sons until 1862. The boys used to shoot rabbits where this new $5,000,000 building is now going up.

"In 1862 Russ tore down his home and built the finest hotel in town. It was the original Russ house, and stood until the fire of 1906. I found out by asking one of the foremen that the new building will rise 418 feet from the sidewalk and will have a floor area of 350,000 square feet. It was begun in January 1926 and will be finished November 1, 1927. They certainly do work fast here, once they start.

"Just a block from the Russ building is another, almost as large, that will be finished about the same time. It is the Hunter-Dulin building, twenty-two stories and $3,500,000.

"The history of this property is almost as interesting as the story about old Mr. Russ. The famous Lick house, which boasted the finest hotel dining-room in the world, used to be where the Hunter-Dulin building is now going up. It was built in 1862 by James Lick, one of the most colorful figures in San Francisco's early history.

"Lick came to California from Lima, Peru, in January 1848. He arrived in San Francisco just seventeen days before James Marshall found a chispa of gold in the sluice-box of a mill at Coloma. News traveled slowly in those days and it took weeks for the cry of 'gold, gold,' to reach the ears of San Franciscans and then it was heard but faintly. May was half over before the real rush began, and the cry of 'gold' rose to a shout.

"James Lick tramped over San Francisco, choosing the lots he desired. Within a year he was the largest landowner in the city, and among his many purchases was an adobe house on the northeast corner of Jackson and Montgomery streets. He got the house and the 50-vara lot upon which it stood for $3,000. This was an unheard-of sum, and the most he paid for any of his holdings.

"But to come back to this Hunter-Dulin building. It is being erected on the site of the old Lick house, a fitting monument to the romance of a fine old landmark that was known around the world.

"Just a couple of blocks north on Montgomery street you come upon the towering skeleton of the Financial Center building. Fifteen stories of steel and a floor area of 90,000 square feet. It will cost $2,000,000. Just a few months ago the old Parrott building, made of stone shipped here from China, was torn down to make room for this new giant.

"Take a walk up California street a few blocks and you will come upon a hotel that some day will be the daddy of them all. It's the Mark Hopkins hotel, and will cost $4,200,000.

"That, too, has its romantic background and occupies the site of the famous old Hopkins home on Nob Hill. Wherever one goes one runs into a new building, and generally it has an interesting story back of it. The Mark Hopkins hotel is nineteen stories high.

"I can't help thinking that some of the things we read back home concerning San Francisco are entirely wrong. If you were out here with me you'd know what I mean. You've printed many yarns yourself about strikes and fogs and cold winds and other things that are undesirable. Strangely, I haven't seen any of them yet, with the exception of the carpenter's strike, which really does exist. But I find that it is very far short of being a building tie-up, and you'd understand what I mean if you could hear some of this hammering.

"One of the most interesting buildings now nearing completion is the $2,000,000 Apparel Center building on Fourth street just south of Market. The San Francisco Chamber of Commerce is in a measure responsible for it, and when completed it will house the Federation of Apparel Manufacturers. Then there's the new $1,000,000 hotel, sixteen stories, going up at Market and Ninth, and the half-million-dollar Insurance building at Pine and Sansome. That will be fifteen stories.

"Down on the Embarcadero they're working on the Army and Navy Y. M. C. A., eight stories and a tower, costing $900,000. At Market and Hayes the New Capitol theatre will cost $2,000,000 and will seat forty-eight hundred. Just a few blocks farther along Market they're working on a $300,000 seven-story hotel. In the Italian quarter I saw another new theatre which will cost $200,000. It will seat eighteen hundred.

"You don't have to stay in the business section to see new buildings. At Geary and Eleventh avenue they're hammering on a six-story, $200,000 hotel. That's quite a way out. But you can go still farther west and run into whole blocks of pretty little new homes, and many big ones.

"They call it a building program. It is. All of that. The $30,000,000 I mentioned at the beginning of this article referred only to the business buildings. I can't estimate the homes, for there are too many of them. But take it from me, it's some program."

NATIVES ARRANGING TO CELEBRATE CALIFORNIA'S NATAL DAY.

San Francisco's Native Sons have organized a joint committee to stimulate interest in the Admission Day festival at Sacramento and to cooperate with the Capital City Natives in making the September 9 celebration a huge success. Every Subordinate Parlor is represented on this committee, and every one of them will participate in the Sacramento Admission Day parade.

Officers of the joint committee are: Eugene O'Donnell (Dolores 208), chairman; Joseph Rose (Marshall 202) and George H. Barron (Precita 187), vice-chairmen; Harry C. McKnew and Frank Soracco (Pacific 10) were named a committee to urge participation in the celebration by the Native Daughters. The latter agreed to do so, and all the Subordinate Parlors of that Order were represented in the joint committee July 23.

Representatives of the Sacramento Natives' Admission Day Committee—Grand Trustee John T. Skelton, the chairman, Albert W. Katzenstein (Sutter Fort 241), the general secrteary, and Walton Holmes (Sunset 26)—were in attendance at the July 16 meeting of the joint San Francisco committee. They stated that, from advices already received, the celebration promises to be one of the largest ever held on the state's natal day.

PAST PRESIDENTS INSTALL.

At a joint installation of the officers of San Francisco Assembly No. 1 Past Presidents' Association N.S.G.W. and Past Presidents' Association No. 1 N.D.G.W. of San Francisco, Walter L. Stobing became the governor of the former and his wife the president of the latter.

The ceremonies were followed by a musical program, refreshments and dancing. The occasion proved an enjoyable one.

THREE GENERATIONS.

D.D.G.P. Gabrielle Sandersfeld, assisted by members of Castro Parlor, installed the officers of Sans Souci Parlor No. 96 N.D.G.W., Gertrude J. Fisher becoming president. Gifts were exchanged and refreshments served.

Three generations of one family are represented among Sans Souci's membership: Recording Secretary Minnie F. Dobbin, her daughter, Jessie M. Crowley, and her granddaughter, Gertrude J. Fisher; also, an aunt of Mrs. Crowley, Miss G. J. Perry. All are past presidents of the Parlor.

RECEPTION FOR N.D. GRAND OFFICER.

Portola Parlor No. 172 N.D.G.W. featured a reception July 6 in honor of its popular member, Mae Himes-Noonan, elected Grand Vice-president at the Sacramento Grand Parlor in June. She was met by the Parlor's drill-team and escorted to the meeting hall, where 163 members and grand officers of San Francisco and Alameda County had assembled to greet her.

Mrs. Noonan was presented, by the Parlor, with a morocco leather-case, Marguerite and Peggy Hogan singing "This Is the End of Our Perfect Day" just before the presentation address. An elaborate feast was served in the profusely-decorated banquet-hall and a splendid entertainment was enjoyed. A tea in honor of Grand Vice-president Noonan will be given August 7.

N.D. GRAND TRUSTEE FETED.

On her return from the Sacramento Grand Parlor, where she was elected a Grand Trustee, Castro Parlor No. 178 N.D.G.W. gave a reception in honor of Mae L. Edwards. Secretary Gabrielle Sandersfeld, on the Parlor's behalf, presented her with a beautiful silver-and-glass flower-bowl. Dainty refreshments were served.

SOUTH BOYS' DOINGS.

Officers of South San Francisco Parlor No. 157 N.S.G.W. were installed July 7 by D.D.G.P. I. M. Peckham, Robert Hoare becoming president. A banquet followed the ceremonies.

Grand Secretary John T. Regan, recording secretary of 157, was the toastmaster and those who responded to his call were: D.D.G.P. Peckham who, on the Parlor's behalf, presented a handsome gold emblem to Harold J. Regan for services rendered; Grand Treasurer John E. McDougald (California 1), Judge Harold Lauderbach (Pacific 10), Judge James G. Conlon (Stanford 76), Past Grand President Frank H. Dunne, Judge Joseph Golden (Pacific 10), State Senator Thomas Maloney (South San Francisco 157), A.

S. Elgnori (Redwood 66) and Historiographer Roy W. Cloud.

The latter was the principal speaker of the evening, and took for his text the Broderick-Terry duel, the last legally fought duel in California, and the San Francisco Vigilantes. His half hour address was one of the most interesting delivered in the Parlor for many years.

July 14, 1857 was honored by visits from Past Grand President Clarence E. Jarvis and State Superintendent of Public Instruction Will C. Wood (Halcyon 146). Jarvis, originally a charter member of South, told of the Parlor's early struggles; in time he moved to Amador County and transferred to Amador Parlor No. 17 at Sutter Creek. Wood, in the course of a splendid talk, outlined what is being accomplished along history lines in the schools of the state. The large number of members in attendance thoroughly enjoyed the visits of these two prominent Native Sons.

TWENTY INITIATED.

Officers of Dolores Parlor No. 208 N.S.G.W. were installed July 20, Eugene H. O'Donnell becoming president. The committee in charge prepared a most excellent program, commencing with a pre-installation dinner at 6:30 p.m.

President-elect O'Donnell was the toastmaster, and those at the speaker's table were: Grand President Hilliard E. Welch, Junior Past Grand President Fletcher A. Cutler, Grand Second Vice-president James A. Wilson; Grand Third Vice-president Charles L. Dodge and Grand Trustee Alfred H. McKnew.

After the dinner a class of twenty candidates were initiated by the newly-elected officers. Following the initiation, came the installation by D.D.G.P. I. M. Peckham. The remainder of the evening was given over to entertainment features consisting of several musical numbers and the "side degree" of the "Royal Order of Incos," which was portrayed by the members of Alcalde Parlor.

YESTERDAY AND TODAY.
(Adolph Feldblum.)

In days of old, ere Volstead's time,
The flowing bowl was not a crime,
And jollity and mirth no sin;
The wit came out as wine went in,
And loud proclaimed each sparkling glass,
In vino veritas!

But now no ruddy goblet's seen,
Where diners sit with guilty mien
And sidelong glances, as they sip
Concoctions strange to cup and lip;
While furtive waiters slyly pass,
In vino demitasse.

CO-OPERATIVE SPIRIT MONUMENT

Harry Barratt

(ASSISTANT SECRETARY, HOLLYWOOD CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.)

RAISED AS A MONUMENT TO THAT spirit of co-operative enterprise which has made Hollywood the "place where dreams come true," the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce building, on Sunset boulevard at the foot of Hudson avenue, has been formally dedicated to chamber and community service.

Responding to an invitation extended by Frank K. Galloway, president of the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce, three hundred friends of the chamber, including city, county, state and federal executives, attended a banquet the night of July 13, which served the purpose of opening a dedication period extending until late the following night. The banquet was the first official function of the kind held in the auditorium of the new building, a room which, for entertainment purposes, can be made to accommodate some 400 persons.

The new chamber executive headquarters building was erected through the determined will of Hollywood people who firmly believe in a "Greater Hollywood" and who, through the four years of its existence, have staunchly supported the chamber in all of its programs of effort for a bigger and more important community. It is a gem of architecture and of appealing design as to the exterior, the interior being equally beautiful, well arranged and in all manner appropriate to the uses of the chamber and the community.

The facade, an attractive and almost fascinating bit of masonry, rises out of a broad sweep of landscape adornment, and presents a striking appearance as it is approached from Hudson avenue on the north. Inside are found well-arranged executive quarters in a setting of architectural grace and beauty. At the extreme rear of the first floor, approached through a spacious lobby, is the community auditorium, in which may be held community gatherings of festive or forum character. In this room will be presented daily motion-pictures showing the beauties of Hollywood and "the making of the movies."

The latter display is designed to fill a need among tourists and other visitors in Hollywood who, disappointed because of the ban established against visitors in studios, carry away with them a feeling of acrimony toward a community which, for obvious reasons, cannot entertain them inside its most important and outstanding industrial feature. In addition, it is the purpose of chamber executives to show scenes tending to demonstrate the industrial, commercial, residential and scenic development of Hollywood as a whole. It is believed that through this medium the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce can be of infinite value in not only attracting the attention of visitors and developing a kindly feeling toward the community, but can impress the stranger by the hospitality on which the plan of entertainment is based.

The upper floor, which covers only one-third of the entire building, is separated into a room for general assemblies, projection, check and women's lounge departments. In the general assembly hall a salon of art has been established for the display of examples of various works by local artists, both canvases and sculpture, as well as other lines of artistic endeavor produced by experts who maintain their studios in Hollywood.

The entire effect of the building interior is enhanced in arrangement lighting and wall color effects, the whole structure standing forth as a tribute to the people of Hollywood who made the edifice possible through financial support, campaign activities and in contributions of labor, materials and furnishings.

The Hollywood Chamber of Commerce administration building was erected by a fund derived through the disposal of life memberships, for which a charge of $250 was made. The campaign was carried on by service and other civic and community organizations and clubs. Those participating in the drive were: Advertising Club, Business Women's Club, Exchange Club, Kiwanis Club, Lions Club, Optimists Club, Rotary Club, Velada Club and Round Table Club. Each was assigned membership certificates to the number of one-half its enrollment, most of the participating organizations disposing of all their assignments, some doing better than that. A trophy offered as a guerdon for the best work performed, was won by the Rotary Club.

To the board of directors of 1925 goes the honor for creating plans and starting work in the construction of the new Hollywool Chamber of Commerce executive building, although the work was not completed until 1926.

It was under this regime that a building committee was named, a committee which has had charge of directing the job from its inception. The building board of directors was composed of the following: George H. Coffin, president; Frank K. Galloway, vice-president; George A. Green, vice-president; Sam Kress, treasurer; Gilbert H. Beesemyer, Charles A. Best, G. G. Detzer, Geo. L. Eastman, Parker V. Foster, William S. Holman, P. A. BeHannesey, Mrs. Burdette H. Norton, M. F. Palmer, Herbert L. Scholfield, Rodney S. Sprigg. ## THE HISTORIC "SERRA TREE"

LOVERS OF CALIFORNIANA SHOULD BE interested in a recent acquisition by the Carthay Circle theater, at Carthay Center, Los Angeles, of a piece of the limb of a tree which for hundreds of years stood at the entrance to the Bay of Monterey. So romantic is the history of this oak that John Steven McGroarty in his "California," under the chapter devoted to Monterey, writes of it as follows:

"In 1602 Sebastian Vizcaino anchored his ships in the harbor, naming it in honor of his patron, Gasper de Zuniga, Compt de Monterey, then the viceroy of Mexico. Under an oak tree that stood at the head of a little cove in the bay the priests of Vizcaino's expedition reared a cross and sang the mass, then sailed away, leaving the spot to its ancient silences. For 168 years the foot of no civilized man came again to Monterey. At last, however, on May 31, 1770, the good ship 'San Antonio,' commanded by Captain Juan Perez, anchored in the bright harbor.

"The ceremony of taking possession of Monterey for Spain on June 3, 1770, took place under the same oak tree where Sebastian Vizcaino had camped and erected a cross 168 years before, namely, in the year 1602. There are trees in many parts of the world that have histories, but none has a story more fascinating than this tree, now called the 'Serra Tree.' It was a magnificent specimen of the live-oak for which Monterey is still famed, as, let us hope, it will ever be. It grew at the end of a little cove or estuary of the bay at the present entrance to the presidio. In its place is a costly, handsome and well-meaning granite cross, erected by a generous-hearted lover of Monterey and its past. But how a lifeless stone can take the place of a living tree, it were hard to say.

"In the tumble and wreck and ruin of once great days there came to Monterey some who neither understood nor revered the past and its mighty memories. They built a culvert around the old tree, walling it with stone that yet did not keep from it the seeds of death. And so, one day, a patriarch of a noble tribe withered and died and became an eyesore on the ancient highway. Then when the man came along with the stone cross, the tree was ruthlessly torn out and flung heedlessly—and with what ingratitude only the spirits of the dead can know—into the waters of the bay.

"But just as the thievish tides were about to run away with the grand old trunk, still mighty in death, carrying it to a hungry and engulfing sea, two men of Monterey put out upon a scow and fought with the tides for the precious burden. With grappling hooks, and after a heroic struggle, the dead patriarch was brought to shore and carried in a cart to the royal chapel of San Carlos in the town. There it was embedded in cement and treated to a chemical process of bathing that will cause it to last as long as time itself."

This relic will occupy an honored place among other things of like character in the Carthay Circle theatre. One of romantic nature, a lover of the past, can stand before this memorial, so emblematic of the days of long ago, and through no difficult feat of the imagination picture old Monterey as it was in its days of glory. A central throne as it were to which came the wit, the wealth and the beauty of the entire country that lay between San Francisco and San Diego.

Though long since gone, and practically forgotten by the present generation, there still remains in the minds of those who love California loving memories of the days so expressively and so simply pictured in the small piece of the "Serra Tree," which rests below the painting, "The Capture of Monterey Bay by Commodore Sloat," in the Carthay Circle theatre. All honor and thanks to J. Harvey McCarthy, affiliated with Ramona Parlor No. 109 N.S.G.W., in the noble work he is doing.

ADMISSION DAY.

Admission Day, September 9, will be observed in Los Angeles by marking with an imposing monument the site, now a part of the Union Stock Yards Company's holdings, where the battle of La Mesa was fought January 9, 1847, between American forces, commanded by Commodore Stockton, and the "Californians," under General Flores.

mulberries, and 17,000 rose plants of over eighty varieties. Prevost was the first man to seriously attempt the introduction of the silkworm into California. The vineyard of Mr. Delmas was next visited. He was specializing on foreign grapes, most of which had come from Europe by way of Cape Horn.

PRAISE FOR MOTHER LODE COUNTIES.

The seed garden of J. Morse, later to become the largest seed garden in the world, received the shortest notice of any of the Santa Clara nurseries: "He exhibits some remarkable specimens of rapid vegetable growth. His vines, roses and fruit trees were all looking very finely." B. F. Fox nurseries had 31,000 trees on its six acres, and 5,000 roses of eighty varieties. F. G. Appleton, Thos. Fallon, C. Bertice and Carey Peebles were visited, in turn, all receiving the highest praise.

The famous Lick flouring mills had been finished but a short time. "It is the most superb and the most costly flouring-mill in the world," said the report, "costing over a half a million dollars. The mills and granaries are of stone and brick, two stories high, and every part is finished in as highly ornamental manner as possible; white oak, maple and mahogany are freely used for doors, railings, stair rails and posts, with the fastenings, bolts and clasps of polished silver, copper and brass. It was commenced in 1852 by James Lick." James Lick was severely criticised at the time by some radical social reformers for wasting money on fancy woods for the mill; today his name is known the world over as one of California's greatest benefactors, while the names of his critics have long since been forgotten. Smith & Winchell had some 125,000 trees in their nursery, besides great numbers of small fruits and berries.

From San Jose the jury went to Mission San Jose, in Alameda County, to the Beard & Lewelling orchards. They had 44,000 trees in the nursery and 8,440 trees in the orchard. Part of these grounds are now what is known as the Henry Lachman place at Mission San Jose, one of the show places of California, and where thousands of Native Sons have been entertained by Henry Lachman during the later years of his life.

In Napa Valley the jury went to the farm of J. W. Osborne, with its 10,000 trees in the orchard and 15,000 more in the nursery, then on to call on George C. Yount, that hardy old pioneer who had, even at that time, done so much for California. Yount owned 13,000 acres, with a vineyard and orchard planted in 1848. One pear tree measured four feet three inches in circumference. Yount had his own flouring-mill and raised his own grain.

J. B. Childs' stock ranch came next, then Wells Kilburn, thirty miles from Napa, then Wm. Nash's vineyard, then the F. E. Kellogg place with the prize apple orchard. Ex-Governor Boggs, who was raising seventy bushels of barley to the acre, was doing well with his 600 acres.

Ione Valley, Amador County, came in for very generous praise. Forty acres of broom-corn was growing, with an estimated profit of a thousand dollars an acre. Oats on the Q ranch was running seventy-five bushels to the acre, while the watermelon crop that year netted over $16,000 from two acres.

Los Angeles was next, with the vineyard of William Wolfskill first on the list. Over 45,000 vines were in full bearing, yielding some twelve pounds to the vine, most of the product going to the San Francisco market. His orchard was highly praised, as well as his onions, that grew to a four-pound mark. The wineries of the south were not passed by, according to the high praises sung of them by the jury. Sansevain Bros. apparently having been generous hosts.

Don Manuel Requena, who had taken several prizes at the 1855 Fair, entertained the jury on his eight acres right in the center of the City of Los Angeles, then of some 4,000 people. The good don had hopes that some day his property would increase in value as the demand for fruit and vegetables increased. Just how many millions this particular piece of ground is now worth can only be guessed at.

The H. C. Cardwell garden contained 586 trees at that time, with 15,000 more in the nursery. Antonia Salazar was then making most of his profit from sugar-cane. The jury went over to the plant of the Pacific Salt Works, north of San Pedro, then the largest salt works in the state. On the way, stopped at the Asphaltum Springs, later to become world famous as the last resting place of the sabre-toothed tiger. At this time the asphaltum was being used locally for roofing purposes.

August 28 the committee visited Mission San Fernando, "now in possession of Don Andres Pico. There are two gardens attached to this mission both walled in with a high adobe wall, the south one, twenty-seven years old with twenty-three acres, and the north one, forty-five years old, with thirty-one acres. The two enclosures together contain 40,000 vines, 100 heavily laden pomegranate trees, 200 peach, 300 pear, 10 apricot, 9 orange, 2 black walnut, 5 cherry and 22 fig trees. The place is remarkable for its 400 large olive trees. Here we saw seven palm trees, one of them twenty-seven years old. A two-year-old grizzly bear having been caught in the barley field the night before we arrived, we found the natives belonging to the establishment amusing themselves by tying the fore leg of a bullock to the hind leg of the bear. We were faring sumptuously at the table of the good don while the sundry toasts and huggings were going on, but were informed just before leaving the table, that his bearship had taken just one horn too much and had died from the effect of an extemporary bowel complaint." The committee discovered that the Nopal, or prickly pear, produced excellent brandy, and praised the fruit for being good for food, for drinking and for an impassable hedge.

"Saturday, August 30," says the report of the jury, "passed through Mission San Gabriel. The gardens and vineyards are in a sadly neglected condition; some are in utter ruins, and used as pasturage for cows . . . At Monte we found that F. P. F. Temple's ranch contained 35,000 acres, and that he was experimenting with sugar-cane and tobacco, both of which were growing fine. At the farm of Mr. Rhebottom we found pumpkins growing that were already seven feet around . . . John Rowland had a vineyard with 15,000 vines, several pineapple plants as well as a large orchard . . . at F. W. Gibson's place at Monte we saw some cotton planted less than an acre." That "less than an acre" has developed into the modest sum of $44,000,000 cash, returned to the cotton-growers of California in 1925. In the two valleys near Los Angeles the committee found some 999,000 grapevines in bearing, and deplored that there

ISIDORE B. DOCKWEILER

Candidate for United States Senator on the Democratic Ticket

Isidore B. Dockweiler was born in Los Angeles, December 28th, 1867, and has lived in California and Los Angeles all his life. His father, Henry Dockweiler, emigrated to America from Bavaria when fourteen years of age, and his mother was an Alsatian by birth.

Mr. Dockweiler was educated at St. Vincent's College at Los Angeles and was admitted to the Bar of California in 1889 and later to the Federal Courts of California and the United States Supreme Court. He is also a member of the Bars of Arizona and Nevada.

Mr. Dockweiler has long been recognized as a leader in the Democratic Party in California. He has been a member of the Democratic National Committee since 1916 and is now a member of its Executive Committee. He was a candidate for Lieutenant-Governor of California on the Democratic ticket in 1902, when the late Franklin K. Lane ran for Governor. By appointment of President Woodrow Wilson he served as a member of the Board of Indian Commissioners from December 1913 to 1920, when he resigned.

ISIDORE B. DOCKWEILER

Mr. Dockweiler served as Trustee of the State Normal School at San Diego from 1898 to 1919. From 1897 to 1911, with the exception of one term, he was a Director of the Los Angeles Public Library and part of the time served as President of the Board.

Mr. Dockweiler was one of the original organizers in Los Angeles of Ramona Parlor No. 109, the first Native Son Parlor organized in Southern California, and has ever since been a member and today holds a life membership in Ramona Parlor. He has always taken an active part in Native Son work.

In June 1891 Mr. Dockweiler married Miss Gertrude Reeve, and they have eleven children, eight native sons and three native daughters.

Mr. Dockweiler is a member of the Los Angeles County, California and American Bar Associations, the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, the California, Los Angeles Country and Newman Clubs, and is affiliated with the Elks and the Knights of Columbus.

Mr. Dockweiler is senior member of the law firm of Dockweiler & Dockweiler & Finch, Los Angeles.

was no railroad connecting with San Francisco, "as that is the one source of demand."

This gives one some idea of the development of the most favored communities at that time. Now, listen to this, just four years later, when this committee visited some of the great Mother Lode counties, where the average citizen believes nothing but gold was ever produced; the year is 1858:

"At, and in the vicinity of, Columbia, Shaw's Flat and Sonora [Tuolumne County], there are more evidences of horticultural enterprises and a settled home life than at any other point in the southern mines. Highly-cultivated gardens, extensive orchards and heavily-laden vineyards with a large yield of the finest fruits show the power of the soil, and a science and taste in its culture rarely met with even in the rich alluvial valleys.

"Coloma [El Dorado County], where gold was first discovered, may well be called the horticultural garden of California. Indeed, it is impossible to conceive fruits more perfect than those that are found in this locality. No description can do justice to these beautiful orchards. Every lover of horticulture should see these Coloma orchards in bearing, though it may cost a trip of 500 miles by horse and stage.

"In the fine little valley skirting Illinoistown, Placer County, we found E. T. Mendenhall, who wagoned the first apple trees from Oregon to Mr. Lewellen. In the early '50s Mendenhall selected this romantic and beautiful spot for an orchard of apple trees, which have grown wonderfully well, and he has been very successful with them. We find that in the Auburn locality the fruits do exceptionally well, the trees growing at an enormous rate and producing excellent fruit."

THE 1926 STATE FAIR.

There are reports of later visits that show a progressive growth each year of astonishing proportions. Then, one day, a reformist joined the society. He objected to this, he objected to that; he felt that the visiting committee was enjoying itself at the expense of the society. As a matter of fact, they had never received a cent but bare expenses, and had freely given of their time. The reformist had never done anything for the society; he never did afterwards, but the committee resigned, no one wanted the job under those conditions, unless it was the reformist, and he didn't get it. Thus, what would have proven a very valuable continuous record of progress was lost to the state.

Now, a word as to what is to be done this year at the State Fair. It is too early to forecast the program, other than that the opening day will be editors' day, and that on Admission Day, September 9, the Native Sons and Native Daughters of California will hold their annual celebration in Sacramento, beginning with a grand parade downtown in the forenoon and special exercises at the Fair that afternoon and evening, with fireworks specially designed for that day. These will be unique and original and of historic interest. The Order of Native Sons is to make a presentation of large American and State (Bear) Flags to the State Fair Board of Managers. Featured that day will be chariot, relay and horse races, with the horse show in the evening.

That morning, at Sutter's Fort, will be opened the new "Days of Forty-nine Museum," with the Native Sons and Native Daughters uniting with the famous Whiskerino Club in a special program that will take the visitor back into the atmosphere of the old mining days.

September 10 the California Development Board will hold their regional meeting at the Fair, while the 11th will be farm bureau day as well as Rotary day. One of the features this year, of particular historical interest, is the exhibit now being assembled by The Tractor and Implement Club of California. They are going to give special prizes for the oldest plows with the most romantic history, and intend showing the evolution of the plow from the most primitive model down to the very latest tractor type.

This year's Fair will be larger and greater than ever. The exhibitors of last year are already asking for greatly increased floorspace. The horse show will be on a grander scale than ever. The new grandstand, seating over 7,000, will be ready and the bleachers have been moved to a better location. The amusement features will contain many new stunts, while every convenience possible is being arranged for the general public's welfare.

Historical films of the Sacramento forty-nine celebration of a few years ago will be run that week in all the local show houses.

The hotel accommodations are now ample to handle a large crowd, while the various camp grounds can take good care of those carrying their own camping equipment.

The California State Fair may well be called the Grand Terminal Union Station for the best ideas, the best methods, the best mechanical devices, and the highest type of development of the art of horticulture and home making. It welcomes all classes, it caters to all requirements. It gives the child a comprehensive grasp of the world's progress as nothing else can. It teaches, through the eye, the most effective of all teaching methods. Seeing is believing; to see, one must come.
